The best known way of destroying Catarrh germs is to breathe into the air passages of your nose and throat and lungs the pleasant, penetrating air of Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me). Hyomei is made from purest oil Eucalyptus combined with other powerful, healing, antiseptic and germicidal ingredients. You breathe it through a little pocket inhaler which H. A. Wright & Son and other leading druggists in Tecumseh, Mich. and vicinity are furnishing with every complete treatment sold. Every time you inhale the sweet, fragrant air of Hyomei through this little device you are drawing into your swollen, inflamed, germ laden membranes a medicated air which will not only reduce all the swelling and inflammation and open your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages, but will absolutely and positively destroy every trace of Catarrh germ life it reaches. Druggists are so sure of the blessed, lasting relief that Hyomei brings to catarrh sufferers that they sell it invariably on the positive guarantee that money paid will be refunded if successful results are not secured from its use. advt

The Art of Milking.

If possible the same person should milk a cow always. They should be gentle and considerate of the cows, never going about the milking in a rough manner. A dairy cow is of a very nervous disposition, and the loud, boisterous person will never make a successful milker.

A person should have reasonably strong hands to milk well. A child should never be allowed to milk, as there is not enough strength in his hands to excite the cow's nerves till she lets the milk flow freely. It is a good practice to rub the teats and udder well before beginning to milk.

Feeding Hay on Pasture.

The feeding of some dry feed when cows are on grass is generally held to be beneficial. Hay is invariably recommended to counteract the laxative effect of grass, and it prevents the animal, especially early in the spring, from severe purging. Corn is a good supplement to pasture, but it would be better if it could be fed in connection with some hay. If only one kind of dry feed is fed prefer the hay to the corn.

Age to Breed a Bull.

A bull may be used for light service when he is ten or eleven months old, but it is better to wait until he is at least a year old or until he is a little more developed if it can be done without inconvenience.—Hoard's Dairyman.

SAN-YAK

is the greatest rectifier for the blood and skin yet known. Greasy skin with pimples, blotches, eruptions or scrofula easily cleared away. Its use leaves the blood and skin as pure as the lillies. SAN-JAK for the stomach, nerves and blood is the best the world ever saw. SAN-JAK prevents the excessive flow of poison of fluid into the blood from the super renal glands near the kidneys, causing the arteries to harden in the years past 50. This preventative keeps the arteries soft and flexible, giving flexibility to the muscles as in youth.

You can feel well and active at any age from 60 to 90 years. Man should die from old age, not from diseased tissue. Mothers and daughters can avoid many dangerous operations by the use of this wonderful medicine. The use of SAN-JAK for pain in the back and abdomen greatly lessens the danger of appendicitis. $1.00 per bottle. Get SAN-JAK at

LIZZIE'S LETTER TO MOTHER:

Dear Mother:—

Awful sorry you are not well. Of course I'll come home if you really think I ought to, but I've got a dandy job and do hate to give it up. I believe it's those everlasting washings that are tiring you all out. Goodness, how my back used to ache over those old tubs!

The lady I board with has something new; it's a power washing machine. She gets her washing out long before the neighbors, never has to boil the clothes, and the wringer turns itself (honest it does.) Her husband helps fill the tubs, she starts the machine and goes ahead with the other work and you'd be surprised how white her clothes are.

I just wish you would have father go to Temple's and see if he won't let you have a machine like that for to try for two washings anyway. I believe Temple would do it for father, buys so much of him and he is always ready to accomodate us. After you try it if you don't feel better I'll throw up my job and come home.

With love to everybody, just the same old Lizzie.

In consideration of the foregoing estimates the Board of Education recommends that there be raised by taxation upon the taxable property of this district as follows:

For teachers' wages	$6500 00
For General funds	2000 00
For Library fund	800 00

The Board also recommends that the ensuing school year shall start on September the sixth and shall consist of 38 weeks and that tuition for foreign pupils shall remain as heretofore viz: High School $20 00, grammar grades $16 00 and primary to 4th grades, inclusive $12 00.

It is the hope and wish of our board that some step in advance be made each year in our school work. In keeping abreast with the trend of modern thought in school matters the board has at the suggestion of our superintendent planned to add to the school curriculum a two years commercial or business course.

This course will include lessons in stenography and short hand and a special teacher trained in this line of work has already been secured for the position.

On account of limited facilities in our present school it will not be possible to arrange rooms for this work in the high school building. The Board of Education would therefore suggest and recommend that the assembly room in the library and the room now used as the office of the Board of Education be equipped and used for the proposed commercial course.

Another change wich our superintendent wishes to make and in which our board heartily concurs, is the adaption so far as we are present able the "departmental plan."

This method or plan is advocated by our own University and is being widely odopted throughout the country.

By the "departmental plan" a student is passed by single studies instead of by grades so that a student who is backward in some one study, but strong in all others will not be held back excepting in the study or studies in which he fails.

The "departmental plan" will be adopted in the 7th and 8th grades the coming year.

In school athletics, the position of this board is that, under partial supervision at least, every encouragement be given both boy and girl for the proper exercise of the body as well as the mind, while attending school.

In school enrollment our superintendent's report shows an increase of attendance for the year just closed of 9.3 per cent. over the preceeding year.

The number of children of school going age (from 5 to 19 inclusive) in this District according to the census recently completed is as follows:

Male children	284

an increase of 16 over last year.

E. H. Halladay, term expires	1915
Dr. E. D. Brown, " "	1915
F. B. Wood, " "	1916
J. H. Smith, " "	1917
C. F. Patterson, " "	1917

The foregoing is respectfully submitted and approved by the Board of Education as its annual report to this school district for the year ending July 12th, 1915.

C. F. PATTERSON,
Secretary.

ANNUAL SCHOOL MEETING OF DISTRICT NO. 7

In the absence of President Halladay, J. H. Smith was called to the chair. The regular routine business was gone through with, the annual report of the secretary, which appears elsewhere in this issue, being read.

The estimated amount to be spread upon our taxrolls for the ensuing year is $9300.

The school year will begin September 6 and will consist of 38 weeks. Other changes for the coming year, will be the establishment of the departmental plan for the 7th and 8th grades. Also a two years commercial and business course, stenography and short hand, will be taught, a special teacher for this branch having already been secured.

On account of the limited room and facilities in our high school building, it was recommended by the board, that the assembly room and the room occupied by the Board of Education in the library be equipped and used for this proposed commercial course

The terms of Trustees Halliday and Brown having expired the electors of District No. 7, elected Mrs. Charles Bidwell to fill the chair of President Halladay. On first ballot for a successor to Dr. Brown, there was a tie between the Doctor and Chas. Burridge, on second ballot Dr Brown was elected to succeed himself.

The attendance at this meeting of the School District is of great importance as matters for the new year are arranged for the election of two new trustee's. John F. Hicks addressed the meeting and stated that at such a meeting it ought to have been necessary to hold it in the Opera House to accomodate the crowd.

In the matter of a larger attendance we agree with Mr. Hicks A short time ago, in one of our Michigan Cities a School meeting was called to consider a bonding question which involved an expenditure to about $200,000,00. Just four people attended to vote on this question. Now if people find fault with trustee's elected or the action of the district meeting on important questions which arise and do not attend to register their vote for or against, who's fault is it? Think it over.

A resolution was passed giving President Halladay a vote of thanks for his long and efficient services as trustee. No further business coming before the meeting. A motion to adjourn carried.

The Chins of Burma.

The Chins of Burma are divided into a large number of clans, and a man may not marry a woman of his own clan, but after the marriage ceremonies are over the wife is initiated into her husband's clan and has her wrists wrapped round with cotton yarn as a witness to all evil spirits that she is under the guardianship of the kun, or ancestry, of her husband. The Chins are afraid of witches; but, as has been the case with other peoples, they find great difficulty in learning for certain whether a given woman is a witch or not. If they knew it they would certainly drive the woman out of the village and perhaps resort to further violence. Like the Burmese, they believe that witches have the power by their incantations to introduce foreign matters into the bodies of those whom they hate and so to cause them to die.

The First London Directory.

The great family of Smith, Brown, Jones and Robinson had not spread so far over London when the first directory was published as it has now. Only eighteen Smiths, ten Browns, nine Joneses and four Robinsons figure in it, the Cooks, Halls, Hills and Kings being almost as numerous. There were then but five London bankers, or "goldsmiths that keep running cash," as the directory describes them—Richard Blanchard & Child, at the Marygold, in Fleet street; Mr. Coggs, in the Strand, at the King's Head; Benjamin Hinton, at the Flower de Luce, in Lombard street; James Herriott, at the Naked Boy, in Fleet street, and James Johnson, at the Three Flower de Luces, in Lombard street.—London Graphic.

Dresses and Flowers.

If you have had a waist or a light dress stained by wearing a bunch of flowers you will appreciate how much trouble might be saved by owning a chamois case to cover the stem. Make this by stitching into shape a piece of chamois the desired size. Into this case may be slipped the stems of any short stemmed flowers, and then they may be carried or worn without staining waist, glove or gown.—Exchange.

It Would Help.

A facetious bishop went to preach a charity sermon a short time ago in a church. The rector said:

"I am grieved that you should have to come on such a windy day."

Greatest Railroad Terminal.

Chicago is a greater railroad center than New York, or any other place on earth. As a railroad terminal the Windy City bears the palm over all the world and will probably continue to do so for a long time to come.—New York American.

A Modern Trend.

"Then she doesn't think that two can live as cheaply as one?"

"No; her idea is that two ought to live as expensively as five or six."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Widows' Caps.

The widow's cap is as old as the days of Julius Caesar. An edict of Tiberius commanded all widows to wear the cap under penalty of a heavy fine and imprisonment.

Beth.

Beth in the names of places mentioned in the Bible is the Hebrew word for "house." Thus, Beth-lehem is the house of bread; Beth-saida, house of mercy.

A TECUMSEH CITIZEN COMES TO THE FRONT.

Every Tecumseh resident should read what a neighbor says. His testimony can be relied upon. Here are his own words.

W. C. Witherell, W. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, says: "I had acute pains across the small of my back and in my hips. Often, after stooping, a sharp twinge darted through my loins obliging me to lie down. I was laid in bed for several days and I believe that the trouble was caused by excessive stooping. When I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and a few boxes restored me to good health. Since then, whenever I have felt in need of a kidney medicine, I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and the results have been very pleasing. I have had no reason to change my high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills, which I expressed some years ago."

Lunar Vegetation.

Professor Pickering of the Harvard astronomical observatory declares that there is nothing less true than that the moon is without air, water or vegetation. There are certain large lunar areas that darken toward lunar noon and fade out toward lunar sunset. They correspond in some degree to the so called Martian seas, and Professor Pickering uses the term "fields" to describe these plains or slopes, which he believes to be covered with vegetation. He is convinced that the dark fields to be seen during the lunar summer do not owe their blackness to shadow, for you can see them at full moon when shadows are absolutely invisible. The blue-black color of the fields and canals, he argues, can therefore be owing only to a discoloration of the surface that comes alike on slopes and levels in the lunar summer, and that is invisible in the spring and autumn. We know of no mineral that acts in that manner, and the only possible explanation seems to be that it is the result of a covering of vegetation.—Youth's Companion.

The Smoker's Paradise.

Mexico may be called the smoker's paradise. There is plenty of good, cheap tobacco in that country, where the leaf grows freely. Furthermore, no tax is levied upon it. One may buy in Mexico a cigar, every bit as good as the average ten cent brand in this country, for a sum equivalent to two and a half cents of our money. Cigarettes are cheap in proportion. To protect the domestic article Mexico levies a prohibitive tax upon imported tobacco, so that no Mexican thinks of buying an American cigar. The laboring classes are able to buy two boxes of cigarettes, containing ten each, for two and a half cents in our money. The tobacco in these is the sun dried natural leaf and of coarse grade, with coarse paper wrappings. The market is abundantly supplied also with cigarettes of high grade tobacco in the best paper wrappings. For the most part the Mexican takes his tobacco in the form of cigarettes.—New York Tribune.

China's Kitchen God.

The kitchen god of China is perhaps not rightly so called. He has place over the cooking range, but he is the "recording angel" of the Chinese house, and it is his duty to note the actions of each member of the family and report them to the gods at the end of every month. Once a year, too, he goes to heaven in person and makes his annual report. So once a year the family prostrate themselves before him, carry him in procession and finally burn him while crackers are fired.

Pearl of the Crossroads

How She Met Her Fate.

By FREDERICK BRIGGS

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Some one said that a sailorman was good for nothing but to chase about the world and send people presents. Pearl Smith had known this all her life, though perhaps she had never resolved it into just that expression.

She drew the line at having more than one man on the same ship. Still, this was not at all inconvenient, for there were sometimes no less than fourteen men-of-war, besides a score of merchant ships, in the crossroads of the Pacific at one time.

The girl came by the prosaic name of Smith because her father's name had been something else in some other country. He came to Honolulu before the cable was in good working order and remained. Marrying a half caste Kanaka girl, he had kept a sailors' boarding house on King's road since Pearl was a baby. The presents had been coming in since the little girl was big enough to climb on a sailorman's knee, and their volume increased with her size. She was grown up at fourteen.

To see her then was like being wakened from a sweet sleep on a balmy afternoon by having great clusters of red, red roses pressed to one's cheeks. Young men dropping in at the Crossroads swore that they would never go to sea again, only to ship with the next tide for the Indian ocean in search of a pearl to match her skin.

She was like Honolulu days. The shimmering softness of her skin matched the warm afternoon skies. Rich reds of the island sunsets burned in her full, dimpled mouth. Tropic twilights lay behind her inky eyelashes, deepening to midnight in her long hair.

Men-of-war's men and merchant sailors sent different presents. The navy men leaned toward fancy jewelry and manicure sets, while the traders stuck to silk, uncut rubies, loose pearls, ivory fans and ostrich plumes.

This from the young men. To enumerate the junk that was dumped at the feet of this island goddess by silly old sea captains and others would be to copy the cargo bills of an East and West India tradesman. There would also be a list of small animals and birds, with a number of arctic treasures appended. Pearl kept what she fancied, and her father sold the rest.

As for a girl accepting presents from a dozen men at the same time, it must be remembered that Pearl lived neither east of Frisco nor west of Suez, which is only another way of saying that the girl was bred in a man's country, where anything a woman gets is so much for her gain and no less for her honor.

New admirers invariably meant more presents. But when a sailorman can jolly his superior officer and get anything he wants just for the asking women had better beware of him. When he stands six feet in his socks, laughs out of big blue eyes and conceals a cello note in a drawling voice so much the worse for the women. Heine—that was as far as they got with his name aboard ship, and it will suffice here—Heine was all of this and more. He was an American bluejacket, boatswain's mate of the destroyer Shark.

There is one amusement the Hawaiians have which Americans do not possess. We are enthusiastic surf bathers and are good swimmers, but a sight that is [illegible] is never seen on an American coast. A Hawaiian takes with him to the beach a board, usually about twice his length. This board he carries out as far as he can; then, placing himself on it, it bears him, forced by the waves, back again to the beach. Those who are not expert at this exercise may lie flat on the board, but those who are trained to it stand erect, balancing their bodies as they roll toward the shore.

He met Pearl at Waikiki beach. She was shooting the surf when Heine saw her first. Standing upright with outflung arms, she balanced on her polished board of kamani wood as it raced ahead of a giant breaker. Swift as the wave she flashed past the swimming sailor, but as the waters broke over his head he remembered every line of her beautiful body. The grace of her attitude struck him harder than the wave. Turning, he swam strongly toward the beach, where the spent roller had landed the fairy surf rider.

Half a dozen men were begging Pearl to be allowed to take her board out to the reef again, but she laughed them away with a flash of milk white teeth and struggled out alone. Heine met her a hundred fathoms from the beach, where the water came almost to his shoulders as he stood on the sand.

"I'll carry your board for you!" he cried as the girl broke through a wave almost upon him.

Startled, she turned her head, and the board slipped, striking on her flower mouth. As the blood came Heine caught her in his arms. The wave, receding, shut the other bathers from view, and for ten seconds the sailorman held the girl close to his heart.

"My lip will swell!" she panted, struggling to free herself.

But Heine jollied her, just as he jollied the commanding officer of the Shark, and within half an hour she had checked her surf board and bathing costume at the bathhouse and was riding back to town with him, holding her handkerchief to the swelling lip.

Three days later the fleet was ready to sail. Dusky singers with their tiny guitars strummed the sad "Aloha Oe"—"Farewell"—in every street. Pearl managed her other admirers so that Heine might have the last evening. When the time came for a final goodby Heine told her that he was coming back to Honolulu some day.

Pearl studied his face; then she pouted.

"That's what they all say!"

The sailor's eyes danced as he kissed her bruised mouth; then he was gone.

This time Pearl did not look for a present. She would have preferred the sailor back again. But the gift came. It was a brooch set with a genuine ruby. Heine bought the uncut stone from a lascar mess attendant. It cost him $65 to have it cut and polished, and the ruby was valuable.

"To match your lips—from Heine," was the word that came with the jewel.

Pearl's heart was filled with fear. Sailormen who sent presents never came back. Did she not have cream and some pearls from the remittance man in Ceylon and a black diamond to rival her eyes? There was only one other man whom she had longed to see again—an English mate who sent her a perfect pair of pigeon blood rubies from Bombay. The jewels were torn from the eyes of a Hindu god, and the Hindus tore the mate's eyes from his head in revenge. But Pearl did not know this. She fastened Heine's gift on her bosom and put the other jewels away.

Heine was discharged from the naval service shortly after his visit to Hawaii, and, without informing Pearl, he returned to Honolulu. He had served a jeweler's apprenticeship before entering the navy and soon found employment in a local store as an engraver. He purchased a little bungalow in Kalihi with the savings of his naval cruise and kept out of sight in Honolulu as much as possible, wishing to avoid meeting his sweetheart until he could surprise her with a complete arrangement for housekeeping.

One day as he bent over his engraving tools his heart gave a great bound as Pearl's voice floated through the lattice partition. She was talking with the jeweler in the front of the store. Peering through the slats, Heine saw a number of jewel boxes spread out on the counter between them. The jeweler was speaking:

"Do you get all these as presents, Miss Smith?"

"Oh, of course. The sailors—they are so good to me," she laughed. "But what are they worth—pins, brooches, rings, watches and all?"

The ex-sailor sank back, stunned. A look crept into his face that his commanding officer had seen when his boatswain's mate reported "both anchors carried away, sir," as the disabled Shark wallowed with the wind toward the thundering rocks of Cape Flattery. Heine had trusted his anchors. Now he thought of his early training—of his sisters and the girls back in the Kansas home—his standards of honor for women.

The jeweler was speaking again.

"I will allow you $220."

"Will that buy a very fine watch with diamonds?" she asked.

"A very fine watch, but not with many diamonds," he replied.

"Then I'll wait. More will come," and she walked out.

The jeweler found his engraver sitting listlessly, with idle hands, and eyes that stared into space. He suspected the vitiating influence of the tropics.

"Go out and get a cool drink," he called cheerily. "Don't let the heat get away with you!"

Heine thanked his employer and went out. He had a cooling draft and was soon back at his bench. The next day he saw a real estate man and tried to sell his bungalow, as he intended to sail from Hawaii on the Mongolia, which was due, homeward bound, in two weeks.

A few days before the China mail came in Heine was startled again by his sweetheart's voice. He heard every word as she offered the pigeon blood rubies for sale. The jeweler was in ecstasies. The stones were flawless and perfectly matched. A deal was made for a beautiful diamond incrusted watch in exchange for a number of jewels, including the rubies.

Heine had never seen the girl more beautiful. Her face, shaded by a wide hat of delicate straw and rich flowers, seemed touched with the brush of melancholy. Her neck was bare, and the point of the low V of her white gown was secured by a ruby brooch—his ruby.

"I'll take this one," she was saying, "and you must cut these words in the heart."

She stood there gazing wistfully at the watch for a long time. When she had left the store the jeweler brought it back to his engraver.

"Get this out as soon as possible," he said, depositing the watch with the slip of words to be engraved.

"I've been judging that little Kanaka girl all this time from a wrong standpoint!" he shouted; then, hatless and coatless, he dashed from the building.

"Heat's getting in its work," the jeweler mumbled to himself. "That's the trouble with these newcomers—can't stand the heat," and he shook his head sadly, for the newcomer was an excellent engraver, and he let the gin alone.

Heine overtook the girl in front of the Young hotel, and there, utterly oblivious of the staring public, he caught her again in his arms, kissing her perfect mouth, no longer bruised, but soft as a red hibiscus blossom

LEARNS MATE DIED IN 1902

Woman Waits 11 Years After Receiving Letter From Him.

Muskegon, Mich., July 10.—After waiting patiently for eleven years, daily expecting word from her husband whom she had not seen since Jan. 4, 1902, and who had sent her his last letter Jan. 14, two years later, Mrs. Myrtle Forsberg of this city was informed by his friend, Gus Schuls of Caledonia, Minn., who until his present visit to Muskegon, never knew that Forsberg was married, that her husband had met death the day he sent her his last letter.

Forsberg was washed overboard from a steamer plying between Los Angeles and San Diego. Forsberg planned to return to his home following the trip to San Diego, as the final letter to his wife asserted.

A Suit of Ratskin.

A thrifty Welshman at one time exhibited himself publicly in England attired in a costume composed from top to bottom of ratskins, which he had spent three years and a half in collecting. The dress was made entirely by himself. It consisted of hat, neckerchief, coat, waistcoat, trousers, tippet, gaiters and shoes. The number of rats required to complete the suit was 670. Most curious of the garments was the tippet, composed entirely of rats' tails.—London Telegraph.

KRUPP'S WORKERS IN MUTINOUS THREATS

Men Demand Higher Wages for Longer Hours.

Geneva, Switzerland, July 16.—(Via Paris.)—A report has reached Basel that a big strike is threatened at the Krupp works at Essen, Germany, the movement being headed by the Union of Metallurgical workmen and the Association of Mechanics. They demand higher wages because of the cost of living and shorter hours because of the great strain under which they work, the report says.

The workmen, according to these dispatches, are in an angry mood and threaten the destruction of machinery unless their demands are granted immediately, as they have been put off for three months with promises. The dispatches add that several high officials have arrived at the Krupp works in an effort to straighten out matters and calm the workmen, and that Bertha Krup is expected to visit the plant and use her great influence with the workers.

KILLS CRIPPLE FOR BURGLAR

Reckless Shooting by Scared Miner Slays Unfortunate Girl.

Terre Haute, Ind., July 16.—Ethel Pigg, twenty-four, a lifelong cripple was shot and killed by Joseph Aribbey, in Cass, a mining town, when he mistook her for a burglar.

Tribbey says he heard someone prowling about his house and he fired a rifle through a window, intending to frighten away the burglar. The bullet entered the girl's heart. Miss Pigg lived next door to the Tribbey home. She was only four feet tall and the range at which the shot was fired seemingly would have been over her head. Tribbey is a miner. The girl was the daughter of a miner.

MEXICAN TRAIN IS BLOWN UP

Many Are Killed Between Vera Cruz and Mexico City.

Washington, JJuly 16.—A train between Vera Cruz and Mexico City has been wrecked by a bomb near Apizaco. The explosion killed and wounded many persons, says a cablegram from Vera Cruz to the state department.

Five thousand four hundred passengers, including 400 soldiers, were aboard the first two-section train, which left Vera Cruz for the capital, according to a message received at Carranza headquarters here. The time when the wrecked train left the coast is not known.

WM. HAYDEN MILLING CO.

The history of the business run by the Wm. Hayden Milling Co. extends back to a short time after our town was founded. It was the creation of [illegible] Blanchard of Tecumseh. In 1834 he associated Messrs. Huntington and Joseph Russell of New York State with himself and began the purchase of lands, joining on ponds, dams, millrace, etc.

In 1836 the mill was erected with cost of the entire plant $140,000. After a number of years Thos. Baylus purchased the property and operated it until the early '50s when a mortgage held by Boston parties on the property was foreclosed.

On Dec. 17, 1858, the property was deeded to Wm. Hayden who completely remodeled it.

The mill burned in 1898 and The Wm. Hayden Milling Co. was then organized and the new mill erected, of which the accompanying cut will show its immense size. The structure is three story with basement and adjoining is a steel storage tank with a capacity of 10,000 bushels. The bin capacity in the mill is 8,000 bushel with a further storage capacity of 1,000 bbls of flour.

They count among their customers over 800 grocers within a radius of 60 miles in each direction. Strictly winter wheat is used and it is mostly purchased right here in Lenawee County. This is cleaned seven times and the flour turned out the three brands, White Star, 1900 Patent and Best Patent. These people have a big run of custom grinding and a large exchange with farmers.

The flour is packed in most elaborate flour sacks printed beautifully with gold and colors on four sides.

In each sack the Hamilton coupon is placed. These are used by the leading manufactures all over the country. They apply on 2000 different premiums, ranging all the way from a tooth pick to an auto.

This business has grown along through the years with the old town, becoming inseparable for when far away from the old home, do not thots of the old mill and the pond crowd round in your memory before any other of the old haunts and when at a distance do you not greet one of those 1900 sacks as a dear friend.

It would be folly to attempt to praise the products of the mill. Every housewife around knows all about them and their large sales speak for themselves.

LOAD ROAD WITH DEAD LINE TO BOOST BONDS

New P. M. Asks Commission to Tear It Up.

Lansing, Mich., July 16.—Picturing the lower half of Kalkaska county as a desolate sand wilderness, where no railroad could live, Pere Marquette officials backed up their application to junk their branch from Spencer, Kalkaska county, to Stratford, Missaukee county, with some startling testimony before the Michigan rail road commission.

The expected opposition from residents of the section involved dwindled down to the objections of one man, Fred C. Hircel, a farmer of Moorestown. He explained the absence of others by the fact that they were too busy, but Pere Marquette officials mildly insinuated that there were no residents of the country at all, except those at Moorestown, Missaukee county, four miles south of the Stratford terminal.

Aaron Patriarche, who has been with the Pere Marquette since its infancy and has had forty-four years' experience in traffic matters, admitted that the road of which this branch was a part had been bought by the Pere Marquette people merely to increase their mileage for bonding purposes. This statement nearly staggered the commissioners.

"Bonesetter" Sweet Discovers Secret of Child's Life Affliction.

Battle Creek, Mich., July 16.—Deaf and dumb since she was left on a local doorstep when a few hours old, Ramona Shaw, two years old, can speak and hear, following experiments made by R. C. Sweet, widely known among baseball players as "Bonesetter" Sweet.

The child is the adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Shaw, and her foster parents did not dream she would ever talk. Sweet found that the trouble was due to disturbance of the nerves around the spinal cord probably caused by the cold to which she was exposed as an infant.

LANSING BANKER TAKES WIFE

Lansing, Mich., July 16.—A wedding of more than local interest was solemnized here when Miss Eleanor Haarer, the sister of State Treasurer John W. Haarer, became the bride of Charles G. Toms, cashier of the American Savings bank of this city.

CARMEN WIN HIGHER PAY

11,000 Chicago Employes Receive Arbitration Board Award.

Chicago, July 16.—Eleven thousand employes of the Chicago surface lines were notified that they have been granted an increase in wages by the arbitration board headed by Mayor Thompson.

Mabiay Hoyne, who represented the car men on the arbitration board, joined with the mayor in granting the increase. James M. Sheehan, arbitrator for the company, said he had not decided to sign the award.

E. J. PETERS & CO.

If you want something pretty nifty in jewelry, cut glass, art goods, silver, china and stationery, hunt up the store of E. J. Peters & Co. on East Chicago street. There you will find a most beautiful display exhibited in cases lining both sides of the room and in two rows of silent salesmen which extend the full length of the store.

Ed is behind a well equipped jewelry repair bench and will fix your watch or piece of jewelry with quickness and dispatch.

He is a graduate optician registered with the Michigan board and is working up a fine business in that line. He is also the watch inspector on the Jackson and Lansing branches of the New York Central Ry. which speaks well for his ability.

Mr. Peters bought this business of J. F. Hicks & Son in 1909 and has added materially to the stock.

Each Wednesday his bargains are certainly some trade callers. Last Wednesday umbrellas were sold way below regular price. Watch next Wednesday. You will certainly find a bonanza, but every day is a "Bargain Day" at Peters.'

"THE SPORTSMAN'S HOME"

Will Coller has the largest line of pipes, tobacco, fishing tackle and sporting goods carried in any retail store in Michigan. Some assertion when you remember that he started in business in 1903 with a small stock of fishing tackle alone. The venture seemed to take from the first and calls came from all over this vicinity and from cities at a distance for his line Our close proximity to the lakes makes this a good stand for Will and he saw the opening and was keen to grasp his opportunity.

Soon he added candy, soft drinks, cigars and all lines of sporting goods. A bicycle repair outfit is flourishing there this season and anything you want in motorcycle and auto supplies is kept in stock.

His place is quite a favorite with the young men and he finds a ready sale for soft drinks, pipes and smokers' supplies.

He don't let much time go to waste for he has a splendid talent as a sign painter and is kept busy as he is the only one of that vocation in town. Specimens of his work you can view from Clinton to Adrian and from the lakes to Dundee.

Wednesday evening, July 21 he will furnish the fire works, noise makers and confetti for the Big Night of the Bargain Days.

LAYS WRECK TO DIRECTORS

Judge North Renders Decision in Albion Bank Crash.

Battle Creek, July 16.—Directors of the defunct First National bank of Albion were held responsible for the bank's financial condition on a breach of trust, by Judge Walter H. North of the circuit court in his findings in the notable case of D. A. Garfield, receiver for the bank, versus W. O'Donoughue, H. M. Deering and other directors.

The decision of Judge North is the result of more than a year's investigation in the county's biggest bank failure, one of the most sensational in the state. One man, Mr. Deering, was sent to Fort Leavenworth prison and Mr. O'Donoughue's life was shortened by the failure. Of the total judgment of $28,280, in notes and accommodation papers, it is impossible to estimate just how much can be collected.

AUSTRIA SENDS PROTEST TO U. S.

IS INTERPRETED AS WARNING

President Is Said to Have Been Apprised of Receipt of Dual Empire's Note — Determination to Permit War Supplies to Move to Be Adhered To.

Washington, July 16.—Those close to the president do not believe the note from Austria-Hungary suggesting that this government stop shipments of contraband to the allies will complicate the German negotiations. It is understood that the president has been advised of the substance of the Austrian note.

London, July 16.—A dispatch from Berlin by way of Amsterdam to the Exchange Telegraph company says:

"The Austro-Hungarian protest to America is a sequel to the recent conference at Vienna between Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German imperial chancellor, and Gottlieb Von Jagow, the German foreign minister, and Baron Stephen Burian Von Rajecz, the Austro-Hungarian foreign minister.

"The protest was sent at the request of Germany, and Turkey will follow suit.

"The object is to warn America that a rupture of relations with Germany will mean also a rupture with Germany's allies."

Arouses Speculation.

Washington, July 16.—Secretary of State Lansing admitted the receipt of a document from Austria-Hungary dealing at length with the shipment of war munitions from this country to belligerents in Europe and raising the question whether, in view of the fact that Germany and Austria are unable to use the American market for war munitions, the extent of the trade with their enemies "developed independently of the wishes of the American government" does not effect the neutrality of this country.

Question as to Inspiration.

Outside of the state department the document has given rise to speculation as to whether the action of Austria was inspired by Germany and whether Austria is to raise issues with the United States. While Von Jagow and, other leading Germans both official and unofficial, have recently been quoted as saying that the United States has a legal right as a neutral nation to ship war supplies to belligerents, they have laid stress on the moral side of the question and are known to feel that the growth of the manufacture of war supplies in this country, amounting almost to a new business, has, in fact, raised a broad question which Austria, in its document, evidently is trying to get at.

GERMANS TAKE PRZASNYSZ

Berlin, July 16.—(Via London.)—Przasnysz, a town of Russian Poland, fifty miles north of Warsaw, has been captured by the German forces, according to the official statement given out by the German army headquarters staff.

The Germans also announce that they have captured the village of Konsya, to the south of Kolno, and have stormed the heights of Olszauka, northeast of Suwalki.

"NOT ONE"

Storekeepers seldom praise goods, but now and then they can't help it. For instance, when a simple liniment has cured external ills for 68 years, honest dealers cannot help but confirm what Mr. A. VanSickel of Somerfield, Pa., said: "We have had calls for Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh for miles around and have never had a bottle returned—not a one." adv

W. A. RICHARD PASSED AWAY AT NORTH HAMPTON, N. H., JULY 15.

The above dispatch brought the surprising and unhappy announcement of the death of one who since 1871 has been a familiar figure in the social and business circles of Jackson.

As a young man he was a clerk in P. A. Sabines Dry Good Store, later engaging in merchant tailoring showing his enterprose by bringing from New York City the most expert tailors he could hire.

For some years previous to the death of his father Col. Hugh Richard, he was engaged in the real estate business and upon his decease he devoted himself to the management of the property left him.

With those whom he entertained a regard he was most companionable but until this standing was obtained this side of his nature was not exposed. He was 56 years of age. No particulars have been received further than the dispatch given above.

The remains will reach the city Saturday morning. He is survived by his widow one daughter Anna and a sister Mrs. Fannie Wetmore.

Jackson Patriot

Mr. Richard better known as Archie was an old Tecumseh boy and it is with regret that his many friends hear of his passing away.

The third annual Mothers Picnic of the Friends church was held Thursday afternoon on the church lawn with over 70 present. A short program was given. The heavy storm of the afternoon drove them in doors and the picnic supper was served in the Church basement.

Mrs. George Babcock who had just moved into her new home on Oneida St. met with quite an accident Thursday. She had just put the sweepings from the floor into her cook stove when an explosion occurred receiving five wounds on her arm and one over her left eye. Mrs Elmer Hooten who was present also received several cuts on her left arm. On investagation it was found that several cartridge had been left on the floor possibly by the former tenant, Dr. O. Q. Jones was called and rendered the necessary treatment.

The FORESTER'S DAUGHTER

A ROMANCE OF THE BEAR TOOTH RANGE

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1914, by Hamlin Garland

At last Mrs. McFarlane rose and Berea, reluctantly, like a child loath to miss a fairy story, held out her hand to say good night, and the young man saw on her face that look of adoration which marks the birth of sudden love, but his voice was frank and his glance kindly as he said:

"Here I've done all the talking when I wanted you to tell me all sorts of things."

"I can't tell you anything."

"Oh, yes, you can; and, besides, I want you to intercede for me with your father and get me into the service. But we'll talk about that tomorrow. Good night."

"I really am in earnest about entering the forest service. Landon filled me with enthusiasm about it. Never mind the pay. I'm not in immediate need of money, but I do need an interest in life."

McFarlane stared at him with kindly perplexity. "I don't know exactly what you can do, but I'll work you in somehow. You ought to work under a man like Settle, one that could put you through a training in the rudiments of the game. I'll see what can be done."

"Thank you for that half promise," said Wayland, and he went to his bed happier than at any moment since leaving home.

Young Norcross soon became vitally engaged with the problems which confronted McFarlane, and his possible enrollment as a guard filled him with a sense of proprietorship in the forest, which made him quite content with Bear Tooth. He set to work at once to acquire a better knowledge of the extent and boundaries of the reservation. It was, indeed, a noble possession. Containing nearly 800,000 acres of woodland and reaching to the summits of the snow lined peaks to the east, south and west, it appealed to him with silent majesty. It drew upon his patriotism. Remembering how the timber of his own state had been slashed and burned, he began to feel a sense of personal responsibility.

He bought a horse of his own, although Berrie insisted upon his retaining Pete, and sent for a saddle of the army type, and from sheer desire to keep entirely clear of the cowboy equipment procured puttees like those worn by cavalry officers, and when he presented himself completely uniformed, he looked not unlike a slender young lieutenant of the cavalry on field duty, and in Berrie's eyes was wondrous alluring.

He took quarters at the hotel, but spent a larger part of each day in Berrie's company, a fact which was duly reported to Clifford Belden. Hardly a day passed without his taking at least one meal at the supervisor's home.

As he met the rangers one by one he perceived by their outfits, as well as by their speech, that they were sharply divided upon old lines and new. The experts, the men of college training, were quite ready to be known as Uncle Sam's men. They held a pride in their duties, a respect for their superiors, and an understanding of the governmental policy which gave them dignity and a quiet authority. They were less policemen than trusted agents of a federal department. Nevertheless, there was much to admire in the older men, who possessed a self reliance, a knowledge of nature and a certain rough grace which made them interesting companions and rendered them effective teachers of camping and trailing, and while they were secretly a little contemptuous of the "schoolboys," they were all quite ready to ask for expert aid when knotty problems arose. It was no longer a question of grazing. It was a question of lumbering and reforestration.

Nash, who took an almost brotherly interest in his apprentice, warningly said: "You want to go well clothed and well shod. You'll have to meet all kinds of weather. Every man in the service—I don't care what his technical job is—should be schooled in taking care of himself in the forest and on the trail. I often meet surveyors and civil engineers, experts, who are helpless as children in camp, and when I want them to go into the hills and do field work they are almost useless. The old style ranger has his virtues. Settle is just the kind of instructor you young fellows need."

Berrie also had keen eyes for his outfit and his training, and under her direction he learned to pack a horse, set a tent, build a fire in the rain and other duties.

"You want to remember that you carry your bed and board with you," she said, "and you must be prepared to camp anywhere and at any time."

The girl's skill in these particulars was marvelous to him and added to the admiration he already felt for her. Her hand was as deft, as sure, as the best of them, and her knowledge of cayuse psychology more profound than any of the men excepting her father.

One day toward the end of his second week in the village the supervisor said: "Well, now, if you're ready to experiment I'll send you over to Settle, the ranger, on the Horseshoe. He's a little lame on his pen hand side, and you may be able to help him out. Maybe I'll ride over there with you. I want to line out some timber sales on the west side of Ptarmigan."

The next morning as he rode down to the office to meet the supervisor he was surprised and delighted to find Berrie there. "I'm riding too," she announced delightedly. "I've never been over that new trail, and father has agreed to let me go along." Then she added earnestly: "I think it's fine you're going in for the service, but it's hard work, and you must be careful till you're hardened to it. It's a long way to a doctor from Settle's station."

He was annoyed as well as touched by her warning, for it proclaimed that he was still far from looking the brave forester he felt himself to be. He replied, "I'm not going to try anything wild, but I do intend to master the trailer's craft."

"I'll teach you how to camp if you'll let me," she continued. "I've been on lots of surveys with father, and I always take my share of the work. I threw that hitch alone." She nodded toward the pack horse, whose neat load gave evidence of her skill. "I told father this was to be a real camping expedition, and as the grouse season is on we'll live on the country. Can you fish?"

"Just about that," he laughed. "Good thing you didn't ask me if I could catch fish." He was recovering his spirits. "It will be great fun to have you as instructor in camp science. I seem to be in for all kinds of good luck."

They both grew uneasy as time passed for fear something or some one would intervene to prevent this trip, which grew in interest each moment, but at last the supervisor came out and mounted his horse, the pack ponies fell in behind, Berrie followed, and the student of woodcraft brought up the rear.

CHAPTER VI.

In Camp.

FOR several miles they rode upward through golden forests of aspens. On either hand rose thick walls of snow white boles, and in the mystic glow of their gilded leaves the face of the girl shone with unearthly beauty.

Twice she stopped to gaze into Wayland's face to say, with hushed intensity: "Isn't it wonderful? Don't you wish it would last forever?"

Her words were poor, ineffectual, but her look, her breathless voice, made up for their lack of originality. Once she said: "I never saw it so lovely before. It is an enchanted land!" with no suspicion that the larger part of her ecstasy arose from the presence of her young and sympathetic companion. He, too, responded to the beauty of the day, of the golden forest as one who had taken new hold on life after long illness.

Meanwhile the supervisor was calmly leading the way upward, vaguely conscious of the magical air and mystic landscape in which his young folk floated as if on wings, thinking busily of the improvements which were still necessary in the trail and weighing with care the clouds which still lingered upon the tallest summits, as if debating whether to go or to stay. He had never been an imaginative soul, and now that age had somewhat dimmed his eyes and blunted his senses he was placidly content with his path. The rapture of the lover, the song of the poet, had long since abandoned his heart. And yet he was not completely oblivious. To him it was a nice day, but a "weather breeder."

"Don't you wish it would last forever?"

"I wonder if I shall ever ride through this mountain world as unmoved as he seems to be?" Norcross asked himself after some jarring prosaic remark from his chief. "I am glad Berrie responds to it."

At last they left these lower, wondrous forest aisles and entered the unbroken cloak of firs whose dark and silent deeps had a stern beauty all their own.

The horses began to labor with rearing breath. A dozen times he thought, "We must be nearly at the top," and then other and far higher ridges suddenly developed. Occasionally the supervisor was forced to unsling an ax and chop his way through a fallen tree, and each time the student hurried to the spot, ready to aid, but was quite useless.

"One of the first essentials of a ranger's training is to learn to swing an ax," remarked McFarlane, "and you never want to be without a real tool. I won't stand for a hatchet ranger."

The sky was overshadowed now and a thin drizzle of rain filled the air. The novice hastened to throw his raincoat over his shoulders, but McFarlane rode steadily on, clad only in his shirt sleeves, unmindful of the wet. Berrie, however, approved Wayland's caution. "That's right; keep dry," she called back. "Don't pay attention to father, he'd rather get soaked any day than unroll his slicker. You mustn't take him for a model yet awhile."

He no longer resented her sweet solicitude, although he considered himself unentitled to it, and he rejoiced under the shelter of his fine new coat. He began to perceive that one could be defended against a storm.

After passing two depressing marshes, they came to a hillside so steep, so slippery, so dark, so forbidding, that one of the pack horses balked, shook his head and reared furiously, as if to say, "I can't do it, and I won't try." And Wayland sympathized with him. The forest was gloomy and cold and apparently endless.

After coaxing him for a time with admirable gentleness, the supervisor, at Berrie's suggestion, shifted part of the load to her own saddle horse, and they went on.

Wayland, though incapable of comment, so great was the demand upon his lungs, was not too tired to admire the power and resolution of the girl, who seemed not to suffer any special inconvenience from the rarefied air. The dryness of his open mouth, the throbbing of his troubled pulse, the roaring of his breath, brought to him with increasing dismay the fact that he had overlooked another phase of the ranger's job. "I couldn't chop a hole through one of these windfalls in a week," he admitted, as McFarlane's blade again liberated them from a fallen tree.

He was beginning to be hungry also—he had eaten a very early breakfast—and he fell to wondering just where and when they were to camp, but he endured in silence. "So long as Berrie makes no complaint my mouth is shut," he told himself. "Surely I can stand it if she can." And so struggled on.

Up and up the pathway looped, crossing minute little boggy meadows on whose bottomless ooze the grass shook like a blanket, descending ravines and climbing back to dark and muddy slopes. The forest was dripping, green and silent now—a mysterious menacing jungle.

"I'm glad I'm not riding this pass alone," Wayland said as they paused again for breath.

"So am I," she answered, but her thought was not his. She was happy at the prospect of teaching him how to camp.

At last they reached the ragged edge of timber line, and there, rolling away under the mist, lay the bare, grassy, upward climbing naked neck of the great peak. The wind had grown keener moment by moment, and when they left the storm twisted pines below its breath had a wintry nip. The rain had ceased to fall, but the clouds still hung densely to the loftiest summits. It was a sinister yet beautiful world—a world as silent as a dream, and through the short, thick grass the slender trail ran like a timid serpent.

"Now we're on the divide," called Berea, and as she spoke they seemed to enter upon a boundless Alpine plain of velvet russet grass. "This is the Bear Tooth plateau." Low monuments of loose rock stood on small ledges, as though to mark the course, and in the hollows dark ponds of icy water lay, half surrounded by masses of compact snow.

"This is a stormy place in winter," McFarlane explained. "These piles of stone are mighty valuable in a blizzard. I've crossed this divide in August in snow so thick I could not see a rod."

Half an hour later they began to descend. Wind twisted, storm bleached dwarf pines were first to show, then the firs, then the blue green spruces, and then the sheltering deeps of the undespoiled forest opened, and the roar of a splendid stream was heard. But still the supervisor kept his resolute way, making no promises as to dinner, though his daughter called: "We'd better go into camp at Beaver lake. I hope you're not starved," she called to Wayland.

"But I am," he replied so frankly that she never knew how faint he really was. His knees were trembling with weakness, and he stumbled dangerously as he trod the loose rocks in the path.

They were all afoot now descending swiftly, and the horses romped down the trail with expectant haste, so that in less than an hour from timber line they were back into the sunshine of the lower valley, and at 3 o'clock or thereabouts they came out upon the bank of an exquisite lake, and with a cheery shout McFarlane called out, "Here we are, out of the wilderness!" Then to Wayland, "Well, boy, how did you stand it?"

"Just middling," replied Wayland, reticent from weariness and with joy of their camping place.

With businesslike certitude Berrie unsaddled her horse, turned him loose and lent a skillful hand at removing the panniers from the pack animals, while Wayland, willing, but a little uncertain, stood awkwardly about. Under her instruction he collected dead branches of a standing fir, and from these a few cones kindled a blaze, while the supervisor hobbled the horses and set the tent.

One by one the principles of camping were taught by the kindly old rancher, but the hints which the girl gave were quite as valuable, for Wayland was eager to show her that he could be and intended to be a forester of the first class or perish in the attempt.

McFarlane went further and talked freely of the forest and what it meant to the government. "We're all green at the work," he said, "and we old chaps are only holding the fort against the thieves till you youngsters learn how to make the best use of the domain."

Berrie was glowing with happiness. "Let's stay here till the end of the week," she suggested. "I've always wanted to camp on this lake, and now I'm here I want time to enjoy it."

"We'll stay a day or two," said her father, "but I must get over to that ditch survey which is being made at the head of Poplar, and then Moore is coming over to look at some timber on Porcupine."

The young people cut willow rods and went angling at the outlet of the lake with prodigious success. The water rippled with trout, and in half an hour they had all they could use for supper and breakfast, and, behold, even as they were returning with their spoil they met a covey of grouse strolling leisurely down to the lake's edge. "Isn't it a wonderful place?" exclaimed the happy girl. "I wish we could stay a month."

"It's like being on the Swiss Family Robinson's island. I never was more content," he said fervently. "I wouldn't mind staying here all winter."

"I would!" she laughed. "The snow falls four feet deep up here. It's likely there's snow on the divide this minute, and camping in the snow isn't so funny. Some people got snowed in over at Deep lake last year, and nearly all their horses starved before they could get them out. This is a fierce old place in winter time."

As the sunset came on the young people again loitered down to the water's edge, and there, seated side by side on a rocky knoll, watched the phantom gold lift from the willows and climb slowly to the cliffs above, while the water deepened in shadow and busy muskrats marked its glossy surface with long silvery lines. Mischievous camp birds peered at the couple from the branches of the pines, uttering satirical comment, while squirrels, frankly insolent, dropped cones upon their heads and barked in saucy glee.

Wayland forgot all the outside world, forgot that he was studying to be a forest ranger, and was alive only to the fact that in this most bewitching place, in this most entrancing hour, he had the companionship of a girl whose eyes sought his with every new phase of the silent and wonderful scene which shifted before their eyes like a noiseless yet prodigious drama.

Seated Side by Side on a Rocky Knoll.

At last the girl rose. "It is getting dark. I must go back and get supper."

"We don't need any supper," he protested.

"Father does, and you'll be hungry before morning," she retorted, with sure knowledge of men.

AVIATION CLASS FORMED.

First Organization of Officers Will Go to Pensacola.

Washington.—Announcement was made at the navy department of the selection of nine officers to form the first organized class in aviation. The officers will be assigned at once to the aviation station at Pensacola for the study of the construction, assembly and repair of aeroplanes and later will learn to operate the machines. Practical shop work will be one of the chief features of the first period of instruction.

Another class will be selected a few months later in line with the policy of the department, supported by appropriations by congress, to expedite the development of aviation in the United States navy.

The officers composing the first class are Lieutenants B. F. Johnson, A. C. Reed, B. G. Haas, R. Paunack, W. W. Corry and Ensigns J. P. Murfleet and W. H. Schofield, all of the navy, and Lieutenants E. T. Evans and A. E. Cunningham of the marine corps.

Feat Saves Life in Crash.

FLINT, MICH.—When he saw that his buggy was going to be struck by an automobile, L. D. Whitman leaped into the air, retaining his hold on the reins. The automobile cut the buggy in two. When Whitman came down he landed across the front axle, which was all of the rig left attached to the horse.

The animal ran a block, but Whitman managed to hang on to the lines and balance himself on the axle and yell until he stopped the animal.

Curious Lightning Display.

A brilliant and startling spectacle was witnessed a short time ago in a Tyrolean valley near Tanneheim. A violent storm arose suddenly and several globes of lightning rolled over the surface of the lake. Then a column of water arose, thirty feet high from the middle of the lake and from its top small flashes darted. The spectacle lasted about three minutes.

AFTERNOON CREATION.

Frock of pink and white flowered daphne silk, the bodice simply cut and the skirt a series of slightly gathered flounces. The surplice vest and frilled sleeves are of white net. Worn with this frock is a bonnet of Leghorn, the top piled high with stiffly arranged flowers.

MANY USES FOR POTATO.

To clean a vinegar cruet fill the cruet with finely chopped potato skin, cork tightly and let stand in a warm place three days, then turn the skins out and rinse the cruet with warm water and borax.

To kindle fires potato parings dried in the oven are good, as they light easily.

To clean carpets grate a raw potato and rub over the surface of the carpet and finish off with a clean cloth wrung out in warm water.

To clean dresses grate two raw potatoes into a pint of cold water, strain through a sieve, add another pint of water and let it settle. Dip a sponge into the water and rub the soiled garment carefully, afterward rinsing with clear water.

To clarify drippings slice a raw potato into the fat while rendering. It will absorb all impurities.

When a fern turns yellow slice a raw potato and put it on top of the soil. This will draw out the worms.

PAINTED FURNITURE.

The fad for black and white has penetrated to the bedroom and many pieces of old, castoff furniture are being rejuvenated by the handy little paint pot. The dresser shown in the illustration is one which had been discarded, but is now a pretty and useful place of furniture.

GOOD COMPANY.

As friends and companions, as teachers and consolers, as recreators and amusers, books are always with us and always ready to respond to our wants. We can take them with us in our wanderings or gather them round us at our firesides. In the lonely wilderness and the crowded city their spirit will be with us, giving a meaning to the seemingly confused movements of humanity and peopling the desert with their own bright creations.—John Alfred Langford.

Care of Babies In Summer

Many thousands of babies die every summer, and many thousands more suffer from illness because of the excessive heat. Bottle fed babies form the greater part of the number, owing to the great difficulty of keeping cows' milk sweet in summer, but even breast fed babies need very particular care during July and August.

The first and most important thing in the care of the baby through the hot weather is to give him the right food. The value of breast milk to babies has been brought out in an earlier article. The next most important thing to do for the baby is to make him as comfortable as possible by plenty of baths, sleep, fresh air and light clothing.

The baby should have a constant supply of clean air to breathe, summer and winter, day and night. Do not be afraid to take him out of doors. In the country it is very little trouble to give the baby plenty of out of door life. A screened porch on the shady side of the house is an invaluable aid to the mother in the care of the baby. It makes a safe place for him to stay, awake or asleep, protects him from his enemies, the fly and mosquito, and at the same time affords him the fresh air he needs.

The poorest place in the house for the baby to stay in is the kitchen, which is necessarily the hottest one. When the mother has to be busy in her kitchen the baby should be kept out of doors as much as possible, and during the warmer weather, when the out of door air is hotter than that indoors, the baby should be kept in the coolest room in the house. A play pen will be a great help in confining a runabout baby within safe bounds. It may be used indoors or out, with a rug or blanket in the bottom.

The baby should be kept clean and cool by frequent baths. He ought to have at least one full tub bath every day, and when he is restless and the weather very hot he may have one or two sponge baths in addition. For a young baby the water should be slightly warm or tepid. The mother may test it by dipping her elbow into the water. If it feels just pleasantly warm it will be right for the baby. After he is a year old the water may be cooler, but should never be cold enough to shock or frighten him, for a baby should find his bath a great delight.

BATHING THE BABY.

Use only a mild soap like castile and very little of it, rinsing the skin thoroughly afterward. A baby's skin is very sensitive and may be made sore by a harsh soap. If any redness or chafing appears use no soap at all, but try a bran bath.

Make a little bag of thin cheesecloth and partly fill it with ordinary bran. Sew or tie the open side and put in the bath water, squeezing it until the water is milky.

When the baby has prickly heat he may be sponged with a bath made by dissolving a tablespoonful of ordinary baking soda in two quarts of water.

It is important to keep not only the skin clean, but the clothing also. The diaper should be changed as soon as it is wet, for a wet or soiled diaper is quite sure to make the baby's skin sore if worn for any length of time. The country mother has the advantage in being able to dry the diapers in the sunshine after they have been washed or to spread them on the grass to bleach and sweeten. Every soiled diaper should be placed at once in a covered pail until it can be washed.

The baby needs very little clothing in hot weather. On the hottest days he may go with nothing on but his diaper, and, possibly one other thin garment. The mother will, of course, be ready to dress him as necessary to prevent him from chill when the weather cools. Clothe the baby in as few soft, clean, simple garments as will serve to make him comfortable and happy.

Plenty of cool drinking water is essential. Babies and young children often suffer for lack of this. It may be given from a nursing bottle before the baby is old enough to drink from a cup. The water for the baby should be boiled and cooled, as even clean looking water may contain germs of disease which are killed by the boiling process.

Give the baby a drink several times a day between meals and at night when he wakens.

Chicken Wisdom.

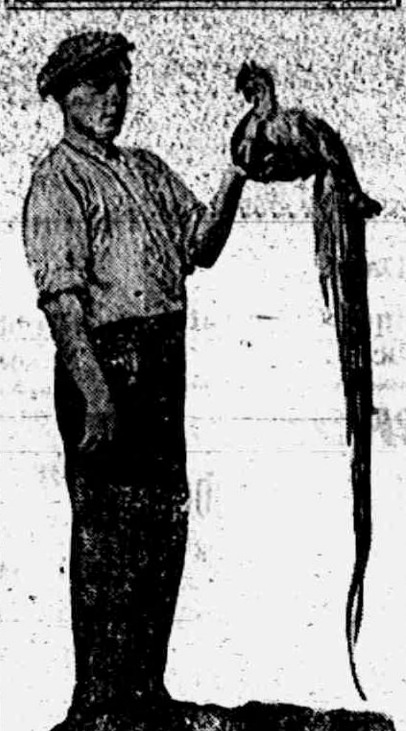
Keep the hens supplied with a dust bath, and a little insect powder mixed with the dust will have its good effect.

Do not let your young birds roost with the old hens, as they are liable to catch diseases which old hens are more subject to.

The finest remedy for scaly legs is to dip the parts affected in a solution of equal parts of sweet oil and coal oil, in which has been mixed one or two handfuls of sulphur.

For Young Folks

Fancy Japan Chickens at Panama Exposition.



Those fortunate children who have visited the great Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco do not need to be told of its beauties and wonders; they have seen with their own eyes. Those who contemplate going to the fair, have a great pleasure in store, for all beholders unite in declaring it the most gorgeous sight imaginable. Perhaps some who have been there saw the rare exhibits in the exposition's continuous live stock show. Notable among these are the long tailed Japanese chickens, which are bred especially for the emperor of Japan and whose valuation runs to as high as $2,000 for a single bird. These chickens are housed in glass, this precaution being necessary to preserve the fine quality and sheen of their feathers. The picture shows a keeper holding one of these remarkable birds in his hand. As can be seen, the tail feathers reach to the ground.

Boy Scout Baseball.

The scoutmaster takes a question from a list of questions and fires it at the batter. If the batter misses it completely it counts as three strikes, and a correct answer by the catcher puts out the batter. If the batter answers the question correctly another question goes to an outfielder, who makes a putout or allows a safe hit by answering correctly or by missing. If the batter's answer is partly right, he is considered to knock the ball to an infielder, who makes an error or a putout at first, depending on whether he misses or answers the next question. If a runner on a base wants to try to steal, a question is sent to the infielder on the next base, who does or does not put out the runner. If an infielder wants to catch a runner napping, he calls for a question, the missing of which allows each runner to proceed to the next base. Of course his correct answer puts out the napping runners.

To be impartial, it is best to take the questions in regular order—e. g., the seventh, seventeenth, twenty-seventh, etc., throughout the list. The list may easily be made by any scoutmaster, who may find it desirable to write the answer after each question. Here are some simple questions: What is the seventh scout law? Describe the flag used by Washington in January, 1776. Bad bruises are tested how? Give the letter K in some signal code. Give seven precautions against causing fires. Give the two most important things to do for dislocation of a bone.—Scouting.

Nests of Weaver Birds.

In India the baya weaver birds usually suspend their nests from branches of palms or other trees which overhang a stream and weight them with lumps of clay, which prevent them swaying about at the mercy of the wind. The natives say fireflies are fastened into the clay for the purpose of frightening away rats and snakes.

PLAGUE OF GRASSHOPPERS.

The Pests Should Be Destroyed Before They Lay Their Eggs.

[Prepared by New York State College of Agriculture.]

Recent examinations by an expert from the State College of Agriculture have indicated that serious outbreaks of grasshoppers may be expected again in those sections where they were abundant last year. This is due, in part, to the fact that although large numbers of the grasshoppers were killed last year by the use of the poison bait, they had had a chance to lay their eggs before efforts were made to destroy them.

At the present time, and until they get to be pretty well grown, the young grasshoppers are confined to the more or less localized areas in which they have hatched from the eggs. It is comparatively easy for any one to locate these breeding places now, and, according to the experts, just as easy to get rid of at least a large proportion of the grasshoppers before they can do serious injury to the crops.

There are several methods of fighting these pests. They can be poisoned, or they can be caught in "hopper dozers" and destroyed. The so called "Kansas bait" is perhaps as satisfactory a poison mixture as has been used.

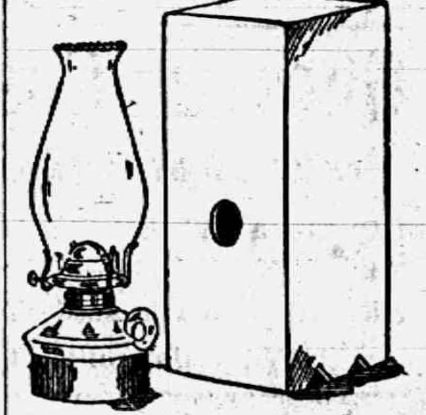
The formula is as follows: Twenty pounds bran, one pound paris green, two quarts molasses, three oranges or lemons and about three and a half gallons water. Mix the bran and paris green together dry. If very much of the material is to be mixed it is advisable for the person doing the mixing to protect himself from breathing the poisonous dust by tying a moistened sponge or handkerchief over his mouth and nose. Then mix the molasses and water together, squeeze the juice of the fruits into the water and the skin and pulp chopped up fine and moisten the bran with the liquid. Just enough of the liquid should be used to thoroughly moisten the bran, but not to make it sloppy. Then it should be sown broadcast over the infested field, preferably early in the morning, so that the grasshoppers can get a chance to eat it before the heat of the day dries the moisture in the bran. It should be sown evenly and thinly over the field, not in lumps. Although the poison may not kill the grasshoppers for a day or so, it seems to stop their feeding as soon as they eat some of it. The amount of mixture in the foregoing formula is enough for three or four acres. Live stock of all kinds should be kept from the treated fields for a few days to avoid any possible danger of poisoning them. If the grasshoppers are especially numerous it may be necessary to renew the poison bait after four or five days.

Where there is some sort of a spraying machine available, the infested fields may be sprayed with arsenate of lead or paris green. The arsenate of lead is used at the rate of five pounds of the paste to 50 gallons of water. The paris green should be used in the proportion of one and one-half pounds to fifty gallons of water, with a pound or so of good lump lime added to prevent burning of the vegetation. About [illegible] quarts [illegible] should be added to each fifty gallons of liquid.

Another material which may be used as a spray is arsenate of soda, in which one pound of commercial arsenate of soda is used to two quarts of molasses and fifty gallons of water.

Simple Candling Outfit.

In spite of the greatest care it will sometimes happen under ordinary farm conditions that an occasional bad egg will appear among those sent to market. It would be wise to candle every egg shipped. Candling is "the process of testing eggs by passing light through them so as to reveal the condition of the contents." A simple candling outfit may be made of an ordinary pasteboard box, sufficiently large to be placed over a small hand lamp after the ends have been removed. The box should have a hole cut in it on a level with the flame of the lamp. Several notches should be cut in the edges on which the box rests to supply air to the lamp. The box ought to be sufficiently large to prevent danger from catching fire. The box should be made of corrugated pasteboard, but ordinary pasteboard will serve the purpose. Candling is done in the dark, or at least away from strong light, and the egg is held against the hole in the side of the box, when its condition may be seen. An egg that shows any defect should not be marketed.



KANSAS GIRLS HAVE BEAUX.

Wheat Crop Makes Wedding Bells Ring In Smith County.

Smith Center, Kan.—The municipal marriage bureau, organized last spring, is to be abolished. What correspondence could not accomplish the maturing wheat crop has been able to do and do well.

There has been an oversupply of women and girls in Smith county, but the coming of the harvest hands has changed all this. Bright young fellows from colleges and universities, east and west, have become interested in the western Kansas girls.

Two weeks' delay in harvest work has given the strangers ample opportunity to go courting, and there isn't a girl in Smith county now who hasn't at least one beau. Many of them have two or three applicants, and the marriage license clerk is anticipating a rushing business.

MOTHER'S ANSWER TO LIZZIE:

Dear Lizzie:—

Pa was busy cutting hay when your letter came. He said he didn't think much of those new fangled machines, but after a while he phoned to Temple and Temple brought out the washing machine and a gasoline engine the next day. Say, you just ought to have seen Pa when he found out that the engine would run the separator and pump the water and turn the grindstone.

Well, Monday morning I had the water scalding hot and put in the machine. Then I got breakfast most ready and went to wring them out. Lizzie, that wringer is worth all the whole machine cost. To think of me standing there feeding the clothes through the thing turning away without my touching it. And I could swing it around from the the machine to the tub and then to the basket and wring while the machine was washing. I had the first clothes on the line before the men came to breakfast, and all the while we were eating breakfast the machine was washing just the same. I got through by nine o'clock and I wasn't tired a bit.

You were dead right, Lizzie. It was the washings that were taking the tuck all out of me. We'ze only had the machine three weeks, and I begin to feel better already. I don't believe you need come home at all

LOST CHILD

Little Child Of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Randall Missing Four Hours

RINGING OF COUNCIL BELL AND SEARCHING PARTIES BUSY.

The ringing of the Council bell Friday night brought out a crowd of people who were on the lookout for a fire. Instead it proved a call for a searching party for the three year old child of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Randall corner of VanBuren and Logan St.

The child had been missing since 6 o'clock and the neighbors had made a through search throughout the neighborhood without results. At the suggestion of G. A. Rathbun the Council bell was rung for the purpose of organizing a systematic searching party, as it was feared that the child might have strayed to the creek and fallen in.

John Smith had been notified and had searched diligently About ten o'clock Geo. Handford and Ed. Smalledge notified Smith that they had found the child in the Washhouse in the rear of their home but fearing she might be dead had not disturbed her.

The door having a spring lock was fast and they had flashed a light in and saw her lying on the floor Smith broke open the door and gathered the child in his arms. Mr. Handford was so over come that he wept like a child for joy and took the child from Smith and carried it home. Smith sounded his policeman whistle and the crowd gathered around the house

Mrs. Randall had been ill through the day, and when her child was brought to her collapsed in a dead faint and it was found necessary to call Dr. Hendershott who worked over her for some time before she fully recovered.

Saturday morning Mrs Randall was able to be sitting up but in a weak nervous condition. The child was evidently as well as ever.

Nothing Better Anywhere

TUESDAY, JULY 20

Responsive to Thousands of Requests from those who could not journey to New York to witness the Hippodrome's greatest scenic spectacle, "America". The World Film Corporation has arranged to bring this amusement marvel to the door of all for a nominal addmission fee.

The entire, vast, costly unapproachable production including, Landing of Columbus, The Alamo, San Antonio, Panama and the Opening Festivities, Marvelous Ladder Act, Pueblo Village New Mexico, with hundreds of Indian performance, Railway Station, New York Scenes, Culebra Cut and passages of first ship, Ponce de Leon Hotel, Florida, and Carnival of sports, Fearless Fillis, Equestrians, New England Farm scene, Suffrage parade, National Park, Grand Canyon of Colorado, Plunging automobile, Levee at New Orleans, Fighting the Flames, Australiann Woodchoppers, and the famous finale, "The Court of Honor" in 6 magnificent parts.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 21

Charming Lillian Walker in the Vitagraph three Reel production "LIFTING THE BAN OF CONVENTRY" a most charming Vitagraph story with this little actress playing one of her best roles. The regular Wednesday admission, 5 cents to all, will be charged on all 'Bargain Days' when in town Wednesday don't think your day is complete, before stopping and seeing this charming picture.

THURSDAY, JULY 22

We will offer, for your approval, MR EDGAR SELWYN in his own great play "PIERRE OF THE PLAINS." This picture is presented by the all Star Picture Corporation and is a thrilling story of the great Northwest. "PIERRE OF THE PLAINS" has been favorably compared by many with such plays as "THE SPOILERS" "THE CALL OF THE NORTH" and the "SQUAW MAN" and is fully the equal of any of these productions. The entire picture was taken in the Adirondack mountains and the scenery is exceptionally fine, especially the great snow scenes. The picture is in five parts and over 210 big scenes. To see Mr. Selwyn in this great play is to see one of the best yet produced for the motion picture screen Admission 5 and 10 cents.

SATURDAY NIGHT, JULY 24

We will present the sixth of the great "WHO PAYS"? pictures entitled "HOUSES OF GLASS" with Miss Ruth Roland and Mr. Henry King in the leading roles. These pictures will be supplemented by the usual big Saturday night program including some of Brays best cartoon comedies and the Pathe News showing all of the important happenings of the day and the latest New York styles for the ladies.

We have just installed a new system of fans in the Bradley which will go a long way towards making the theatre comfortable these hot days and with our seating capacity of over 800 (which handles big crowds without crowding) and plenty of outside ventilation makes the Opera House an ideal place for summer amusements. Last but not least it must be admitted that we are putting on 'some shows.' That is just what the management of the Bradley is doing, giving both quality and quantity. Offering the best productions of the Paramount, World, and Pathe companies and showing them at a price so small that all can see them. We couldn't show these pictures at the cheap prices we do if it wasn't for our enormous seating capacity: Take "Tillie's Punctured Romance" which we played a week ago Saturday night, paid $30 00 for the use of the film one night. Not very many houses in towns of this size pay that much for a whole weeks films. Look at the packed house for "TESS OF THE STORM COUNTRY" another expensive film but worth every cent we paid for it. Its such productions as these that are pleasing the people, thats why we are doing the business, thats why more people are coming every week, Our programs as given above for this week are just as good as those we had last week. Come in and see for yourself and remember our guarantee is always good—"Your money back if you don't get your moneys worth."

It is the policy of the Management of the Bradley to give his patrons the best in motion pictures—when better pictures are made we will book them.

Gentlemen.

LISTEN!

This story is short and a little out of the ordinary, so PLEASE read it all—it's about FIXTURES.

Clothes wear out; so do hats and gloves and other things. Fixtures don't; they get dingy and tarnished and old fashioned, but they don't wear out.

Hence a good many people seem to think the same old fixtures they grew up with must stay there indefinitely, waiting for a fire or an earthquake.

It is'nt so. You owe it to yourself and to your family to realize that entirely aside from artistic considerations, the present methods of lighting are RADICALLY DIFFERENT from those of a few years ago, in their influence on comfort and eyesight—and it will PAY YOU TO KNOW whether you are getting adequate and PROPERLY DISTRIBUTED light or not.

When the family physician advises a change in diet, he knows what he's talking about—it's for your good. If we advise a change in type or location of fixtures it's because WE know what WE'RE talking about—its our business.

Just drop in at our office any time, step into our fixture room, designed especially to show you modern electric light fixtures.

YOU CAN'T BE SORRY AND YOU MAY BE GLAD.

Very truly yours,

HUNTSMAN FREED IN IOWA TREASURE CASE

Refusal to Admit Evidence to "Hermit" Druggist Cause.

Bedford, Ia., July 16.—The case against Bates Huntsman, who has been on preliminary trial before Justice M. A. Sawyer for the alleged murder of Nathaniel Smith, a Missouri cattleman, and his son in September, 1868, was dismissed.

This action was taken upon the motion of the attorneys for Huntsman. Attorney General Cosson acquiesced in the motion, saying that the refusal to admit the evidence of John Derrickson with reference to "Doc" A. E. Golliday, the hermit druggist, who is said to have been a participant in the alleged crime, had made it impossible for the state to proceed further.

Golliday was one of the men who, according to Mrs. Maria Collins Porter, helped carry the body of Nathaniel Smith, the Missouri cattleman, past the house of Jonathan Dark to an old well, where it was dumped in on that September night in 1877.

The money, which the state alleges was discovered in the Golliday home, consisted of about $30,000 in gold currency and the balance in old currency and coin.

A TEUMSEH CITIZEN COMES TO THE FRONT.

Every Tecumseh resident should read what a neighbor says. His testimony can be relied upon. Here are his own words.

W C Witherell. W. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, says: "I had acute pains across the small of my back and in my hips. Often, after stooping, a sharp twinge darted through my loins obliging me to lie down. I was laid in bed for several days and I believe that the trouble was caused by excessive stooping. When I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and a few boxes restored me to good health. Since then, whenever I have felt in need of a kidney medicine, I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and the results have been very pleasing. I have had no reason to change my high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills, which I expressed some years ago."

GUNNERS CAN TELL KIND OF SHELL FIRED

Many Saved by What Is Called "Artillery Ear."

Berlin.—The war has developed what might be termed an "artillery ear," especially among the soldiers in this branch of the service, which enables them to judge accurately what kind of shell is being fired at them and whether or not it is aimed at their battery or at some other spot. Many lives have been saved by this gradually developed oral alertness.

The artillerist, explains an officer who has been in the field for months, is able almost instinctively to tell whether a shell is headed for his battery or not. The men have learned to pay not the slightest attention to a shot that gives off the peculiar sound indicating that it is aimed at some other battery or position. Because of the confusing noise of the artillerist's own battery the squad tending it usually is divided into two groups, one of which listens for the shells of the opponents and gives the warning to dive for the shelters back of the guns. The men learn to talk with pauses between each word, listening meantime for the telltale whistle of the dangerous shell. Only in the case of the small field cannon, fired at a range of, say, 2,000 yards, is it impossible to hear the shell in time to dive into the security of the sheltering "understand." Those shells have reached their mark about as soon as the sound of their discharge.

The twelve centimeter, flat trajectory guns, on the other hand, give just enough warning so that the men can make one dive. There isn't one fraction of a second to be wasted, but by quick action the artillerist can save himself. The big howitzers, however, give nearly half a minute's warning. As the officer puts it, one can hear the shells from these guns and still cut off a slice of wurst and take a swallow from one's field bottle before seeking shelter. The shelter in this case must be a genuine shelter, consisting of about three layers of heavy wood and two yards of earth and stone, else the shelter and artillerists are gone.

PLASTER CAST WEDDING SUIT.

Injured In Runaway, Farmer Weds Despite Crippled Condition.

Salina, Kan.—Miss Mary Elizabeth Seraner came all the way to Saline county from Fayetteville, O., to become the bride of Francis De Sales Schneider, a young farmer near Salina, and even then came near losing out for a delay at least, but she was equal to the occasion, and she is now Schneider's bride.

The promised delay in the nuptial affairs of this young couple was caused by Schneider getting into a runaway accident and sustaining a broken leg, fractured ribs and bruises all over his body, and the sweetheart found him bound in plaster of paris casts so tight he could not move.

The situation was discussed, the young lady hooked up the favorite horse to a buggy and came to Salina, secured the marriage license, engaged the preacher and returned to the farm. The wedding took place that evening.

MAIL BY AUTOMOBILE.

Proposed That Minimum Length of Runs Will Be Fifty Miles.

Washington.—"Rural mail service by automobile will begin on a large scale Aug. 2," says a statement by the post-office department. "Thereafter, under orders thus far signed by Postmaster General Burleson, 105 machines carrying mail will traverse more than 5,500 miles of rural post roads daily except Sunday.

"The first dispatch of rural mails by auto was made July 1. Two pioneer routes radiating from Quarryville, Pa., the one 55.1 and the other 56.8 miles long, went into operation on that date. Additional orders are pending providing for numerous other motor routes, and it is probable that many more will be approved in time to become effective in August.

"Preparatory to the introduction of this service wherever it will be advantageous to the rural public, surveys of special needs and conditions in every state are being made. Rapid increase of automobile mileage in the R. F. D. is certain during the coming fiscal year. Prospects are that the rural mail auto will soon be as familiar in the great farming sections of the country as the present box-like rural carrier's wagon. Where roads are good the automobile promises to effect a huge economy of time and labor and vastly to enlarge the postal facilities of the districts served.

"The routes now about to be operated by machine are from fifty to sixty miles long. Time schedules vary from six to eight hours. In some cases the new auto routes represent the extension of present wagon routes, but for the most part they are combinations of two or more routes now served by separate carriers, each with a horse drawn vehicle. In the same or less time than is required to do a twenty-five mile route by wagon the auto will serve a fifty or sixty mile route. The machine will have from four to five times the carrying capacity of the wagon."

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Keep the cucumbers picked from the vines if you wish them to continue bearing. Never let one ripen on the vines, even if you do throw them away, unless you do not care for any more of them.

Cabbage and cauliflower will grow better if frequently cultivated. Tie the leaves about the cauliflower heads to keep them white.

Save all the wood ashes and use around fruit trees as a fertilizer. Wood ashes are especially good for peach trees, and they will benefit all fruit trees and vines.

Neglected fruit trees are not worth the ground they occupy; they are an eyesore, and when pest infested they are a positive menace to the neighborhood.

Keep the high wheeled wagon out of the orchard. Not only does it cut up the sod, but it is more apt to brush and peel the lower limbs of the trees, and it is a great deal more inconvenient to pour fruit into than the low down wagon, with its broad tires.

Cabbage worms are very apt to bother the plants, but for these a solution of one part kerosene, three parts buttermilk and six parts water is very effective. In making this solution briskly stir the kerosene and buttermilk together for three minutes before adding the water. Apply with a spray pump or a garden sprinkler.

ALLIES WIN 2 DAYS' BATTLE IN GALLIPOLI

Two Lines of Trenches Vital to Operations Won.

London, July 16.—Further important progress for the allies on Gallipoli was reported by Sir Ian Hamilton, commander of the allied forces at the Dardanelles.

After exceptionally severe fighting two lines of Turkish trenches were captured on Monday, only to be lost during the night. The positions being of vital importance to the safety of the whole allied line, a British naval brigade, supported by French artillery with "75" guns, re-attacked and succeeded in recapturing the trenches.

Meanwhile progress has been made by the French on the extreme right, and thus the entire objective of the attack was attained.

BRITISH MINERS CHALLENGE LAW

150,000 Go on Strike, Defying Munitions Act.

LABOR LEADERS DISREGARDED

Lloyd George Appoints Munitions Tribunal—Action of Coal Miners Threatens Serious Situation With British Fleet and Production of War Supplies—Efforts at Conciliation.

London, July 16.—Minister of Munitions Lloyd George announces the appointments to the general munition tribunal for Wales and Monmouthshire under the new munitions act.

Robert Wallace, K. C., a distinguished jurist, chairman of the county of London sessions is the chairman.

Sir Griffiths Thomas, one of the wealthiest of the Welsh coal operators represents the operators and Councillor Tom Griffiths represents the employes.

Under the munitions act all controversies between employers and employes must be considered by the tribunal and strikes under any circumstance are illegal.

The mining situation is regarded as so alarming that the British admiralty issued a proclamation taking over all the reserve supplies of coal in Wales.

The members of the general munitions tribunal for Wales and Monmouthshire under the new munitions act will attempt to persuade the strikers to resume their work. If soft measures fail, there is no doubt that the government will speedily adopt stringent measures, provided for in the munitions act possibly declaring the South Wales coal fields a military district under martial law.

So far there has been no violence. The men, however, display a stubborn determination to get what they want—higher wages—and not to work until they get it no matter what danger may menace the nation as a result.

London, July 16.—More than 150,000 men laid down their tools and as a result the Great South Wales coal mines are virtually at a standstill. Their action is of particular seriousness in view of the fact that coal is at present a commodity of urgent necessity to the British fleet and to the vast number of munition factories and because an even more alarming situation is faced by the direct disavowal thus made by the government's order issued under the munitions act that the men should not strike. So now out of the various manifest actions of unrest among the laboring classes which the British government has had to face since the beginning of the war, the government is confronted with a problem which, if not settled at an early date, will prove a great handicap to the production of munitions, not to say the embarrassment that it will be to the country at large and the British cause.

Disregard Advice of Leaders.

The action of the miners was taken in spite of the advice of their leaders, who told them to return to work, in spite of the order to strike, and to make another attempt to settle their differences with the owners and their demands for higher wages by arbitration.

Under the provisions of the munitions act the strikers are subject to a heavy daily fine for remaining away from their work. The government theoretically at least, is endowed with the power to force the men to remain on their jobs. But what action will be taken is not known—probably not any until every effort to persuade the men to return to work on a day to day contract basis until their differences are arbitrated has been made.

Leaders Call Conference.

The labor leaders, who apparently are working with the government have called a conference and it is hoped that out of this meeting will arise some solution of the problem.

THAW WILL SHOW INSANITY

Drink Will Prove White's Slayer Madman, Asserts Wife.

Malone, N. Y., July 16.—"If Harry goes to the San Francisco fair he'll assume ownership of the 'Zone'," was the comment of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw on the verdict of the jury in New York declaring her husband sane.

"Harry is an insane man," she continued, "and if set free he will soon show it. He may have concealed it from a jury for a time, but with the first taste of liquor he will again become a crazy, irresponsible character."

AUTOISTS ACCUSED BY GIRL

Grand Rapids Young Woman Charges Men Assaulted Her.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 16.—Morris Butler and Charles McGough are in jail pending arraignment on serious charges preferred by a Grand Rapids young woman.

Both were members of an auto party which picnicked down the river Sunday. The young woman also was in the party and she alleges she was mistreated.

MUSHROOMS FOR FOOD.

Germans Consider Delicacy to Take the Place of Meat.

Hamburg.—As an auxiliary food supply, of which little advantage is taken, mushrooms are being urged upon German epicures, and especially upon Catholics, as substitutes for meat on fast days.

Dr. von Langemann, a Dresden physician, estimates that there are over 200 kinds of mushrooms in Germany. At least one-quarter of these are not only edible, but nourishing and tasty, while only seven can be classed as poisonous toadstools.

The annual crop, if it all were harvested, would run into the millions of marks in value, he believed, and would supply hundreds of tons of food. Already the inhabitants of villages in the vicinity of forests have learned to supply themselves with a valuable food that costs nothing but the gathering.

The Cardinal's Enemy

A Bit of History That Is Also a Romance.

By F. A. MITCHEL

If one were asked what period in history furnished the most themes for stories he might be right in replying that containing the administration of the government of Louis XIII. of France by Cardinal Richelieu. Louis' queen, Anne of Austria, was a bitter opponent of the cardinal, and what Richelieu was to the king the Duchess of Chevreuse was to the queen. The duchess was one of the most beautiful, the most attractive and the most intriguing women who ever lived.

After the exposure of a treasonable plot the cardinal banished her to Lorraine, where she infatuated the king, Louis XIII., mixing him up in another conspiracy. The cardinal's policy forbade him to imprison a woman, so after banishment from France had failed he sent Mme. Chevreuse to a country estate she owned. There, having no better subject for her fascination, she bewitched an octogenarian official.

This amusement failing to satisfy her, she turned her attention to another intrigue with a view to overthrowing the queen's and her own detested enemy, Richelieu.

At this time the queen was secretly corresponding with those opposing the cardinal, among them Mme. de Chevreuse. The person who conducted this correspondence was one La Porte, her secretary. He was the keeper of her cipher code, translated her letters into it, forwarded them to their destination and received the replies, handling them in the same way.

But the cardinal was watching and suspected the frequent goings and comings of the man. One of the queen's supposed adherents was won over and told La Porte that he was going to Tours, where Mme. de Chevreuse was held in restriction, and asked if he had any message for her. If so he would carry it. La Porte replied that he had a letter and would bring it to him. While doing so he was arrested with the queen's letter on his person and lodged in the Bastille. The letter was not important, but the queen and her friend had been forbidden to correspond. The cardinal at once ordered the seizure of the private papers of both the queen and the duchess.

When the queen was accused of treason she falsely made an oath that she had not corresponded with any foreign power. Richelieu knew better, and on promise of the king's pardon the queen confessed that she had written her relatives in Madrid and in Brussels, but not on matters of state. La Porte declared that he had carried no letters for the queen except to Mme. de Chevreuse. Fearing that La Porte's statement and hers would not agree, Anne desired to post him on what she had declared and ask him to make the same statement. This she hoped would satisfy Richelieu and prevent his investigating further.

But how reach La Porte in his cell at the Bastille? So carefully watched was he that a warden quitted him only for a few hours during the day and slept in his cell at night. One of the queen's maids of honor and devoted to her, Mlle. de Hautfort, not only suggested a plan of conveying a letter to La Porte, but volunteered to carry it herself.

The Chevalier de Jars, who had been involved in a former conspiracy against the cardinal, was confined in the Bastille and occupied a cell directly over that of La Porte, though between the chevalier's and La Porte's cell were two others. It was hoped by the queen's adherents that De Jars might find some way of conveying a letter from the queen to La Porte. De Jars had suffered a paralytic stroke and was allowed the privileges of an invalid, being permitted to receive friends and converse with them in the courtyard of the prison.

Mlle. de Hautfort early one morning issued from the palace of the Louvre before the inmates were awake, being dressed in the costume of a maidservant. Mademoiselle's hair, which was luxuriant and beautiful, was concealed under a large coif, and she was robed in a loose gown which concealed her superb figure. Calling a fiacre, she was driven to the Bastille, where she asked to see the Chevalier de Jars, saying that she was a lady's maid of a niece of the chevalier and bore a message for him.

The hour was before the prisoners' time of rising, and the queen's maid of honor was obliged to wait in the guardroom among a lot of soldiers of low degree. After some time the chevalier arrived and asked what was wanted. Mademoiselle drew him into the court and, raising her coif, showed him who she was and handed him the queen's letter with her majesty's request that he find means to convey it to La Porte.

De Jars was no coward, as he had demonstrated in the schemes in which he had embarked to overthrow the cardinal. Nevertheless he hesitated to become mixed up in a scheme which if discovered would cost him his head. But when mademoiselle reminded him of the terrible risk she was herself running he consented.

The queen's messenger returned to the palace without having been discovered. De Jars, who was full of resource, worked out the problem of getting the queen's letter to La Porte. Had the latter occupied a cell directly beneath his own he might contrive to get the letter through the floor. But to pass it through other floors was impossible. The next cell below the chevalier's was occupied by some men who had been implicated in an insurrection in Bordeaux. The next cell below theirs held the Baron de Tenace and a man named Revellton, who had been a servant of a nobleman who had lost his head for a conspiracy against the cardinal. The chevalier planned to pass the queen's letter through these two cells to that of La Porte.

De Jars enlisted in his service a young fellow named Bois d'Arcy, the valet of a prisoner who was confined with his master. D'Arcy while in attendance on his master at the hour of exercise found a broken stone with a sharp point, which by eluding the observation of the sentinel he managed to slip in his pocket and at the same time asked the aid of the Bordeaux prisoners. Any prisoner was ready to do anything for another unfortunate, and they at once granted the request. Then they were given the broken stone for an implement.

The men succeeded in boring a hole through the floor to the cell next below and passed the letter through to Baron de Tenace and Revellton. These made another hole in the floor of their own cell and had not La Porte been so closely watched would have had no difficulty in passing the missive on to him. They learned that the warden usually left La Porte for a few minutes in the morning. Waiting till they heard him go out, they passed down the letter.

The goal was won. La Porte made his confession tally with that of Anne of Austria, and the cardinal for once was outwitted. Being convinced that he had got the truth and the whole truth, he advised the king to pardon his wife, whom Richelieu believed to have been led into mischief by Mme. de Chevreuse. The pardon was granted on condition that the queen would hold no further correspondence with the mischief maker.

Anne, whose conscience was very elastic, regarded this promise solely as pertaining to letters. Through Mlle. de Hautfort she had contrived to inform the duchess that if their machinations against the cardinal were going well she would receive a prayer book bound in green. If there was danger it would be bound in red and she must look out for herself. Through some misunderstanding Mme. de Chevreuse one day received a prayer book bound in red. She decided upon flight.

An official whom she had enthralled provided her with directions for proceeding to Spain, and thither she directed her course. Ordering her carriage, she gave out that she intended to visit friends in the neighborhood. She set out near evening and as soon as it was dark ordered her coachman to stop and stepped out disguised as a man in a long cloak and riding boots. A horse was waiting for her, and mounting, followed by two servants also mounted, she rode southward.

In her excitement she had left in the carriage the official's directions as to the route and was obliged to proceed without them. Riding all night, she arrived at a town near which a nobleman, La Rochefoucauld, was at the time stopping. He had carried messages between her and the queen, and she knew she could trust him; but, not willing to compromise him, she wrote him as a stranger who had killed a man in a duel and was flying from the authorities, begging him to send a carriage and a valet.

La Rochefoucauld sent the carriage and the valet, and the duchess set out for another of his houses occupied by a gentleman in his service named Malbasty, where she arrived before daylight the next morning. Mme. Malbasty recognized the valet as a servant of La Rochefoucauld, and the man told her that the gentleman he was conducting was an intimate friend of his master and related the story about the duel. M. Malbasty asked the duchess how he could serve her. She replied that she would tell him tomorrow and asked him to go with her, since the two men she had brought from town might be recognized, and she wished to leave them behind until she should send for them.

Malbasty consented, the carriage was sent back, and, mounting a horse which was provided for her, the duchess proceeded on the journey, accompanied by her host and the valet. She had bandaged her head to conceal a wound that she said she had received in the duel.

The hairbreadth escapes from recognition that were made by the fair fugitive were many. She was constantly meeting persons who knew her and was obliged to resort to various devices to avoid acknowledging her identity. One man she met said that if she were dressed as a woman he would certainly mistake her for the Duchess de Chevreuse. She replied that she was a relative of the duchess.

Despite the fact that as soon as her flight was discovered the cardinal sent after her in great haste, she reached Spain, where she was safe.

Philip IV., brother of Anne of Austria, was then king of Spain, and as soon as he learned that his sister's adherent was within his dominions he ordered that she be received with great distinction and sent several royal carriages, each drawn by six horses and occupied by his representatives, to fetch her to the capital. On her arrival the people turned out en masse to see the distinguished stranger who had come to them after so many romantic adventures. The king, like all other men, was captivated with her, and the queen showed her every attention.

From Spain the duchess went to England, whose queen, Henriette Maria, was a sister of the king of France and a bitter enemy of the cardinal who dominated her brother. There she received no less a welcome than in Spain.

GOOD MENAGERIE

When the late P. T. Barnum remarked that the American people liked to be humbugged he evidently had in mind the people of the day in which he was famous, but it is the surest thing in this world that it could not be applied to the people of the present day. Of course, when the dean of showmen made this remark he referred to amusements. The Howe Great London Show, which is to be here, is a direct contradiction to the opinion of Mr. Barnum, and on Friday, July 30 when this show is to be seen here, the thousands who will have the opportunity of seeing how differently the management of this show thinks. The word humbug was eliminated from its vocabulary when the first thought of the shows organization sprung into existence and has remained eliminated ever since.

The management has carefully avoided the least thing that would have a tendency to deviate from truthfulness and honesty. The show has been organized along lines which have given it a universal reputation for merit and fair dealing that has placed it in a class by itself. In selecting features and acts care at all times has been taken to offer only such as could not offend, but would have a tendency to elevate while entertaining. Only such acts as are entirely new find a place on the extended program, and in securing them money is never considered. It is the same in the colossal menagerie. While there are certain number of animals which have been seen before by some, there are many rare ones that have never found their way into any zoological collection before. To sum up, there is no show on the road today where the performance given is of equal merit and where the menagerie has been so carefully selected as that with the Howe Great London Sqow, which will be here Friday, July 30.

TEUTONS VICTORIOUS ON 1000-MILE FRONT

Austro-German Offensive Pushed with Renewed Vigor.

LONDON, ENG. — Official Petrograd admissions, supported in detail by Berlin and Vienna war office statements, reveal an unprecedented renewal of the Austro-German offensive, with general sweeping victories, all along the 1,000-mile battle front in the far east from Goldingen in the north to a point southwest of Zrasnoscow in the south. Russian headquarters concede far-reaching defeats.

LONDON, ENG. — A Times correspondent with the Russian forces, in a dispatch dated Warsaw, July 14, after having visited all the grand duke's armies from Bukowina to Warsaw says:

"It is figured that between six and seven millions of men are engaged from the Baltic to Bessarabia. There will be no repetition of the Russian Dunajec disaster. The Russians can put up thrice as good a fight as they did in the early stages of the Galician retreat. In fact, they were never in better shape to meet an attack. But in view of the incredible strength of the enemy, a terrible battle is to be expected, th outcome of which it is impossible to forctell.

There were 154 teams hitched on Chicago St at a quarter past nine last Saturday evening. The day was a fine one to draw wheat, and farmers came to town after supper.

Tecumseh can now boast of the best baseball club in the state and the proper thing to do is to send them on a tour over the state, and let them satisfy all doubts as to their championship.

247 tickets were sold for the Detroit excursion this morning.

D. R. Gibson of Clinton has brought to our office a sample of the ripe peaches that were picked from his orchard July 3d. We are incredulous no longer.

John Arner of Ridgeway has our thanks for a basket of fine harvest apples.

TEN ARE INVOLVED IN KENT AUTO SCANDAL

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — Automobile carousals have been placed under the ban by the officials of Kent county, following the arrest of Morris Butler and Charles McGough on serious charges preferred by a young woman who was member of an automobile picnic party.

The party which led to the arrest of the two young men consisted of five young women and as many youths. A car was engaged and stocked with liquor and a picnic supper, plentifully interspersed with drinks, was served at a point down the river, say the police. Following the supper, two of the party went in bathing. Later, other alleged misconduct attracted the attention of a Grand Rapids business man who alleges that he saved one of the young women from rough treatment. He brought her to the city. She showed a county official where her head and body had been burned with a cigar and cigarettes, and her stockings were torn by the young men, according to the police.

According to Prosecuting Attorney Barnard, the five girls, all daughters of well known parents, have confessed to their part in the river picnic.

Announcement

Of Consolidation

Waldby & Clay's State Bank

Lenawee County Savings Bank

To the Pnblic:

We take pleasure in announcing that on August 2nd these two old landmarks of Lenawee County's banking will consolidate and become one. All the necessary legal procedure has been taken and ratified by the Stockholders and the State Banking Department.

As a combination of the two names was of unworkable length, it has been decided to adopt the title of Lenawee County Savings Bank, as the name by which the consolidation shall be known. We wish to say, however, that the bank will be owned equally by the stockholders of the old institutions. All of the old officers, directors and employees will be retained.

Both bank buildings will be used, as heretofore, with this exception: The entire savings department will be located at the present Lenawee County Savings Bank building and the commercial department operated in the old Waldby & Clay State Bank building.

In closing we desire to say that the same methods will obtain in the future as have successfully carried these old institutions through all their years of honorable banking. Capital stock, $150,000.00; surplus, $50,000.00; undivided profits, $10,000.00.

Below are the names of our officers and directors;

H. V. C. Hart, President. H. B. Waldby, Chairman.

P. S. Moreland, Vice-Pres.; C. D. Hardy, Active Vice-Pres.; D. B. Morgan, Vice-Pres

BROTHERS IN LEGISLATURE.

Three Messrs. Arnold Making Laws For State of Georgia.

Atlanta, Ga.—There are three brothers in the Georgia house of representatives, all residing in different counties and different sections of the state.

The brothers are Representative Nat D. Arnold of Oglethorpe county; Representative R. J. Arnold of Henry county and Representative O. H. Arnold, Jr., of Clarke county.

Nat D. Arnold is fifty-seven years of age and the eldest of the three. He lives at the old home at Lexington, Oglethorpe county, and is in the banking business

Dr R. J. Arnold is fifty-one years of age and lives at Hampton, in Henry county. He is a practicing physician.

O. H. Arnold, Jr., is forty-six years of age and lives in Athens and is engaged in the manufacturing business.

Nat D. Arnold has served off and on some eighteen years in the state legislature. Dr. Arnold is now serving his second term and was elected both times without opposition. O. H. Arnold, Jr., is serving his first term.

The father of the three brothers was O. H. Arnold, Sr., of Lexington, Oglethorpe county, who served in the legislature in 1887 and 1888.

There is still another Arnold in the house, Zach, from Clay county, who is a cousin of the three brothers.

DANVILLE'S STORY.

Keeps 'Em Awake These Hot Summer Nights.

Danville, Ill.—Residents of Collison, near here, are telling fish stories about a large fish that has avoided capture in the Middlefork river for some time. Silas Harbaugh, a veteran fisherman, says he saw this large fish—large having the meaning of almost endless proportions—floundering in shallow water. He jumped into the stream, determined to catch the fish. He threw his arms about the monster, he says, and was soon hurled into deep water and compelled to let go his hold or be drowned.

One man is said to have encountered the fish a few days ago in a hole in the creek bed. He stroked the back of the fish, which seemed to be asleep. His courage failed him, however, and he swam to land without tackling the fish Determined to make the catch of the season, Harbaugh was seen going to the river the other day carrying a large hook shaped like a fish hook, but nearly two feet long. He said he intended to fasten the hook in the gills of the fish and then use a windlass in landing his catch.

MAKE ARRESTS FOR MURDER DONE IN 1868

After $90,000 Robbery Bodies Were Thrown Into Well.

Bedford, Ia.—With the arrest of Bates Huntsman, aged seventy, on a charge of murder is revealed a remarkable case of buried treasure, counterfeiting and double murder.

Huntsman was locked up without bail. It is charged that he and others in 1868 murdered a wealthy stockman and his little boy, robbed the former of $90,000 and threw the bodies into an old well. The alleged murderers then buried the $90,000 and it is through the revealing of this wealth that the strange story has come to light.

Warrants were also issued for Hank Daincote and Samuel and Henry Scribner, charged with the same crime as Huntsman. Henry Scribner has been arrested. The others who are believed to have been associated with these men are dead.

Huntsman was arrested after an investigation by Assistant Attorney General C. A. Robbins.

It was through Samuel Anderson of Lucas, Ia., that the story came to light. Anderson consulted Attorney W. W. Bulman of Chariton relative to starting civil suit against three of the mentioned men, alleging that twelve years ago he was employed by them to dig for treasure which had been buried on a farm near Siam, Ia., at that time occupied by his parents.

He was to have a fourth of the wealth. He said that he had uncovered it, but that immediately he had been driven away at the point of a gun and that he had not received his share of $90,000.

In possession of these facts, Attorney Bulman started an investigation which resulted in uncovering the double murder in 1868 and the fact that it was supposedly committed by counterfeiters. He laid his facts before Attorney General Cosson, who detailed men, and the arrests followed. According to the story plans were made immediately after the murder showing the exact whereabouts of the buried money, but the plans were destroyed in a fire which consumed the house of one of the men now dead.

Twins Arrive at Sea.

New York.—Mrs. Bessie Cuevas, who was a passenger with her husband, Eugenio, and ten-months-old baby, Oscar, on the Ward line steamship Havana, which arrived from Cuba, presented her husband with twin girls. Although Cuevas had come here to look for a job as a clerk and had only enough money to keep him and his family for a week, he seemed much pleased. The twins, with the mother and little Oscar, were sent to the hospital on Blackwell's Island. Eugenio said he had worked in this country before. He is a native of Porto Rico.

"AXMAN" CONFESSES KILLING FAMILY OF 4

Man Under Arrest at Buffalo Tells of Chicago Grime.

CHICAGO, ILL. — The mystery of the Blue Island ax murder of July, 1914, has solved itself. To escape the tortures of his own conscience, Casimer Areiszewski, the murderer, gave himself up to the police of Buffalo, N. Y., and wrote and signed a confession.

It was for the little hoard which he knew to be hidden in Jacob Mislich's bed tick, said Areiszewski, that he killed Mislich, his wife, his daughter, and his granddaughter. But the crime did not yield even the sordid reward for which it was committed. Just as Areiszewski had cleared his way to the money a dog barked—and ever since, he says, he has been unable to sleep without hearing and being awakened by a dream dog's barking.

"It was as I killed the last—the granddaughter—that the watch dog barked," ran Areizewsi's statement, as contained in a dispatch from Buffalo. "I was afraid to stay any longer and I went away without the money. I have heard the dog barking ever since. When I try to sleep he wakes me. I have traveled all over the country, but the dog is still with me."

CLARK NOW FOR SUFFRAGE

Speaker Pledges Allegiance and Says He Will Help Add Misouri.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL. — Champ Clark, the speaker of the house o representatives, blithely if tardily faced a band of suffragists in a hotel lobby here and pledges allegiance to their general cause. "I expect to see Missouri added to the suffrage states soon, and I am going to help," he said. He promised to write them later regarding whether he would support what is known as the Susan B. Anthony amendment for equal suffrage at the next congress.

In an address at the Commercial club Mr. Clark said: "I predict that within sixty days every person in America desiring to work will find employment at a fair wage—a great desideratum."

Britain May Work Coal Mines.

LONDON, ENG.—Reports from the South Wales coal fields indicate no progress in the negotiations for settlement of the strike, but the efforts will be made at a cabinet meeting to find means of solving the labor problem. It is believed in the mining districts, however, that no way out of the difficulty can be found unless the governmnt takes over the mines and operates them during the war.

Mass Troops on Roumanian Line.

LONDON, ENG. — An Austro-German ultimatum to Roumania is being prepared, according to the Moscow Russkoye Slovoe, which is quoted in dispatches received here. It is added that large bodies of the Teutonic troops are messing on the Roumanian frontier to give emphasis to the ultimatum, which, it is declared, will demand unimpeded transit for munitions of war.

Slavs Take Many Captives.

PETROGRAD. — During the month of June, 1,141 German and Austrian officers and 60,848 men arrived at Kieff as prisoners of war, according to a dispatch from that city to the Novoe Vremya. Of the men more than 10,000 were Germans.

Stranger Breaks Hospitality Record.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — John Powell, secretary to Mayor Ellis, was the victim of a bold stranger who made himself "comfy" in the Powell home. The stranger left his tattered and worn garments in the library, shaved and bathed and then refitted himself with Secretary Powell's best clothes. He has not been found.

White Woodchuck at Dowagiac.

DOWAGIAC, MICH. — A white woodchuck has been captured on the farm of Mark Stockwell. The animal was discovered by a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stockwell, who not realizing its value as a freak, killed it. The family will have the animal mounted. White woodchucks are rarely found. This one was pure white.

Lake Blamed For Typhold.

LANSING, MICH. — The state board of health has reports of eight cases of typhoid fever in four days at Monroe.

According to the report of Dr. Julius J. Siffer, the health officer of that city, the water supply from western Lake Erie is infected. Strenuous methods may be adopted.

TUBERCULOSIS DAY

August 20, 1915

A PROCLAMATION.

By The Governor

The people of the State of Michigan always have been subject to the ravages of tuberculosis, a wholly preventable disease. This disease is the common enemy of mankind, and is rightly called the White Plague. The first manifestations of tuberculosis are frequently overlooked. The patient discovers his danger when it is too late. The Medical Fraternity of Michigan have it in their power to render the State an invaluable service. Their functions are to relieve suffering, cure disease and prevent disease, and the greatest of these three is to prevent disease. Michigan physicians are ready to encourage and practice this form of patriotism—the patriotism of saving their fellowmen from this awful scourge I suggest that on Friday, August twentieth, any person in Michigan desiring a medical examination whereby he may ascertain whether he has any of the symptoms of tuberculosis, may have such examination and advice by asking a physician for it.

Therefore, I Woodbridge N. Ferris, Governor of the State of Michigan, do hereby designate Friday, August 20th A. D 1915, as Tubercolosis Day, at which time all physicians engaged in the practice of medicine are requested to render this service without charge

[SEAL] Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State, this 7th day of July, in the year of our Lord 1915 and of the Commonwealth the 79th

CATARRH GERMS EASILY KILLED

By Breathing Into Throat, Nose and Lungs a Pure Antiseptic Air.

If you have catarrh and want to get rid of it you must kill the germs which cause the disease.

The best known way of destroying Catarrh germs is to breathe into the air passages of your nose and throat and lungs the pleasant, penetrating air of Hyomel (pronounced High-o-me). Hyomel is made from purest oil Eucalyptus combined with other powerful, healing, antiseptic and germicidal ingredients. You breathe it through a little pocket inhaler which C. A. Wright & Son and other leading druggists in Tecumseh, Mich. and vicinity are furnishing with every complete treatment sold Every time you inhale the sweet, fragrant air of Hyomel through this little device you are drawing into your swollen, inflamed, germ laden membranes a medicated air which will not only reduce all the swelling and inflammation and open your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages, but will absolutely and positively destroy every trace of Catarrh germ life it reaches Druggists are so sure of the blessed, lasting relief that Hyomel brings to catarrh sufferers that they sell it invariaby on the positive guarantee that money paid will be refunded if successful results are not secured from its use. advt

MOTHER'S ANSWER TO LIZZIE:

Dear Lizzie:—

Pa was busy cutting hay when your letter came. He said he didn't think much of those new fangled machines, but after a while he phoned to Temple and Temple brought out the washing machine and a gasoline engine the next day. Say, you just ought to have seen Pa when he found out that the engine would run the separator and pump the water and turn the grindstone.

Well, Monday morning I had the water scalding hot and put in the machine. Then I got breakfast most ready and went to wring them out. Lizzie, that wringer is worth all the whole machine cost. To think of me standing there feeding the clothes through the thing turning away without my touching it. And I could swing it around from the the machine to the tubs nd then to the basket and wring while the machine was washing. I had the first clothes on the line before the men came to breakfast, and all the while we were eating breakfast the machine was washing just the same. I got through by nine o'clock and I wasn't tired a bit.

You were dead right, Lizzie. It was the washings that were taking the tuck all out of me. We'se only had the machine three weeks, and I begin to feel better already. I don't believe you need come home at all.

With love from Mother.

5th BARGAIN DAY

A Big Success.

The weather man was with us for once, and furnished good weather for our 5th bargain day Many people came in early to do their trading.

Early in the evening the crowd began to gather coming from Manchester, Clinton, Milan and other near by towns and by eight o'clock the streets were crowded with autos and other rigs. Young America was especially busy with the throwing of confetti and the blowing of horns and other noisy instruments, which combined with the tooting of the plaxton made noise enough to satisfy the most exacting.

The band gave their usual concert between the hours of 7 and 9. John Pennington of Macon singing two numbers The maskers were every where present and formed in line and paraded up and down the street making quite a display. The costumes were quite varied, and prizes were awarded to Ed Everett best dressed gentleman $5.00; Perry Hayden most comical $5.00; Coller children $2.50 each, Geo. and Martha Washington; Marsh twins $2 50 each, the gold dust twins.

The dance at Witherell hall was also a great success, about 45 couple taking part. The day was surely a success in every respect.

Several children strayed away from their parents during the evening and there were a few anxious moments until they were found Among the many was Marjorie Biesing, who became tired of the commotion and went home, not finding any one there she went across to the C. F. Patterson home where Mr. Patterson found her on his return home, fast asleep in the swing settee, he carried her home and laid her still a sleep on the couch, and then notified the folks down town who were searching for her.

OLDEST ADRIAN BANKS JOIN IN CONSOLIDATION

Lenawee County Savings and Waldby & Clay's in Merger.

CAPITAL TO BE $150,000

Veteran Banks Will Share Equal Interests in New; Will Utilize Both of Present Properties.

Lenawee county soon will have one of the largest banks in the interior of the state under a merger planned by officers and stockholders of Adrian's two oldest banks, the Waldby & Clay State bank and the Lenawee County Savings bank.

The merger, which is one of the events of the month in Michigan banking circles, has been quietly taking shape for some time, and is to be formally acted upon tomorrow when the various details go before the stockholders. Under the plan which is made public today for the first time, each of the old banks will be equally interested in the consolidation. Both boards of directors will be merged, thus increasing the board to 19 members.

TO RETAIN OLD NAME.

The process of carrying out the merger will be completed without taking out a new charter. In casting about for a name for the consolidated bank, officials of the old banks found it practically impossible to combine the names in any satisfactory manner. There were objectionable features which argued against the adoption of a completely new name, and it was finally agreed that the bank should take the name of the Lenawee County Savings bank.

The consolidated bank will start with a capital stock of $150,000, surplus of $50,000 and individed profits of $10,000, The merger will entail resourses approaching the $2,000,000 mar . It is announced that the consolidation will be consummated on Monday, August 2.

Both bank buildings will be utilized for the new institution. The savings department will be located in the Lenawee County Savings bank building, and the commercial department in the Waldby & Clay State bank building.

The merger will take the Lenawee County Savings bank from a field in which it had stood almost alone, that of an exclusively savings bank. During the past year it has been one of two such institutions in the state. The Wayne County Savings bank in Detroit, formerly was another, but its merger with the Home Savings bank of Detroit took it out of that class. This merger will leave but one such bank in the field, the United Savings of Detroit.

PIONEER CAREER INVOLVED.

At the same time, the Waldby & Clay organization will emerge from a pioneer career, being the second oldest bank in the state of Michigan. The oldest bank eclipses its record only by a year. It was founded on December 12, 1850, by Ira Bidwell and William H. Waldby, and has done business in the same quarters ever since that date. The Lenawee County Savings bank was founded in 1869.

The heavy business responsibilities which have devolved upon the shoulders of the men respectively at the heads of these two old institutions are said largely to have been responsible for the merging of their organizations. H. B. Waldby, head of the Waldby & Clay's State bank is a pioneer of the active financial men of the city, having been connected with the affairs of the city for a life time.

H. V. C. Hart, president of the Lenawee County Savings bank, also has been long identified with the financial affairs of the city Mr. Hart's connection with the Lenawee County Savings bank commenced in the fall of 1876, and he has served it continously from that time.—Adrian Telegram, July 21.

HOWE'S GREAT LONDON SHOW

Friday, July 30.

The Howe's Great London Show is coming here, and the date set for its coming is Friday, July 30. Too much importance can not be attached to the date this show will be here, for no one will care to miss seeing what is admitted to be the very best aggregation now before the people. With three rings, splendid menagerie and a museum full of wonders, it is not to be surprised at that it has attained the reputation of being second to none.

The show is far from being a new one as far as its title is concerned, for it has been catering successfully to the amusement loving people for the past generation and is one of the few shows that has endured and thrived with age. This may be attributed solely to the fact that it has always kept just ahead of the times and in advance of all other similar aggregations. Merit has always been the motto of the show, and this has been sustained above all other considerations. Another factor in its succes has been the treatment that at all times has been accorded its patrons. Exaggerated forms of advertising have been eliminated from its advance heralding; idle boasts are foreign to its policy, and, in fact, there is nothing in any way misleading that is tolerated by the management of this gigantic aggregation. The patrons have always been the first consideration both as to their safety and comfort and the quality of the performance given them.

The show will arrive on its own trains of double-length cars and will spread acres of canvas to care for the people who will flock to it. The main tent has a seating capacity of 10,000. All of the tents are absolutely sun and waterproof, and the system of lighting at night is the most perfect in use by any show.

LISTEN!

This story is short and a little out of the ordinary, so PLEASE read it all—it's about FIXTURES.

Clothes wear out; so do hats and gloves and other things. Fixtures don't; they get dingy and tarnished and old fashioned, but they don't wear out.

Hence a good many people seem to think the same old fixtures they grew up with must stay there indefinitely, waiting for a fire or an earthquake.

It is'nt so. You owe it to yourself and to your family to realize that entirely aside from artistic considerations, the present methods of lighting are RADICALLY DIFFERENT from those of a few years ago, in their influence on comfort and eyesight—and it will PAY YOU TO KNOW whether you are getting adequate and PROPERLY DISTRIBUTED light or not.

When the family physician advises a change in diet, he knows what he's talking about—it's for your good. If we advise a change in type or location of fixtures it's because WE KNOW what we're talking about—its our business.

Just drop in at our office any time, step into our fixture room, designed especially to show you modern electric light fixtures.

—YOU CAN'T BE SORRY AND YOU MAY BE GLAD.

Very truly yours,
THE TECUMSEH ELECTRIC CO.

SUBMARINE SINKS ITALIAN CRUISER

FOUNDERED WITHIN 15 MINUTES

Armored Battleship of 7,234 Tons Displacement is Destroyed in Adriatic Sea South of Ragasa—Two Austrian Submarines Are Missing—Norwegian Steamer Torpedoed.

BERLIN — The following official communication was received here from Vienna, under date of July 18:

"An Austrian submarine torpedoed and sank, south of Ragasa, the Italian cruiser Giuseppe Garibaldi. The cruiser foundered within fifteen minutes."

The Giuseppe Garibaldi was an armored cruiser of 7,234 tons displacement. She was 344 feet long and was laid down in 1898. He complement was 550 men. She was armed with one 10 inch, two 8 inch, fourteen 6 inch and ten 3 inch guns.

Ragusa is a fortified seaport of Austria-Hungary, in Dalmatia, on a peninsula of the Adriatic sea, thirty-eight miles northwest of Cattaro.

Two Austrian Submarines Missing.

PARIS — A telegram from a Rome news agency says that a refugee, who has reached Rome from Pola the Austrian naval base, says two Austrian submarines which left to reconnoiter the Italian coast have not returned and are believed to have been lost.

On of the submarines had a crew of twenty, the other a crew of forty. Their supplies of gasoline were sufficient for only four days.

Norwegian Steamer Torpedoed.

LONDON, ENG. — The Norwegian steamer Bellgrade, from Halifax for Sharpness, timber laden, was towed into Milford Haven after having been torpedoed.

COTTON IS NOT CONTRABAND

British Government Decides It Unwise to Disregard Southern States.

LONDON, ENG.—The government's decision not to declare cotton contraband was affirmed by the house of lords. The marquis of Crewe, president of the council, speaking on this subject, said that the strangle hold which the British navy has upon Germany's trade makes such a measure wholly unnecessary.

"There is no use in disguising the fact either," he said, "that to make cotton contraband would cause no small amount of alarm and disturbance in the United States, especially in the cotton states. It would be unwise to disregard American opinion, even though we believed that Americans labored under misapprehension."

Truth or Fiction?

"Ah, what a difference there is," remarked the cynic wearily, "between courtship and marriage! Courtship is made up of soft nothings—marriage of hard facts."

Every Tecumseh resident should read what a neighbor says. His testimony can be relied upon. Here are his own words.

W. C. Witherell, W. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, says: "I had acute pains across the small of my back and in my hips. Often, after stooping, a sharp twinge darted through my loins obliging me to lie down. I was laid in bed for several days and I believe that the trouble was caused by excessive stooping. When I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and a few boxes restored me to good health. Since then, whenever I have felt in need of a kidney medicine, I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and the results have been very pleasing. I have had no reason to change my high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills, which I expressed some years ago."

SAFE BLOWN TWICE IN YEAR

Counterfeiters Are Suspected of Having Hand in Deed.

SAGINAW, MICH. — The safe in the drug store of Barabin & Gould, St. Charles, was blown for the second time this year. About $5 was taken. The officers have discovered that counterfeiters have been working in that section of Saginaw county and flooded the village with coins of small denomination.

Two men were seen leaving in an automobile immediately after the safe was blown. No arrests have been made.

Boots That Were Trousers.

As leather is in such demand nowadays, it is fortunate that present day boots are made on a more economical plan than those in vogue at the time of the peninsular war and for many years after. Hessians, which were then the fashion, absorbed what would now be considered an unnecessary amount of leather. These boots, according to G. A. Sala, were "worn over tight fitting pantaloons, the up peaking front almost touching the knee and bearing a silk tassel, the back part sloped to the calf, being full below and with a high heel. Such was the correct form of footgear till the introduction of trousers."—Pall Mall Gazette.

DYNAMITE UNDER BAR ROOM

Attempt Made to Blow up Road House in Livonia Township.

STARK, MICH. — Livonia township was shocked by the belated discovery that eight sticks of 60 per cent dynamite had been found ten days ago under the road house of Hemingway and Fair on the Plymouth road.

The only possible motive which can be ascribed for the attempt to destroy the road house is in connection with the recent local option fight staged in Livonia township last spring when Plymouth and Northville villages went dry.

Eskimo Courtship.

If European death scenes astonish the consenting "Yes" of a bride at marriage shocks an Eskimo woman. Not only must a bride show herself unconsenting; she must, if she respects herself and tribal traditions, scream and struggle with all her might when her wooer or his envoy enters her family residence and, laying hold upon her, drags her (usually by the topknot) to her new home. She may be presented with a new lamp and water pail by her bridegroom, and she is as a general thing mightily pleased at her change of estate. But she is far too circumspect to show her pleasure or affection and keeps up a noisy demonstration until she feels that she has done all that a well bred maiden should do.

GOVERNOR PAROLES BRIDE AND GROOM

Married in Jail in January, Shoplifters Are Free.

LANSING, MICH. — Mrs. Willard Hamilton, formerly Miss Beatrice Kelley of Saginaw met this morning, her husband, whom she has not seen since they were married in the Ingham County jail last January. After the ceremony the bride and groom were started to prison; she to the Detroit house of correction and he to the Michigan reformatory for one to five years. They had been convicted of larceny from Jackson and Lansing stores.

The reunion of the young couple was brought about by paroles issued by Governor Ferris. Friends of the young people told him that Mrs. Hamilton is soon to become a mother. A position has been secured for Hamilton and he will go to work as soon as he reaches Lansing. Mrs. Hamilton is with friends here.

The parents of young Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. William Hamilton, are serving sentences for the same offense committed by their son. The father is in Jackson for two and one-half years and the mother is serving a short sentence in the house of correction.

LIVE STOCK POINTERS.

Swill sours very quickly in warm weather. Keep the troughs clean, because the pigs never thrive on rotten food of any kind.

The man who is a poor feeder might as well not begin to handle high class stock. He is out of the game at the start.

Always keep a mixture of charcoal, wood ashes, lime, sulphur, salt and copperas before the hogs.

Either clover or alfalfa hay, corn and cottonseed meal are the cheapest and most efficient feeds that you can use together with corn silage for fattening steers.

Feed more oats and alfalfa and less corn now, as corn lacks sufficient muscle making protein for the working horse.

FEEDING COTTONSEED MEAL TO BEEF CATTLE

(Prepared by United States department of agriculture.)

Only within recent years has cottonseed meal as a feed for cattle been generally recognized in the north and west, although it has been used for feed in the south for many years. The past winter saw prices of cottonseed meal relatively low—from $24 to $28 per ton in the south—and at these figures it was preferable to linseed oil meal, which sold below $38 per ton. When considering concentrated feed like cottonseed meal or linseed oil meal the cost of the two commodities should be compared and the cheaper one used, according to the new farmer's bulletin No. 655, "Cottonseed Meal For Feeding Beef Cattle." The experiments outlined in this bulletin cover several years' work, in which beef calves were fed cottonseed meal, varying the periods without detrimental effects. In one experiment the daily ration of three lots of calves was divided as follows:

Lot No. 2.—Cottonseed meal, 2.34 pounds; corn on cob meal, 1.47 pounds; cottonseed hulls, 7.50 pounds; mixed alfalfa hay, 5.47 pounds.

Lot No. 3.—Cottonseed meal, 2.38 pounds; corn or cob meal, 3.87 pounds; cottonseed hulls, 7.33 pounds; mixed alfalfa hay, 4 pounds.

In the experiment seventy-seven calves were fed from Nov. 17 to March 17 (119 days). The first lot made a total gain of 203 pounds, the second 210 pounds, and the third 218 pounds.

A southern steer fed through the winter and marketed to advantage in the spring. The usual practice has been to sell "off grass" in the autumn.

Another ration including 3.08 pounds of cottonseed meal, 10.01 pounds of cottonseed hulls and 1.50 pounds of mixed cowpea hay was fed to a lot of fifty-two calves for a period of 112 days. On this ration the calves averaged 1.24 pounds per day. They fattened readily and none of them showed ill effects from feeding the meal.

The bulletin also records other experiments in which calves were fed an average of 4.4 pounds of cottonseed meal per day for a period of seventy-six days, and at the end of the period were eating about six pounds daily, with no ill effects shown. However, farmers are warned to feed cottonseed meal sparingly, if at all, to very young calves. This question has not been thoroughly investigated as yet, and until more knowledge is at the disposal of the specialists they consider it advisable to be on the safe side.

In the new publication of the department one pound of cottonseed meal is said to be usually worth as much as two pounds of corn for feeding cattle. There is, however, a distinct limit to the quantity of the meal that animals can use economically. In the south it was formerly the custom to feed steers very heavily on the byproducts of the cottonseed oil mills, twelve to fifteen pounds of meal a day being a not infrequent ration. Such heavy feeding frequently caused blindness and death, while in other cases the steers after gaining fast in weight for a period of ninety days or more lost flesh with equal rapidity and could be with difficulty got back into good condition. Experiments have shown, however, that when the ration is kept below seven pounds a day steers can be fed for 100 to 120 days upon it without showing ill effects. If silage is given at the same time as roughage the feeding of cottonseed meal can be prolonged beyond this time with safety. Silage is a better roughage to use with meal than cottonseed hulls, as experiments in several states have shown that it gives larger daily gains and better finish.

SHE WEARS GLOVES NOW.

W. C. T. U. Mortgage Is Cleared, and Woman Is Happy.

Pasadena.—For the first time in twenty-five years Mrs. H. P. Anderson of Burbank put on a few days ago a pair of kid gloves. Mrs. Anderson, who is a delegate to the convention of the Southern California Woman's Christian Temperance union, had resolved that she would wear no gloves until a mortgage on the Los Angeles W. C. T. U. temple was paid.

The debt, which originally amounted to $30,000, was cleared by funds made available from a legacy of $25,000 left by Samuel Little.

Instinct and Reason.

The term "instinct" is supposed to refer to the intelligence which leads to the performance of actions that are adaptive in character, but pursued without necessary knowledge of the relation between the means employed and the ends attained, while "reason" is supposed to be aware of such knowledge and to work accordingly.—New York American.

Scientific Farming

ELECTRIC POWER AND LIGHT.

By FRANK KOESTER.

[Author of "Electricity For the Farm and Home."]

Many farms are served by lines from city or other electric stations, and in many of the states the long distance transmission lines of numerous hydro-electric plants pass through farming communities more or less populated. These systems are usually of high tension, varying from 13,000 to 60,000, even as high as 150,000 volts. These high voltages are not used directly in motors, but must be reduced by transformers to a suitable value, depending on the nature of the purpose to which the motor is to be applied. Likewise for use on farms and in country residences a transformer must be had to furnish a supply of current at a low voltage value for local distribution.

Where large tracts are to be covered on a single farm practice has proved that a voltage of about 13,000 is most suitable, intermediate stationary or portable transformers being used to step the voltage down to that desired on the motors of the plows, thrashing machines, etc.

POWER STATION ON A FARM IN NEW YORK STATE.

It is generally recognized that central stations and public utility companies are the best sources of supply from which to draw electricity, owing to their reliability, cheapness and convenience.

When the user, however, is located beyond the reach of the distributing lines of central station companies it is necessary to install an isolated plant to supply light, heat and power, and such a plant is a much more profitable investment than the installation of other kinds of power, such as individual gas, oil or steam engines, to operate the different farm machines.

For the purpose of generating electricity in isolated plants various forms of power are utilized, depending on the locality and the source of fuel or water supply.

A practice much adopted abroad, particularly in Germany, where the government encourages electrically operated farms, is to install rural central stations for the purpose of supplying a number of farms, rural industries, country residences and estates with electric current. By establishing such a station, with either a steam, water, oil or gas plant, a great saving in the production of electric energy may be readily secured. Today in Germany often as high as 100 to 150 consumers are supplied with electric energy from a single rural central station such as have been installed in great numbers within the last fifteen years.

In northern Italy and throughout Switzerland also there is considerable use of the electric energy in agriculture and by small rural communities. A network of distributing lines has been formed, drawing energy from numerous and scattered sources of hydro-electric power, which are, however, interconnected. The Swiss and Italian land proprietors and small farmers throughout western Europe have taken in large numbers to the use of electric light and electric power.

Many of the German farmers carry on industries in connection with their farms, whereby they utilize their byproducts, and this is the secret of the success of many well to do men. For instance, one rural central station system may serve four grist mills with five motors, having a total capacity of 105 horsepower, one tile works with a 40 horsepower motor, one sawmill with a 20 horsepower motor, four wheelwrights with motors consuming 16 horsepower and many other industries, such as cabinet making, distilling, blacksmithing, bottling works, etc., which use motors of various capacities. There are also served by the system some twenty consumers for light only, having a total of 243 incandescent lamps and five arc lamps, one railway and freight station with 120 incandescent lamps, one clubhouse with seventy-two lamps and six arc lights, and, in addition to this, two towns are supplied, having a total of 1,602 lamps.

From the above facts and figures it is obvious that electricity can give a new stimulus to agriculture and farming, and at the same time open a new way by which the rural population can be induced to remain on the farm instead of flocking to the cities.

The Cold Winter.

The winter of 1709 is called by distinction "the cold winter." All the rivers and lakes of Europe were frozen over, and so was the sea for several miles from the shore. In England the ground was frozen nine feet deep. Birds and beasts died in the fields, and men perished by thousands in their houses. In the south of France the olive trees were killed and wine plantations destroyed. The Adriatic sea was frozen and even the Mediterranean about Genoa. The citron and orange groves suffered in Italy.

U. S. TANKER AGAIN SEIZED

Standard Oil Steamer For Third Time Detained by British.

LONDON, ENG. — The Standard Oil company tank steamship Platuria, from New York May 25 for Oskarshamn, Sweden, again is in the hands of the British admiralty, having been seized and taken to Kirkwall, Scotland. The tanker carries a cargo of oil for Scandinavian ports.

This is the third time the Platuria has been detained by the British naval authorities.

ORGANIZE WOMEN FOR HOME EDUCATION

Mrs. Schoff Has Already Enrolled Over 20,000 Members.

Washington.—The bureau of education is much interested in the tour of the country in the interest of home education by the National Congress of Mothers' and Parent Teachers' associations.

"While child welfare conferences are being held by the state branches of the Congress of Mothers in Alabama, Georgia, Connecticut, Mississippi, Missouri, Maryland, New Hampshire, Utah and Wisconsin," the bureau announced, "the officers and leaders of the congress, accompanied by representatives of the bureau of education, are crossing the continent, holding organization meetings in many of the western states. This tour is intended to make the benefits of the annual conference felt as widely as possible.

MRS. FREDERIC SCHOFF

"This year's work of the congress is in close connection with the home education division of the bureau of education. Mrs. Frederic Schoff, president of the National Mothers' Congress is director of the home education division, which since its organization in September, 1913, has enrolled over 20,000 women from all parts of the country interested and able to co-operate in organizing parents for study of child nature and child making.

"The plan of the home education work, as revealed in the Congress of Mothers and in the home education division, is 'the organization of the parenthood of the world for study of childhood's needs and for the promotion of child welfare.' In the conferences which the congress proposes to hold some of the topics to be discussed are 'Peace,' 'Encouragement in Habits of Thrift and Industry,' 'Spiritual Development of Children' and 'Helping Wayward Children.'"

RADIUM EXPERT SAILS.

Dr. Bissell Will Treat Wounded in London Hospital.

New York.—Dr. Joseph B. Bissell, radium expert in the Bellevue and St. Vincent's hospitals, sailed for England on the Philadelphia.

Dr. Bissell has been invited to do special work in St. Mary's hospital, in London, with radium and radium solutions in the treatment of infected wounds. He will study the methods of radium treatment employed at the Radium Institute of London and at similar institutions in Edinburgh, Manchester and Dublin. He has also been invited to visit the Paris Radium institute.

Dr. Bissell has the largest amount of radium possessed by any one person in New York city and is suggested as managing director of the radium institute being planned by philanthropists of this city.

PLANNING TO REMODEL ENTIRE CHINESE ARMY

Soldiers Will Be Equipped With Uniform Weapons.

Peking.—China's military forces are to be remodeled from top to bottom. As a first step arms of the line regiments are to be unified.

A most important conference has just been held at the Winter palace, the residence of Yuan Shih Kai. There were present, in addition to the president and his cabinet and the highest ranking military and naval officers, several of the most influential Chinese not officially connected with the government.

Problems of national defense were touched upon in a brief speech by the president, who made it clear that he regards war as the greatest among apparently necessary evils. His words made a deep impression upon those present, and in the discussion which followed there was absolutely single mindedness in indorsing Yuan's position. The conference decided that new docks were absolutely necessary; that the arsenals must be modernized and expanded; that service in the army must be popularized and adequately compensated; that coast defenses must be established and, where obsolete or inadequate, reconstructed, and that naval bases must be provided for north and south China.

The principal decision, however, was that of providing for the unification of Chinese armaments. The six army divisions, investigation has proved, use ten or more different types of guns. It is proposed to replace these with one style which will possess the best features of the best modern weapon.

Be Sure You Get This Old Reliable Cough Medicine

Imitations always follow the trail of success. Hundreds of imitations have come and gone since FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND began, 40 years ago, to loosen the grip of coughs and colds.

Be sure you get the genuine

Foley's Honey and Tar Compound

And avoid the names that sound like it.

Here are three easy ways to tell the genuine. 1st—The name of "Foley's." 2nd—The yellow package. 3rd—The Beehive on the yellow package. You cannot get a substitute to do for you what FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND will do—for coughs, colds, croup, bronchial and lagrippe coughs, throat and lung trouble. CONVERSATION.

The great secret of succeeding in conversation is to admire little, to hear much; always to distrust our own reason and sometimes that of our friends; never to pretend to wit, but to make that of others appear as much as possibly we can; to hearken to what is said and to answer to the purpose.—Benjamin Franklin.

Father Time will have turned 7 days more over since the "upheaval" of one week ago when Tecumseh Village was visited by so many good natured fun making old and young people. Everybody cut loose and let her go for once and the little old town was a spot of fun and laughter. There were a good many things happened that all didn't see there were shake ins and shake outs, shake downs and ups as about 1000 pounds of tickling paper, (as the small boy called it) was thrown down the low cut dresses and among the raven black hair of the fair maids who swarmed our streets from 7 to 11 o'clock. I was an eye witness to the greatest shake out I ever saw. The best of all no one got mad, no one got hurt, only a few feelings of some old maid whom a boy could not tickle with a ton of "tickling paper." There is no assurance of a repeater but the committee in charge have some good things up their sleeve for us all.

Remember the days, each Wednesday for a long time yet.

I liked to forgot to mention my business but I hope you have not. Please look at my special for Wednesday, July 28, take advantage of my offerings and keep your feet going right. You can do it if you wear BELCHER'S SHOES.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT NEWBURG

Little Child Found Dead Under a Motorcycle.

The community of Newburg was shocked Friday morning to learn of the sudden death of little Margeret, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Butler who live on the Lydia Coryell farm just west of Newberg corners

About 10:30 Mrs. Butler who had missed the little one for a few moments asked some boys who were playing in the yard to look for her. Gabriel French a neighbor boy came and told the mother that Margaret was asleep under the motorcycle in the barn. Life was extinct when she was found. Her neck and one limb were broken and her body badly bruised. Dr. Hardy was called at once but it was to late.

It was not thought necessary to hold an inquest in view of the circumstances

Little Margeret was the youngest of four children and was between 2 or 3 years of age. The motorcycle belonged to the eldest son. Mr. Butler moved on the Coryell farm a year ago last spring. The whole community mourn with them in their terrible bereavement. The remains of the little one was taken to Adrian Friday afternoon. The funeral will be held at ten o'clock from Motts Chapel Sunday burial in Adrian.

TWO MORE DEAD IN STANDARD OIL STRIKE

Four Others Probably Fatally Hurt at Bayonne, N. J.

New York, July 23.—The fight between the Standard Oil company of New Jersey and the strikers at the Constable Hook plant in Bayonne continued with a greater violence than ever. Two dead, four men probably fatally injured and at least a dozen others injured by bullets and bricks were the total casualties in the duel of rifles, revolvers and stones between the strikers and the guards of the Standard's plant and its subsidiary, the Tidewater Oil company.

Both were shot dead. In addition eight other strikers were hurt by bullets and three of those may die.

In the fire aimed by the guards at the crowds composed of strikers, noncombatants and women and children, one girl, two boys and several bystanders, were hurt.

Three guards of the company were hurt. One of them was attacked and beaten up so badly by the strikers that he is in a critical condition. Another guard was shot through the wrist and still another was injured by falling from a building in the course of a fusillade. The company's plant was damaged slightly by four fires that the strikers started in the course of the day with the aim of destroying the extensive oil plants.

MISSES BRIDGE, WOMAN DEAD

Members of Cincinnati Party Pinned Under Wrecked Auto.

Brookville, Ind., July 23.—An automobile, carrying a party of five people on a trip from Cincinnati, O., to Indianapolis, ran off a culvert about a mile west of Brookville, turned over and pinned the passengers under the car, killing Mrs. Mary Canfield instantly, Mrs. Mabel Conners was seriously injured. Mrs. Sarah Devine has a fractured skull and John Runyan was badly burned. Miss Nellie Henry was not injured. The members of the party all reside in Cincinnati.

MISS IDA CHASE

"Breathe there a man with soul so dead
Who ever to himself has said (with apologies)
'A woman cannot do business!'"

Let that same man come to our "biggest little town" and we will show him an assortment of business women not equalled by any town of our size in the state. We have telephone manager newspaper women, insurance agents, milliners and others of the fair sex owning and running paying business concerns on our main street of whom we are exceedingly proud.

One of our best business women owns and conducts "The Novelty Store." Miss Ida Chase, upon the death of her uncle Jas. Montague, for whom she had clerked for several years, took over the business which had already made its reputation good.

The stock was mostly made up of china and dinner ware, novelties and toys. Within the last few years Miss Chase has added a complete line of ladies and childrens ready-to-wear goods and materially increased the lines formerly carried. In the past month she has rearranged the interior making it far more convenient for both customer and clerk.

SATTERTHWAITE BROS.

Are conducting one of the most complete hardware establishments in Southern Michigan. The two brothers, Newton and Newbold have been connected with this business since, when as mere boys, they began clerking for Sutton & Swan, whose store was in the building now occupied by Lowry's grocery. In 1883 the brothers bought of N. M. Sutton his interest and in 1885, Jas. Boyd purchased Benj. Swan's share in the concern, running as Satterthwaite Bros. & Boyd until 1891 when Mr. Boyd sold out to his partners.

SATTERTHWAITE BROS., Hardware

While yet the firm name was Sutton & Swan the stock was moved to the present location in January 1875 and in 1897 the Adams store just east was bought by the firm and the two stores united with arch ways.

Both stores are packed full and they carry a complete line of builder's hardware, furnishing all hard ware entering into the construction of any building including roofing, sanitary plumbing, hot air, hot water or steam heating and electrical work.

They give especial attention to their sporting goods department and in their east show room it is stoves, stoves They congratulate themselves with especial pride upon the long record list of sales of the genuine Beckwith "Round Oak" and the celebrated "Garland" and "Peninsular" stoves and ranges

They have in their imploy an expert plumber and warrant any job of plumbing or sheet iron work turned out by their establishment.

Awnings, and horse clothing are no mean portion of their stock

It is hardly necessary to invite the public of Tecumseh to a place of business where they have been welcomed all these years but those who desire anything in this line will find it to their interest to call on Satterthwaite Bros. and may be assured of the same gentlemanly treatment which has been characteristic of the house in the past.

MGR. QUIGLEY LEAVES $75,000

Several Relatives Are Beneficiaries of Archbishop's Estate.

Chicago, July 23.—The will of the late Archbishop James E. Quigley of Chicago, who died in Rochester, N. Y., July 10, disposing of personal property and real estate valued at $75,000, was probated. Appearance of all heirs was filed and the will was admitted to probate fifteen minutes later.

The estate consists of $15,000 in currency, two life insurance policies, one for $25,000 and the other for $10,000, and real estate to the value of $25,000 in the diocese of Buffalo.

WINNINGS TURN INTO BRICK

Farmer Comes Out $1,000 Ahead in Game, but Loses $2,040.

Wabash, Ind., July 23.—William Rautencrantz, a wealthy farmer, consented to play a game of poker with two strangers who appeared at his farm. He won $1,000. The money was placed in a suit case with $2,040 more of his money. When the strangers left Rautencrantz promised to leave the money in the suit case for a day, when another game was to be played.

The next evening the case was opened. It contained a brick.

No Reason For It?

Middletown, Ind., July 23.—Floyd Neighbors, twenty-eight years old, a Newcastle painter, committed suicide by drinking poison in a pool room here. No reason for his act is known.

Announcement

Of Consolidation

Waldby & Clay's State Bank

Lenawee County Savings Bank

To the Public:

We take pleasure in announcing that on August 2nd these two old landmarks of Lenawee County's banking will consolidate and become one. All the necessary legal procedure has been taken and ratified by the Stockholders and the State Banking Department.

As a combination of the two names was of unworkable length, it has been decided to adopt the title of Lenawee County Savings Bank, as the name by which the consolidation shall be known. We wish to say, however, that the bank will be owned equally by the stockholders of the old institutions. All of the old officers, directors and employees will be retained.

Both bank buildings will be used, as heretofore, with this exception: The entire savings department will be located at the present Lenawee County Savings Bank building and the commercial department operated in the old Waldby & Clay State Bank building.

In closing we desire to say that the same methods will obtain in the future as have successfully carried these old institutions through all their years of honorable banking. Capital stock, $150,000.00; surplus, $50,000.00; undivided profits, $10,000.00.

Below are the names of our officers and directors;

H. V. C. Hart, President. H. B. Waldby, Chairman.
P. S. Moreland, Vice-Pres.; C. D. Hardy, Active Vice-Pres.; D. B. Morgan, Vice-Pres
J. C. Murphy, Cashier; E. A. Newton and F. E. Ash, Assistant Cashiers.

LISTEN!

This story is short and a little out of the ordinary, so PLEASE read it all—it's about FIXTURES.

Clothes wear out; so do hats and gloves and other things. Fixtures don't; they get dingy and tarnished and old fashioned, but they don't wear out.

Hence a good many people seem to think the same old fixtures they grew up with must stay there indefinitely, waiting for a fire or an earthquake.

It is'nt so. You owe it to yourself and to your family to realize that entirely aside from artistic considerations, the present methods of lighting are RADICALLY DIFFERENT from those of a few years ago, in their influence on comfort and eyesight—and it will PAY YOU TO KNOW whether you are getting adequate and PROPERLY DISTRIBUTED light or not.

When the family physician advises a change in diet, he knows what he's talking about—it's for your good. If we advise a change in type or location of fixtures it's because WE KNOW what WE'RE talking about—its our business.

Just drop in at our office any time, step into our fixture room, designed especially to show you modern electric light fixtures.

YOU CAN'T BE SORRY AND YOU MAY BE GLAD.

Very truly yours,
THE TECUMSEH ELECTRIC CO.

CARRANZA IS CALLED TO ACCOUNT BY U. S.

Mexican Chief Violates Neutrality Pact at Naco.

Washington, July 23.—An issue has been joined between the United States and the Carranza faction in Mexico that may force the hands of this government in its relations with the republic south of the border.

Carranza has violated the neutrality of Naco, just across the line from Nogales, Ariz., and sharp representations have been sent to him in which he has been called upon to withdraw his troops from that town. If Carranza should refuse or fail to act in accordance with this injunction it would be incumbent upon the United States either to enforce the neutrality of Naco by the use of troops, or resort to other measures that might lead to immediate serious consequences. The belief is quite general that if the administration is disposed to intervene in Mexico that the opportunity will be afforded in the event of the failure of Carranza to withdraw his army from Naco.

Naco was made a neutral town because fighting in the neighborhood menaced American life and property in Nogales.

PRESIDENT MAY CALL CONGRESS

Or He May Break Off Diplomatic Relations With Germany.

NOTE IS PROBABLY IN BERLIN

Washington, July 23.—With the understanding that the latest reply of the United States to Germany on the Lusitania case is probably by this time in the hands of the German foreign office, state department officials have turned their attention to considering the effect which the communication is likely to have.

The officials are also considering the limit of action by this government in the event that Germany and the United States, in the judgment of officials who are conducting the negotiations, are these:

The United States has told Germany that any future destruction of American life on merchant vessels without warning by submarines, would be regarded by the United States as a flagrant "unfriendly act."

The statement, however, creates two grave problems and obligations for the United States if Germany should ignore the warning.

Only Alternative.

An official explains that the United States could do only one of two things if there should be another tragedy:

"One," said this official, "would be to break off diplomatic relations with Germany.

"The other would be for the president to report the fact to congress and to send to it the whole diplomatic correspondence on the subject of the Lusitania and the general controversy.

Cites Venezuela Case.

"This was what was done when the United States could get no satisfaction out of the Republic of Venezuela during the Roosevelt administration. In that case diplomacy had reached the end of its functions by severing diplomatic relations with that country."

It is thought by some officials that if there should be any notable marine disaster, caused by Germany, involving the loss of a number of American lives before the regular session of congress, the president might be advised by the state department that it could no longer handle the matter and that congress should be called in extra session.

HOWE'S GREAT LONDON SHOW

On Friday July 30 the Howe Great London Show is to be here, and that it is to be here is something that all lovers of good, pure wholesome amusement should feel thankful for. There is no better show on the road today, and no show ever came to this section better recommended than this one,

For the few there may be who are not acquainted with this gagantic show, it will not be out of place to state that it is the recognized leader of all three ring shows in the country. At the same time it will not be presuming to say that the menagerie with the show is the best from a standpoint of value ever assembled. It contains more rare specimens of the animal kindom than any other similar organization. When this statement is made it is made without the least fear of contradiction, for the show has laid claim to only just what it has ever since its conception. The performance given is by the very best of artists who have been most carefully selected regardless of cost for their proficiency in the different lines assigned to them. It is not the show that offers one great feature and surrounds this features with a number of cheap acts to make up a lengthy program. Every act with this show with any other would be a strongly advertised feature. The very best of riders, acrobats, gymnasts, aerialists, tumblers, leapers, clowns, wire walkers and, in fact, all performers are with the Howe Great London Show. The same may be truthfully applied to the other departments. The trained animal exhibitions are better than any other show would care to offer in connection with the other attractions, as it is a show in itself. Everything is of the best and for the best. Undoubtedly when the show comes here on Friday, July 30, it will receive the patronage it so well deserves. People should realize that it pays to visit such a show as this, and it is hoped they will do so as to insure its coming again.

Puts Quality Before Price

BUICK DEALER DECLARES MOTOR CAR SERVICE IS ALL IMPORTANT FACTOR

Speaks from Experience

TECUMSEH GARAGE DEFINES POLICIES ON WHICH COMPANY HAS BUILT SUCCESS

Now that most of the motor companies have made their 1916 announcements there is a great deal of talk in motoring circles concerning the prices at which the new cars are to be sold, Along with these discussions there has also been much talk concerning the lowest price at which a satisfactory motor car can be marketed.

"The average motor car buyer has a tendency to look at these questions from a mistaken perspective," said Williamson local retailer of Buick cars, recently. "A great many of our automobile buying friends do not take sufficient pains to make sure of getting a satisfactory car. They pay the closest attention to price, because price is the thing that concerns them most at the time of making their purchase. Later, however, they find out that motor car service is vastly more important than motor car price

"There is a minimum below which it is impossible to sell a satisfactory motor car; that is, a car that will give satisfactory service. The Buick Motor company always has been guided by that great truth in making and selling cars. Buick prices are made as low as it is possible to make them, and at the same time deliver a car that will give the motoring satisfaction the average buyer expects.

"Buick cars could be made to sell for less, but they wouldn't be as good as the Buick cars they are now making. We probably could sell a great many more Buicks if they were to make the kind of cars that would justify a lower price; but they prefer to keep our quality standards at their present high level. We are positive that this policy will pay us and pay our customers in the long run."

The FORESTER'S DAUGHTER

A ROMANCE OF THE BEAR TOOTH RANGE

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1914, by Hamlin Garland

He turned from the scene reluctantly, but once at the campfire cheerfully gave his best efforts to the work in hand, seconding Berrie's skill as best he could.

The trout, deliciously crisp, and some potatoes and batter cakes made a meal that tempted even his faint appetite, and when the dishes were washed and the towels hung out to dry deep night possessed even the high summit of stately Ptarmigan.

McFarlane then said, "I'll just take a little turn to see that the horses are all right, and then I think we'd better close in for the night."

When they were alone in the light of the fire Wayland turned to Berrie: "I'm glad you're here. It must be lonesome to camp alone in a wilderness, and yet, I suppose, I must learn to do it."

"Yes, the ranger often has to camp alone, ride alone and work alone for weeks at a time," she assured him. "A good trailer don't mind a night trip any more than he does a day trip, or if he does he never admits it. Rain, snow, darkness, are all the same to him. Most of the boys are fifteen to forty miles from the postoffice."

He smiled ruefully. "I begin to have new doubts about this ranger business. It's a little more vigorous than I thought it was. Suppose a fellow breaks a leg on one of those high trails?"

"He mustn't!" she hastened to say. "He can't afford really to take reckless chances; but, then, father won't expect as much of you as he does of the old stagers. You'll have plenty of time to get used to it."

McFarlane upon his return gave some advice relating to the care of horses. "All this stock which is accustomed to a barn or a pasture will quit you," he warned. "Watch your bronchos. Put them on the outward side of your camp when you bed down and pitch your tent near the trail, then you will hear the brutes if they start back. Some men tie their stock all up, but I usually picket my saddle horse and hobble the rest."

It was a delightful hour for schooling, and Wayland would have been content to sit there till morning listening, but the air bit, and at last the supervisor asked: "Have you made your bed? If you have turn in. I shall get you out early tomorrow." As he saw the bed he added: "I see you've laid out a bed of boughs. That shows how eastern you are. We don't do that out here. It's too cold in this climate, and it's too much work. You want to hug the ground—if it's dry."

The weary youth went to his couch with a sense of timorous elation, for he never before slept beneath the open sky.

After the supervisor had rolled himself in the blanket, long after all sounds had ceased in the tent, there still remained for the youth a score of manifold excitations to wakefulness till at last he fell into an uneasy drowse.

CHAPTER VII.

Storm Bound.

WAYLAND was awakened by the mellow voice of his chief calling: "All out! All out! Daylight down the creek!" Then, breathing a prayer of thankfulness, the boy sat up and looked about him. "The long night is over at last, and I am alive," he said and congratulated himself.

"How did you sleep?" asked the supervisor.

"My blankets did seem a trifle thin," confessed Norcross.

"It doesn't pay to sleep cold," the supervisor went on. "A man wants to wake up refreshed, not tired out with fighting the night wind and frost. I always carry a good bed."

It was instructive to see how quietly and methodically the old mountaineer went about his task of getting breakfast. First he cut and laid a couple of eight inch logs on either side of the fire, so that the wind drew through them properly; then, placing the Dutch oven cover on the fire, he laid the bottom part where the flames touched it. Next he filled his coffeepot with water and set it on the coals. From his pannier he took his dishes and the flour and salt and pepper, arranging them all within reach, and at last laid some slices of bacon in the skillet.

At this stage of the work a smothered cry, half yawn, half complaint, came from the tent. "Oh, hum! Is it morning?" inquired Berrie.

"Morning," replied her father. "It's going toward noon. You get up or you'll have no breakfast."

Thereupon Wayland called: "Can I get you anything, Miss Berrie? Would you like some warm water?"

"What for?" interposed McFarlane before the girl could reply.

"To bathe in," replied the youth.

"To bathe in! If a daughter of mine should ask for warm water to wash with I'd throw her in the creek."

Berrie chuckled. "Sometimes I think daddy has no feeling for me. I reckon he thinks I'm a boy."

"Hot water is debilitating and very bad for the complexion," retorted her father. "Ice cold water is what you need. And if you don't get out o' there in five minutes I'll douse you with a dipperful."

This reminded Wayland that he had not yet made his own toilet, and, seizing soap, towel and brushes, he hurried away down the beach, where he came face to face with the dawn. The splendor of it smote him full in the the water a spectral mist was rising, a light veil, through which the stupendous cliffs loomed 8,000 feet in height, darkly shadowed, dim and far. The willows along the western marge burned as if dipped in liquid gold, and on the lofty crags the sun's coming created keen edged shadows, violet as ink. Truly this forestry business was not so bad after all. It had its compensations.

Back at the campfire he found Berrie at work, glowing, vigorous, laughing. Her comradeship with her father was very charming, and at the moment she was rallying him on his method of bread mixing. "You should rub the lard into the flour," she said. "Don't be afraid to get your hands into it—after they are clean. You can't mix bread with a spoon."

"Sis, I made camp bread for twenty years afore you were born."

"It's a wonder you lived to tell of it," she retorted, and took the pan away from him. "That's another thing you must learn," she said to Wayland. "You must know how to make bread. You can't expect to find bakeshops or ranchers along the way."

In the heat of the fire, in the charm of the girl's presence, the young man forgot the discomforts of the night, and, as they sat at breakfast and the sun rising over the high summits flooded them with warmth and good cheer and the frost melted like magic from the tent, the experience had all the satisfying elements of a picnic. It seemed that nothing remained to do. But McFarlane said, "Well, now you youngsters wash up and pack while I reconnoiter the stock." And with his saddle and bridle on his shoulder he went away down the trail.

Under Berrie's direction Wayland worked busily putting the camp equipment in proper parcels, taking no special thought of time till the tent was down and folded, the panniers filled and closed and the fire carefully covered. Then the girl said: "I hope the horses haven't been stampeded. There are bears in this valley, and horses are afraid of bears. Father ought to have been back before this. I hope they haven't quit us."

"Shall I go and see?"

"No, he'll bring 'em if they're in the land of the living. He picketed his saddle horse, so he's not afoot. Nobody can teach him anything about trailing horses, and, besides, you might get lost. You'd better keep close to camp."

Thereupon Wayland put aside all responsibility. "Let's see if we can catch some more fish," he urged.

To this she agreed, and together they went again to the outlet of the lake, where the trout could be seen darting to and fro on the clear, dark flood, and there cast their flies till they had secured ten good sized fish.

"We'll stop now," declared the girl. "I don't believe in being wasteful."

Once more at the camp they prepared the fish for the pan.

As they were unpacking the panniers and getting out the dishes for their meal thunder broke from the high crags above the lake, and the girl called out:

"Quick! It's going to rain! We must reset the tent and get things under cover."

Once more he was put to shame by the decision, the skill and the strength with which she went about re-establishing the camp. She led, he followed in every action. In ten minutes the canvas was up, the beds rolled, the panniers protected, the food stored safely. But they were none too soon, for the thick gray veil of rain which had clothed the loftiest crags for half an hour swung out over the water, leaden gray under its folds, and with a roar which began in the tall pines, a roar which deepened, hushed only when the thunder crashed resoundingly from crag to crest, the tempest fell upon the camp and the world of sun and odorous pine vanished almost instantly, and a dark, threatening and forbidding world took its place.

But the young people, huddled close together beneath the tent, would have enjoyed the change had it not been for the thought of the supervisor. "I hope he took his slicker," the girl said between the tearing, ripping flashes of the lightning. "It's raining hard up there."

"How quickly it came. Who would have thought it could rain like this after so beautiful a morning?"

"It storms when it storms in the mountains," she responded with the sententious air of her father. "You never can tell what the sky is going to do up here. It is probably snowing on the high divide. Looks now as though those cayuses pulled out some time in the night and have hit the trail for home. That's the trouble with stall fed stock. They'll quit you any time they feel cold and hungry. Here comes the hail!" she shouted as a sharper, more spiteful roar sounded far away and approaching. "Now keep from under!"

"What will your father do?" he called.

"Don't worry about him. He's at home any place there's a tree. He's probably under a balsam somewhere, waiting for this ice to spill out. The only point is, they may get over the divide, and if they do it will be slippery coming back."

For the first time the thought that the supervisor might not be able to return entered Wayland's mind, but he said nothing of his fear.

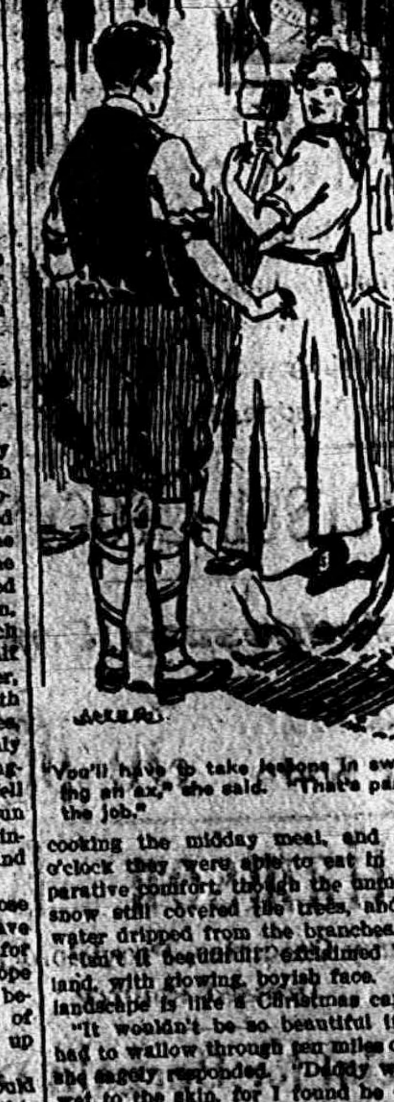
The hail soon changed to snow, great, clinging, drowsy, soft, slow moving flakes, and with their coming the roar died away and the forest became as silent as a grave of bronze. Nothing moved save the thick falling, feathery, frozen vapor, and the world was again very beautiful and very

"We must keep the fire going," warned the girl. "It will be hard to start after this soaking."

He threw upon the fire all of the wood which lay near, and Berrie, taking the ax, went to the big fir and began to chop off the dry branches which hung beneath, working almost as effectively as a man. Wayland insisted on taking a turn with the tool, but his efforts were so awkward that she laughed and took it away again. "You'll have to take lessons in swinging an ax," she said. "That's part of the job."

Gradually the storm lightened, the snow changed back into rain and finally to mist, but up on the heights the clouds still rolled wildly, and through their openings the white drifts bleakly shone.

"It's all in the trip," said Berrie. "You have to take the weather as it comes on the trail." As the storm lessened she resumed the business of cooking the midday meal, and at 2 o'clock they were able to eat in comparative comfort, though the unmelted snow still covered the trees, and the water dripped from the branches.



"You'll have to take lessons in swinging an ax," she said. "That's part of the job."

"It wouldn't be so beautiful if you had to wallow through ten miles of it," she sagely responded. "Daddy will be wet to the skin, for I found he didn't take his slicker. However, the sun may be out before night. That's the way the thing goes in the hills."

To the youth, though the peaks were storm hid, the afternoon was joyous. Berrie was a sweet companion. Under her supervision he practiced at chopping wood and took a hand at cooking.

He had to admit that she was better able to care for herself in the wilderness than most men, even western men, and, though he had not yet witnessed a display of her skill with a rifle, he was ready to believe that she could shoot as well as her sire. Nevertheless he liked her better when engaged in purely feminine duties, and he led the talk back to subjects concerning which her speech was less blunt and manlike.

He liked her when she was joking, for delicious little curves of laughter played about her lips. She became very amusing as she told of her "visits east" and of her embarrassments in the homes of city friends. "I just have to own up that about all the schooling I've got is from the magazines. Sometimes I wish I had pulled out for town when I was about fourteen; but, you see, I didn't feel like leaving mother, and she didn't feel like letting me go, and so I just got what I could at Bear Tooth." She sprang up. "There's a patch of blue sky."

Together they strolled along the edge of the willows. "The grouse come down to feed about this time," she said. "We'll put up a covey soon."

Within a quarter of a mile they found their birds, and she killed four with five shots. "This is all we need," she said, "and I don't believe in killing for the sake of killing. Rangers should set good examples in way of game preservation. They are deputy game wardens in most states, and good ones too."

The night rose formidably from the valley while they ate their supper, but Berrie remained tranquil. "Those horses probably went clean back to the ranch. If they did, daddy can't possibly get back before 8 o'clock, and he may not get back till tomorrow."

Norcross, with his city training, was acutely conscious of the delicacy of the situation. In his sister's circle a girl left alone in this way with a man would have been very seriously embarrassed, but it was evident that Berrie took it all joyously, innocently. Their being together was something which had happened in the natural course of weather, a condition for which they were in no way responsible. Therefore she permitted herself to be frankly happy in the charm of their enforced intimacy.

She had never known a youth of his quality. He was so considerate, so refined, so quick of understanding and so swift to serve. He filled her mind to the exclusion of unimportant matters like the snow, which was beginning again. Indeed, her only anxiety concerned his health, and as he toiled amid the falling flakes, intent upon heaping up wood enough to last out the night, she became solicitous.

"You will be soaked," she warningly cried. "Don't stay out any more. Come to the fire. I'll bring in the wood."

Something primeval, some strength he did not know he possessed sustained him, and he toiled on. "Suppose this snow keeps falling?" he retorted. "The supervisor will not be able to get back tonight—perhaps not for a couple of nights. We will need a lot of fuel."

He did not voice the fear of the storm which filled his thought, but the girl understood it. "It won't be very cold," she calmly replied. "It never is during these early blizzards, and, besides, all we need to do is to drop down the trail ten miles, and we'll be entirely out of it."

"I'll feel safer with plenty of wood," he argued, but soon found it necessary to rest from his labors. Coming in to camp, he seated himself beside her on a roll of blankets, and so together they tended the fire and watched the darkness roll over the lake till the shining crystals seemed to drop from a measureless black arch, soundless and oppressive.

"What time is it now?" she asked abruptly.

He looked at his watch. "Half after 8."

"If father isn't on this side of the divide now he won't try to cross. If he's coming down the slope he'll be here in an hour, although that trail is a tolerably tough proposition this minute. A patch of dead timber on a dark night is sure a nuisance even to a good man. He may not make it."

"Couldn't I rig up a torch and go to meet him?"

"You have a very poor opinion of my skill."

"No, I haven't; but I know how hard it is to keep direction on a night like this, and I don't want you wandering around in the timber. Father can take care of himself. He's probably sitting under a big tree smoking his pipe before his fire—or else he's at home. He knows we're all right, and we are. We have wood and grub and plenty of blankets and a roof over us. You can make your bed under this fly," she said, looking up at the canvas. "It beats the old balsam as a roof. You mustn't sleep cold again."

"I think I'd better sit up and keep the fire going," he replied heroically. "There's a big log out there that I'm going to bring in to roll up on the windward side."

"It'll be cold and wet early in the morning, and I don't like to hunt kin[illegible]," she said. "I always get everything ready the night before. I wish you had a better bed. It seems selfish of me to have the tent while you are cold."

THE STRANGER ON THE LAND.

A new farmer in any region is handicapped for the first season or two. Unless he has traveled enough to know the wide variation of details in farming and how to watch for them he will make mistakes on matters that seem very simple to old residents. If he is inclined to be independent of local custom and of the advice of his neighbors he runs even greater chances of loss.

The man from the south who moves to a northern state, with its shorter growing season, may not realize the importance of getting his crops in promptly, with the result that he is pinched by frost in the fall. The type of soil may be strange to him; conditions of drought or flood may be unknown to him; even live stock are influenced by location.

If the new farmer hasn't time to study these details for a season before he comes to the region he would best stick to the methods of the majority of good farmers in the neighborhood—the same crop, the same live stock, the same methods of cultivation.

Plenty of farmers who have gone west, and as many who have come east, with the idea of "astonishing the natives" have been obliged after a season's experience to retrench, with more wisdom and less net profit than expected. It pays to think twice before you try to beat the native at his own game.—Country Gentleman.

GARDEN INSECT PESTS.

[Prepared by Kansas State Agricultural college.]

The common garden insect pests are more numerous than usual this summer. The ravages of many of the pests may be prevented by a few simple precautions.

Cut Worms.—Eat off plants near the ground or climb plant and eat leaves. Scatter poison bran mash over the ground in the evening before and after the plants come up. A collar of paper fitted into the soil two or three inches around the plant and extending three or four inches above ground is also helpful. Plow in the fall.

Strawberry Leaf Roller.—Larva rolls leaf and feeds upon it. Spray with lead arsenic and burn fields as soon as crop is harvested.

White Grubs.—The larvae of June beetles damage grass, corn, strawberries and other plants by eating off roots. Practice fall plowing to expose insects and harrow thoroughly before planting.

Colorado Bettle.—Adults and larvae eat leaves. Spray with lead arsenate at the rate of three pounds of poison to fifty gallons of water as soon as injury appears. Poison may be used in bordeaux mixture.

Corn Ear Worm.—Eats the immature kernels at the end of the ear. Dust the corn silk with equal parts of powdered arseniate of lead and flowers of sulphur. Plow the ground in the fall.

Cabbage Aphis.—Sucks sap from the leaves. Spray with nicotine solution and soapsuds just as soon as the insect appears.

Making the Little Farm Pay

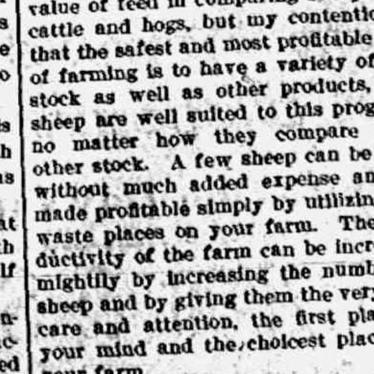
By C. C. BOWSFIELD

In managing a small tract of land for any purpose there are advantages in keeping a flock of sheep. These animals will return a satisfactory profit and add to the value of a farm.

It costs little to feed or shelter them, they keep a place clear of weeds, they increase rapidly and there is a constant demand for lamb, mutton and wool. While they are a good kind of live stock on any tract of land, they work into the plans and conditions of a small farmer especially well.

Sheep are docile and easily cared for. Most of the care they need is required when other farm operations are slack. The main thing needed is a woven wire inclosure for them at night to keep dogs away from them. The returns from sheep are quick and many, profits made principally from pasture with a little concentrated feed to finish up on, a very small amount as compared with the grain feed necessary to finish other farm animals for market.

In breeding only the best and breeding for quality you increase the profits from sheep keeping still more. Instances are on record where breeding ewes have yielded a profit of $12 to $15 per head; where fat lambs, made to weigh 100 pounds at nine months of age, have sold for 8 cents per pound; where lambs at four months have brought $6; where a farm was bought for $3,000, with $1,000 down and the rest to be paid in two years, and during that time the sheep paid $1,500 and the original number remained; where they have made land worth $60 an acre that was before worth $25.



THERE ARE ADVANTAGES IN KEEPING A FLOCK OF SHEEP.

One must consider the labor and value of feed in comparing sheep with cattle and hogs, but my contention is that the safest and most profitable kind of farming is to have a variety of live stock as well as other products, and sheep are well suited to this program, no matter how they compare with other stock. A few sheep can be kept without much added expense and be made profitable simply by utilizing the waste places on your farm. The productivity of the farm can be increased mightily by increasing the number of sheep and by giving them the very best care and attention, the first place in your mind and the choicest places on your farm.

Sheep are enemies of weeds and as such keep up the appearance of the farm. They adapt themselves very readily to waste places and adapt waste places to themselves. They will graze to the very bottom of ditches and keep them clean of weeds. They will graze to the very summit of hills and crop the tufts of grasses that grow where other animals fear to tread. Thus, through the helpful agency of sheep many a stony or hilly farm, which otherwise would largely exist as dead property, is utilized and conducted in profitable channels. Sheep will creep under hedges and find feed there. They will clean up fence rows and fence corners, thus turning some more dead property into profit and saving labor wherever they go.

Do not get the impression that sheep will thrive and pay under careless management. They need dry, snug quarters in winter and during rainy periods. Their health must be guarded, for they have their ailments, just as other animals have, but they will return big dividends on all the care which is bestowed on them.

ARTICLES OF VIRTU.

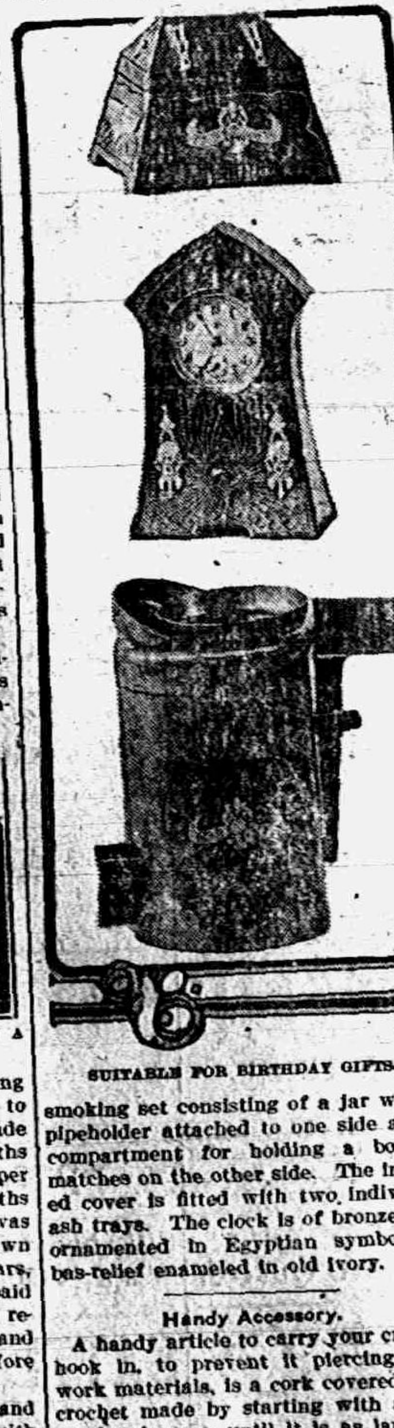
At the top of this illustration is shown a jewelry case of bronze ornamented with various Egyptian symbols in bas-relief enameled in old ivory. At the bottom is shown a smoking set consisting of a jar with a pipeholder attached to one side and a compartment for holding a box of matches on the other side. The inverted cover is fitted with two individual ash trays. The clock is of bronze, also ornamented in Egyptian symbols in bas-relief enameled in old ivory.



SUITABLE FOR BIRTHDAY GIFTS.

Handy Accessory.

A handy article to carry your crochet hook in, to prevent it piercing your work materials, is a cork covered with crochet made by starting with a ring crochet in s. c. until it is as large as the bottom of the cork, which should be the right size, when covered, to carry your thimble on.

Organdie Over Silk.

Flowered organdies are back in fashion for summer frocks. Lovely effects may be obtained by mounting the flowered organdie over thin silk. The silk need not necessarily match the tint of the flowers. For instance, a lavender flowered organdie is mounted over pale pink pussy willow silk; a rose flowered organdie is mounted over faint lilac, and so on. Black velvet ribbon sashes are much fancied with these pretty costumes.

A Suffrage Exhibit.

One of the exhibits which are attracting much attention in the suffrage booth at the Panama-Pacific fair is made of tiny imported dolls representing all the voting and nonvoting countries of the world. The nonvoting dolls stand behind a wall, "symbolic of the conservatism, inertia and self interest which keeps women from the ballot," the Empire State campaign commission announces. The costume of each country is carefully presented, except that midgets from the unenfranchised countries are dressed in mourning.

Another effective exhibit is a framed copy of the record of the Sixty-third congress, giving each representative's vote on the woman suffrage amendment.

Proper Kitchen Sanitation

Many housewives who think that they are particular about their houses would be surprised to have their s[illegible] called clean kitchens overhauled by expert in sanitation. Let us start [illegible] the washing of the dishes. In [illegible] cases we will find a dish mop or a rag that has been used for week[illegible] contains dirt and germs galore. [illegible] should be boiled in lye water a[illegible] once a week. The nose is one [illegible] greatest aids to sanitation, and [illegible] should heed it. Most persons think that a bad smelling dish rag is to be expected. But not so. It should be as sweet smelling as the face towel.

Then there is the garbage can. It should be scalded and set out in the sun every day. This is most important, as the can is the receptacle for all refuse, which is apt to decompose and become a menace to health unless carefully attended to. A great help in keeping the can clean is to line it with newspaper in such a way that nothing touches the can, being held by the paper. To dump the can merely lift the paper out. This will also lengthen the life of the can by keeping it dry.

The refrigerator is another germ catcher, unless kept clean. Baking soda is excellent for cleaning the interior of the refrigerator, as it both cleanses and sweetens. For the top, where the ice is kept, a strong solution of lye water, boiling hot, is the best to use. Empty the whole refrigerator, throw the lye water against the walls of the upper part. It will run down through the waste pipe, carrying all the slime with it. Follow this bath with one of plain hot water, then wash the lower part with hot soapsuds and soda. This should be done once a week.

The laundry tubs should be kept corked when not in use to prevent the rise of obnoxious gases. They should be kept as clean as the sink, and once a week a disinfectant should be poured down all soil pipes.

Many cooks will taste the food to see that it is properly seasoned and will return the spoon to the food. This is a very insanitary thing to do. If it is necessary to taste the food the spoon should be washed before being put back into the food.

The towels used to wipe the dishes should never be used more than one day without being scalded and dried i[illegible] the sun. Many housekeepers use dish towels until they are positively dirty, not realizing the danger that attends such an action.

The kitchen floor should be mopped every day. A very fine housekeeper, noted for her thought of sanitary conditions, never swept her kitchen. Every morning after her kitchen work was done she mopped the floor with hot soapsuds. Then when it was still damp she took up with a dustpan and brush any particles that had remained after the mopping. In this way she avoided raising any dust to settle on her cooking implements.

Last, but by no means least, the range should be considered. Too often this is not clean enough to be sanitary. Grease collects easily, and eternal vigilance is the price of sanitation here. If the range is wiped off after every washing of dishes there need be no "big job" of cleaning the range, which so many housekeepers hate. The trouble is they let it go from day to day until it becomes a real task to clean it. The solution of the whole thing is to do a little each day, and then the work will not pile up, and in consequence the health of the whole fami[illegible] will be better.

LATONA PULVER

Latona the only child of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Pulver passed away Friday at 2 o'clock a. m. aged 1 year 10 mo

For many weeks the little one had been a great sufferer and it was decided to take her to Ann Arbor to consult a specialist. During the trying examination she was such a brave and patient child, that everyone commented upon it, it was so wonderful in one so young, and up to the time of her death she recognized her parents and those about her and left them with a sweet smile.

Latona was the pet of the neighborhood and made friends wherever she went. The whole community was shocked when the word came that she was gone, and the loving sympathy of everyone was given to the bereaved parents.

The funeral was held at the home Sunday afternoon [illegible] o'clock with burial in Brookside cemetery.

A Cool Wave Coming

Many times during the sweltering summer days, when duties in the home seen to almost overwhelm us, we have longed for the welcomed sign "A Cool Wave Coming."

With an Electric Fan in your home you will not fear the stifling heat of the summer.

Its gentle breeze freshens and cools the surrounding atmosphere giving you new life and strength to withstand the sweltering days that otherwise would be almost unbearable.

Electric Fans can be carried from room to room. No wiring is necessary. Just plug the cord into any electric light socket and turn the switch. It will run continuously without attention and consume little current. adv

NATURE TELLS YOU

As Many a Tecumseh Reader Knows Too Well.

When the kidneys are weak,
Nature tells you about it.
The urine is nature's index.
Infrequent or too frequent passage,
Other disorders suggest kidney ill,
Doan's Kidney Pills are for disordered kidneys.

Tecumseh people testify to their worth.

Mrs Geo Burroughs, w Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, says: "My whole body ached and my strength and energy left me. Knowing several people in Tecumseh who had been helped by Doan's Kidney Pills I got a supply of this remedy at Wright & Son's Drug store and began using them. In a few weeks I improved in every way and the pains and aches were a thing of the past. I cheerfully endorse Doan's Kidney Pills again for the benefit they brought me has been permanent."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills the same that Msr Burroughs had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props Buffalo, N. Y. adv

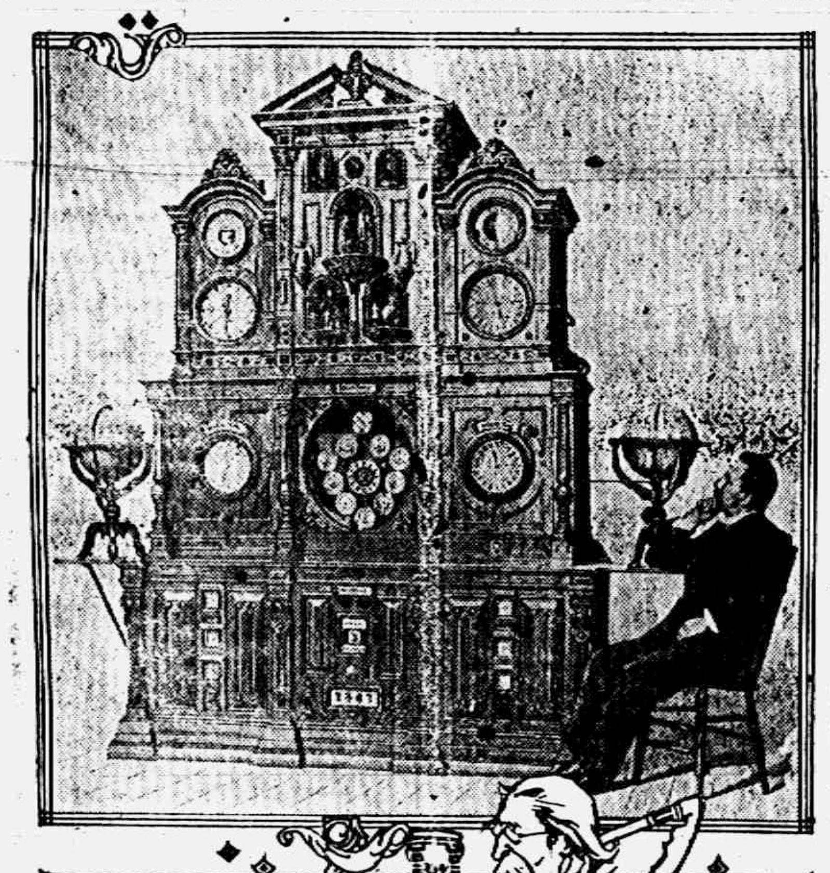
FAMOUS ASTRONOMICAL ART AND WORLD CLOCK TO BE EXHIBITED AT STATE FAIR



THE Gebhard astronomical art and world clock will be one of the unique exhibits to be displayed during the Michigan State Fair, Sept. 6 to 15. This clock, which represents the life work of Christian Gebhard, famous German inventor, has attracted attention in many European countries and was brought to the United States by his oldest son following the death of the inventor.

The clock is encased in a massive quartered oak case and stands ten feet high, ten feet wide and three feet deep. It consists of 1,500 parts and displays twenty-six separate and distinct mechanical and astronomical movements, all ingeniously propelled by one weight. The movements are so constructed that the hands and indicators all move forward at once at the end of every half minute only, with the exception of the striking attachment. The clock shows four different kinds of time systems—mean, solar, star and sidereal and decimal time.

In the center of the Gebhard clock are ten clocks, showing comparatively the time in ten of the principal cities of the world. On the right of the clock proper is a large globe which represents the earth revolving on its own axis in twenty-four hours, from west to east. It has a band so placed that it shows the exact time at any point on the earth and shows the correct position of the earth to the sun.

The moon, chronological cycles and barometer are shown on the clock.

Just below the barometer is the face representing the planet system, which was made and remade, with tireless patience, for thirty years by the inventor. It shows the heliocentric movements of the six planets around the sun. The sun, in the center, turns on its axis once in twenty-five and one-half days. On the same dial are the twelve signs of the zodiac.

The striking apparatus also is an interesting feature.

Drying Paint.

Paints dry better in a free and equally ventilated room than in a close, warm one. In the use of driers the surface must be taken into account. Copper and oak are particularly anti-drying. Pine and cast iron are particularly good. Quick drying paint is usually stronger in odor than slow drying. The obnoxious smell of paint may be changed into a comparatively pleasant one by the addition of a few drops of spike lavender, which will also act as a drier. In like manner eau de cologne may be added to spirit varnishes and lacquers to meet the wishes of fastidious people.—Pittsburgh Press.

The Finishing Touch.

The young man hesitated to believe the statement of her little brother that the young lady was not at home. He repeated the question, at the same time displaying a quarter. The boy eyed it longingly and again replied in the negative.

"But didn't she leave a message for me?" asked the disappointed swain.

"Yes," said the lad—and nothing more

As one who sees a great light, the young man tossed him the coin. "Now," he said, "out with the message."

"She said she's not gonna see you any more and you're not to give me any money."—Philadelphia Ledger.

GIVES UP FOR SQUARE MEAL

Fugitive, Charged With Murder, Can't Stand Corn and Berry Diet.

Rockport, Ind., July 23.—After being vainly sought by officers of the law throughout Indiana and Kentucky, William Hosey, charged with the murder of Joseph Ashley at Hatfield, near here, about four weeks ago, came to the county jail and surrendered to the Spencer county sheriff.

He gave as the reason for his surrender that he was tired of living on blackberries and roasting ears and his first request was for Sheriff Kramer to give him some dinner.

Pittsburgh Gets 1917 Moose.

San Diego, July 23—The Pittsburgh delegation celebrated their victory when their city was chosen as the scene of the 1917 convention of the Loyal Order of Moose. The delegates marched on the Panama-California exposition in great numbers to participate in Moose day festivities.

Farmer Killed in Accident.

Hammond, Ind., July 23.—William Earl, a well known farmer, is dead at Lowell. A derrick pole on a hay harvester was loosened and struck him on the head.

Train Kills Okawville Man.

To Protect Mother From Her Folly?

Valparaiso, Ind., July 23.—Herman Hiltpold, who was arrested here on complaint of his mother, Mrs. Ida Beeder, who charged that he threatened her life, stole some jewelry from his sister and a land abstract owned by his mother, asserts that he took the jewelry to save it from the Franchise league "melting pot." Habeas corpus proceedings have been instituted to obtain the release of Hiltpold.

Former Auditor's Trial Begins Oct. 21.

Washington, Ind., July 23.—The trial of Thomas Nugent, former auditor of Daviess county, charged with embezzlement as a result of the examination of his books by the state board of accounts, has been set for Oct. 21 in the Knox Circuit court.

Steel Crushes Manager.

Hudson Plans Reunion.

HUDSON, MICH. — The arrangements are being perfected for a successful homecoming in Hudson Aug. 4 and 5, when large numbers of former residents are expected. The summer chautauqua will be held the same week.

Time on Board Ship.

Time in the navy is marked not by hours, but by bells, just as in the merchant marine. The system of marking time by bells is very easy to understand once it is explained. Every four hours, 4, 8 and 12 o'clock, the ship's bell is struck eight times. At the end of the first half hour after each four hour period the bell is struck once, an hour afterward twice, and so on till the four hours are up, after which the preceding routine is begun over again. For instance, one bell in the forenoon is 8:30 o'clock, two bells 9 o'clock, three bells 9:30 o'clock, etc. In the afternoon one bell is 12:30 o'clock, four bells 2 o'clock, etc.

Difficulties In Pronunciation.

What is the most difficult English place name for a foreigner to pronounce? That is a question suggested by a writer in the London Observer. He plumps for Southampton as the most difficult "port of call" for the Frenchman bound for England. Obviously it cannot be spelled phonetically, as there is no "th" in French. We all have these little international difficulties. But the Frenchman gets over the sea to Southampton by calling it "Sudomton."

POULTRY GOSSIP.

The raising of poultry may be a hobby, but it is a profitable one.

Pullets may lay small eggs at first, but as they grow older their eggs will reach the normal size.

There is a whole lot of pleasure in raising chickens, an interesting, fascinating study, and the longer you stick to it the more fascinating it becomes.

Early hatched pullets make the best winter layers, next come the year-old productions, and as breeders when mated with mature cockerels they are unsurpassed.

Tot Regains Her Hearing.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — Deaf and dumb since she was left on a local doorstep when a few hours old, Ramona Shaw, two years old, can speak and hear, following experiments made by R. C. Sweet, widely known among baseball players as "Bonesetter" Sweet.

The child is the adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Shaw, and her foster parents did not dream she would ever talk. Sweet found that the trouble was due to disturbance of the nerves around the spinal cord probably caused by the cold to which she was exposed as an infant.

Officers Recover Butter.

NILES, MICH. — Detectives have recovered forty-two tubs of creamery butter, which were stolen from a Michigan Central freight train while the train was running at full speed, near Barren Lake. No trace of the thieves has been found.

A band of men boarded the train at Niles and when Barren Lake was reached threw off fifty tubs of the creamery product. The break of day prevented their carrying more than eight tubs to safety and forty-two were recovered. The train crew did not discover the theft until Three Rivers, Mich., was reached.

This Hoosier Getting There Fast.

Marion, Ind., July 23.—Charles H. Rutherford, a former student of the Marion Normal college, who practiced law for brief periods in this city and in Seymour, is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor of Arizona. He is now judge of the United States Commissioners' court at Jerome, Ariz. Mrs. Rutherford was Miss Erie Dykes of Marion.

Heart Attack Is Fatal.

Bloomington, Ind., July 23.—Campbell Vance, an Indianapolis traveling man, died suddenly of heart disease at the home of Emsley Sparks, one-half mile west of Stanford. Mr. Vance was sixty-three years old and was the representative of the Independent Ello company of Indianapolis.

Summer Care of Poultry.

Provide the birds with clean, roomy, well ventilated summer colony houses where they will not be unduly crowded and where they will have fresh air to breathe at all times. Stunted pullets are too often produced by lack of proper sleeping and roosting quarters during the summer growing period. The feeder should always endeavor to keep the pullets growing constantly without any check, thus doing away with any danger of retarding the time of maturity or of reducing the ultimate size and vigor of the mature birds.

To Get Good Eggs.

Some good rules for supplying eggs of good quality are the following: Have plenty of nests for your hens and keep them clean. Gather the eggs as often as possible in warm weather. Handle the eggs as little as possible. Cull out all very large or very small eggs. Sell nothing but clean eggs. Don't expose eggs to flies and dust. Confine broody hens at once and remove them to the hatching department. Feed wholesome, clean food and provide pure water in clean vessels.

CAPITALIST ENJOINS HEIRS

Rich Kalamazoo Man, Thrice in Asylum, Gets Court Order.

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 23.—Attorneys for A. J. Winslow, one of the richest men in Kalamazoo, obtained an injunction preventing his relatives [illegible] any way interferring with the aged capitalist, making any move to disturb his property or filing a will they allege Winslow made out.

Winslow was last winter placed in the asylum upon a request of two nephews. A few days later he was released, only to be taken again by his nephews and placed in a Chicago hospital. He escaped from them. A few weeks ago they again had him placed in a sanitarium at Flint and Winslow started proceedings in that county which resulted in his freedom.

FARMER SHOT, JAIL NEIGHBOR

Victim's Cattle Had Strayed to Assailant's Farm—Bird Shot Used.

Mt. Pleasant, Mich., July 23.—When Oscar Luse went to the farm of his neighbor, Wm. McQueen, to drive home cattle which had strayed over there, he was riddled with bird shot. Both men live in Fremont township and there is said to have been bad feeling between them.

SON-IN-LAW ADMITS THAT HE KILLED TWO

Sheriff Finds Jackson Slayer Calmly Eating Breakfast.

Jackson, Mich., July 23.—John Carson, aged thirty-eight years, a wealthy Jackson county farmer, who shot and instantly killed Mrs. Mary Palmer, his mother-in-law, aged seventy, and Edward Madden, aged forty-eight, of [illegible] was arraigned in the justice court on a double murder charge. He demanded an examination which was set for July 28.

Carson and his wife May have been separated and plans had been made by Mrs. Carson's mother, Mrs. Mary Palmer, to secure certain property held by Carson. Mrs. Palmer and Madden, a friend, were on their way to take possession of some cattle on the Carson farm when the shooting occurred.

Carson met Mrs. Palmer and Madden in front of his home and heated words followed. Then Carson got a gun and demanded that Madden apologize for remarks he had made. Madden refused, it is said, and Carson sent five shots in Madden's body. Carson then turned the gun on Mrs. Palmer, say the police, who was begging for her life and had started to run. He fired three shots into her body, two of which were mortal wounds.

Carson then telephoned the sheriff what he had done and was eating breakfast when the officer placed him under arrest.

Madden was once a baseball player and an umpire and was known throughout Michigan.

Carson is a Kentuckian. At one time he was charged with using the mails to defraud. He pleaded guilty in Chicago courts and was fined.

Student Military Camp Raises $350.

Ludington, Mich., July 23.—Wednesday was "booster day" for the student military camp here, and netted approximately $350 in receipts from field day exercises held to defray the city's expenses for the camp. A picked camp team defeated the city league team, 9 to 3.

Law Violaters Arrested.

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 23.—Seven were arrested for alleged violations of the local option law. The parties are: Edward Hennessy, former bartender; Albert Cook, restaurant keeper; John Koen, Roy Dungey, Thomas Morse, Jack Bush and William Hackley.

Corporations Principal Tax Payers.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 23.—According to figures compiled by the board of assessors, Grand Rapids corporations pay nearly one-third of all the taxes in the city. Out of a total of $163,026,822 the corporations are assessed $51,332,415.

Boy Drowns In Saginaw River.

Bay City, Mich., July 23.—Walter Kowalezky, thirteen years old, was drowned in the Saginaw river while attempting to get a wooden box which was floating near the river bank. Pulmotor service was unsuccessful.

Allege Bootlegging.

Escanaba, Mich., July 23.—Forty alleged keepers of "blind pigs" in Delta county, arrested by United States revenue officers, will be arraigned here.

TIN NOVELTIES.

Among the decided tin novelties which some ingenious brain has evolved is the door knocker into which the guest's name or card may be slipped and save confusion in a home of many visitors. And now that the door-stop door porters are so in vogue, bricks are being decorated in gay flowers for the purpose of holding back doors when strong breezes blow.

A charming idea is that of the painted tin clusters of flowers forming the old time curtain knob or rosette, as it was called. These are only effective on a plain curtain and not on flowered drapery.

Sure to be popular is a practical ornamental painted tin pail in which ice can be packed about any bottled drinks and be carried out to the tennis courts or for a garden tea. Popular, too, are the long tin horns which are meant to summon guests at the tea hour for the meals. The convenient tin newspaper rack will no doubt figure conspicuously on the up to date veranda.

The bird houses of the painted tin, if they are put up in a more or less sheltered place, promise to be a decorative note of color on the lawn. Painted tin has also been introduced into garden novelties. Watering pots of different sizes for my lady who does the sprinkling of her choice blossoms cannot but appeal to the fair gardener. The garden sticks come both in the painted tin and wood, as do the weather vanes.

TEUTONS SEVER RUSS RAIL LINE

Line from Warsaw to Petrograd Also Threatened.

CZAR'S POSITION IS PERILOUS

Once Polish Capital Is Invested There Can Be but One Outcome—Advances Made In Courtland — Kaiser Would Cut Off Poland From Russia.

London, July 23.—Although the Germans extended their lines from Blonie to the west of Warsaw and therefore have a larger front sixteen miles from the capital. The significant developments in the Austro-German offensive were:

First, the investing of Ivangorod, thus threatening or cutting the railway communications between Warsaw and Moscow.

Second, the German advance between Mariampol and Kovno on the Niemen, developing an advance against Wilna, fifty miles to the east through which runs the raiload between Warsaw and Petrograd.

These two movements are regarded with far greater anxiety in London than the appearance of the German forces before the fortified river cities of Ossowiec, Lomza, Pultusk or Novo Georgievsk or the Blonie line on the west or the Grojec advance on the south.

Warsaw Must Stand Siege.

It is fair to assume from the Berlin statement that the Ivangorod railway is already cut off. Once the other road goes Warsaw must stand a siege which can have but one outcome. Cut from their supplies, hampered with nearly 1,000,000 non-combatants, powerless to receive aid from the east, the position of the Russian forces would be most perilous, and furthermore this pressure could be maintained by fewer troops than have been used in the offensive.

The enveloping movements mentioned in the foregoing were supplemented by farther advances in Courtland, although no direct attack was made upon Riga. The Germans still continue to straighten their lines in that district without developing a real objective. It might be that they contemplate a further effort to cut Poland off from all communication with Russia or it may be they will establish a new base for next year on the gulf of Riga.

Russ May Burn Invaders Back.

Added evidence that Warsaw is tottering to its fall comes in the information that the American consulate there has taken over the Belgian and Serbian consular interests. This is taken to indicate a plan for the protection of these interests in case the city is evacuated. Necessity for such protection is indicated in unofficial advices that Grand Duke Nicholas has arranged for the destruction of the city in case it is abandoned to the Germans. It is reported that men have been assigned to apply the torch throughout the city when the order for retreat is given. This report is given weight by news received that the Baltic port of Windau was completely destroyed by the Russians before they abandoned it to the army of Von Hindenburg advancing upon Riga.

Cleaning Mackintoshes at Home.

Spread the mackintosh out flat on the table and scrub with warm water and yellow soap, in which a little carbonate of ammonia has been dissolved. Rinse in cold water and hang in the air to dry. On no account put it near the fire.

This Drives Mosquitoes Away.

Wind a piece of paper around a pencil and fill the tube so formed with Persian powder. Stand it in a dish of sand and burn it an hour before bedtime. This drives the mosquitoes away and so insures an untroubled night's sleep.

Bran For White Paint.

A plain cloth dipped in hot water and then in a saucer of bran will clean white paint and not injure it. The bran acts like a soap on the paint.

Brightening Rugs.

Throw coarse salt over rugs and carpets before sweeping them to prevent the dust from rising. This will brighten the color also.

To Sharpen a Knife Quickly.

Ironing a Bias.

Be sure to iron garments with the straight of the goods and thus prevent stretching of the bias seams.

HAPPY LIVING.

The essence of happy living is never to find life dull, never to feel the ugly weariness which comes of overstrain; to be fresh, cheerful, leisurely, sociable, unhurried, well balanced. It seems to me impossible to be these things unless we have time to consider life a little, to deliberate, to select, to abstain.

NEWS OF THE STATE

Human Torch Couldn't Stir.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — Samuel Peterson died of burns he received when his clothing caught fire from a pipe in his pocket. Peterson's garments were burned and his entire body seared by the flames because of a peculiar mental disorder which made him unable to respond to impulses or natural demands when subjected to great excitement. A crowd of pedestrians watched the flames licking about the young man's body but did not realize the seriousness of the accident until Edward DeRuyter pushed him into the river in a fruitless effort to save his life.

A pathetic feature of the tragedy is the double bereavement of Peterson's sister, whose fiance died a week ago.

Farmer Shot, Jail Neighbor.

Mt. PLEASANT, MICH. — When Oscar Luse went to the farm of his neighbor, Wic. McQueen, to drive home cattle which had strayed over there, he was riddled with bird shot. Both men live in Fremont township and there is said to have been bad feeling between them.

Terror Gets Out of Asylum.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — Robert L. Farman, the insane man who created terror in Hillsdale county in 1907, when officers were trying to bring him to the state hospital, has escaped from the asylum and no trace has been found of him.

He either made a key or stole one which permitted him to unlock the door leading from his ward to the asylum lawn.

Miss Target, Girl Is Killed.

Linda was playing in her yard when she fell wounded.

Law Violators Arrested.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — Seven were arrested for alleged violations of the local option law. The parties are: Edward Hennessy, former bartender; Albert Cook, restaurant keeper; John Koen, Roy Dungey, Thomas Morse, Jack Bush and William Hackley.

Corporations Principal Tax Payers.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — According to figures compiled by the board of assessors, Grand Rapids corporations pay nearly one-third of all the taxes in the city. Out of a total of $163,044,832 the corporations are assessed $51,831,415.

Neighbors Protest Skunk Farm.

PONTIAC, MICH. — The police have been asked to compel a family on Jessie and Raeburn streets to discontinue keeping a pen of skunks which are being raised for their fur. The neighbors contend the enterprise is a nuisance.

Lumberman Loses Race With Death.

Seek New Trial for Kimbrough.

SAGINAW, MICH. — The first step in an appeal to the supreme court for a new trial for Charles Kimbrough, the negro, now serving a life sentence in Marquette prison for the murder of eight year old Rose Laundry, who disappeared Jan. 3, was taken. Kimbrough's lawyers filed a bill of exceptions to the decision of Judge Gage in refusing a new trial in the circuit court. It is said that new evidence has been found.

Oldest Business Man Dead.

ALBION, MICH. — William M. Steele, the city's oldest business man and a prominent figure in Masonic circles, is dead at the age of eighty-three. He was the father of [illegible] [illegible] merchants and [illegible].

FEDERAL DRUG ACT IS SAVING VICTIMS

Police Records Show Harrison Law Has Stopped Traffic.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — The Harrison act, intended to terminate the drug habit, has accomplished its mission in Battle Creek.

This announcement was made by police officials and is substantiated by police records of the last three months.

April, 1915, marked the demise of the traffic here. Records show that on April 22, Charles McGann of Marshall was arrested while engaging in a profitable traffic with heroin, morphine, cocaine and other opiates. Before that date there had been numerous prosecutions and convictions averaing more than one a week. Police were unable to cope with the "underground" traffic in poisons. Then the Harrison act went into effect, compelling users of opiates to secure physicians certificates and prescriptions.

The dope traffic has vanished from Battle Creek. There are a few victims still here, police say, but they find it impossible to get their stimulants and are consequently, gradually being cured. Police say that if the Harrison act is meeting with the same success elsewhere as in Battle Creek this traffic will be wiped out entirely in this country by the expiration of the first year of the existence of the new regulation.

MAY CARSON ASKS DIVORCE

Complainant Is Daughhter of Mrs. Palmer, Whom Carson Killed.

JACKSON, MICH. — May Carson, whose husband, John Carson, murdered Edward Mallen and Mrs. Mary Palmer, her mother, last Wednesday, filed papers in the circuit court asking an annulment of their marriage.

She alleges that he had a wife living at the time of their marriage. She also sought and secured an injunction restraining her husband from disposing of any property which he may have. The couple have been married eleven years.

CITY SHOULD SET EXAMPLE

City Attorney Has Commissioner Arrested to Start Weed Cleanup.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — Holding Ezra J. Shoup, street commissioner, responsible, City Attorney Howard Cavanaugh issued a complaint against him for violation of the "noxious weed" ordinance on the city's lots on Maple street, between Michigan and Wabash avenues.

CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH

BALDWIN, MICH. — The three young children of Ernest H. Wahl, a chauffeur from Chicago, who is spending the summer here, were burned to death when a gasoline explosion destroyed their cottage on Bass lake, seven miles south of here.

BIG COUNTERFEITING HEAD IS CAPTURED

Confesses $40,000 In Bogus Money Passed by Gang.

DETROIT, MICH. — George Ryan, twenty-seven, arrested here on a charge of counterfeiting, confessed, the police say, that within nine months he had made, and his assistants had passed, more than $40,000 in spurious money in cities and towns between New York and St. Louis.

Several hours before Ryan was captured Lillian Wakefields, Edith Grey and Matthew Hennessy were arrested in Saginaw, charged with passing counterfeit $5 bills. It was information obtained from them that led to Ryan's arrest. Later William Kopp and Valentine Furley were taken. They confessed that they were confederates of Ryan and did business in Michigan cities on a "fifty-fifty" basis.

According to the police, four plates used in making $5 bills were found on Ryan when he was searched at headquarters.

P. M. MUST BRING $14,000,000

Judge Tuttle Orders Railroad Sold Before November.

DETROIT. — Fixing the upset price for the sale of the Pere Marquette railroad at $14,000,000, subject to the underlying bonds and interest, which virtually brings the price to $42,000,000. Judge Arthur J. Tuttle handed down his decree ordering the road to be sold between now and November 15. William S. Sayres, special master in chancery, will have charge of the sale.

The Pere Marquette has been in the hands of receivers since April 5, 1912, when the American Brake Shoe and Foundry company filed a petition for receivership, following the admitted inability of the road to pay an outstanding account due the petitioners.

HUMAN CHAIN SAVES WOMAN

ESCANABA, MICH. — The body of Mrs. Neva Lipman of Powhatan, W. Va., who was drowned below Chandler's falls here has been recovered.

Mrs. D. G. Moon, sister of the victim, was rescued, only when nearly 100 workmen employed on the big dam under construction joined hands and formed a chain out into the swift river. The women were wading when caught in the current.

Woman Cuffs Bandit's Ears.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — When a youthful robber entered the Eagle Clothing company's store and commanded Mrs. A. E. Stuart, wife of the proprietor, to hold up her hands, Mrs. Stuart jeered and rushed from behind the counter to give battle.

She wrenched the revolver from the young bandit's hands and after several cuffs on the ears drove him from the store.

NEW GERMAN NOTE TO POINT

President Dismisses Germany's Proposal in One Paragraph—Rights of Neutrals Rest on Immutable Principle—U. S. Controversy With Britain Is for Britain, Not Germany.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The following is the full text of President Wilson's note to Germany:

Department of State, Washington, July 21, 1915.

You are instructed to deliver textually the following note to the minister for foreign affairs:

The note of the imperial government dated the 8th of July, 1915, has received the careful consideration of the government of the United States and it regrets to be obliged to say that it has found it very unsatisfactory, because it fails to meet the real differences between the two governments and indicates no way in which the accepted principles of law and humanity may be applied in the grave matter in controversy but proposes, on the contrary, arrangements for a partial suspension of those principles which virtually sets them aside.

Retaliatory Acts Admitted Illegal.

The government of the United States notes with satisfaction that the imperial German government recognizes without reservation the validity of the principles insisted on in the several communications which this government has addressed to the imperial German government with regard to its announcement of a war zone and the use of submarines against merchantmen on the high seas—the principle that the high seas are free, that the character and cargo of a merchantman must first be ascertained before she can lawfully be seized or destroyed and that the lives of non-combatants may in no case be put in jeopardy unless the vessel resists or seeks to escape after being summoned to submit to examination; for a belligerent act of retaliation is per se an act beyond the law and the defense of an act as retaliatory is an admission that it is illegal.

Acts Against Neutrals Indefensible.

The government of the United States, however, is keenly disappointed to find that the imperial German government regards itself as in large degree exempt from the obligation to observe these principles, even where neutral vessels are concerned, by what it believes the policy and practice of the government of Great Britain to be in the present war with regard to neutral commerce. The imperial German government will readily understand that the government of the United States cannot discuss the policy of the government of Great Britain with regard to neutral trade except with that government itself and that it must regard the conduct of other belligerent governments as irrelevant to any discussion with the imperial German government of what this government regards as grave and unjustifiable violations of the rights of American citizens by German naval commanders. Illegal and inhuman acts, however justifiable they may be thought to be against an enemy who is believed to have acted in contravention of law and humanity, are manifestly indefensible when they deprive neutrals of their acknowledged rights, particularly when they violate the right to life itself. If a belligerent cannot retaliate against an enemy without injuring the lives of neutrals as well as their property, humanity, as well as justice and a due regard for the dignity of neutral powers, should dictate that the practice be discontinued. If persisted in it would in such circumstances constitute an unpardonable offense against the sovereignty of the neutral nation affected. The government of the United States is not unmindful of the extraordinary conditions created by this war or of the radical alterations of circumstance and method of attack produced by the use of instrumentalities of naval warfare which the nations of the world cannot have had in view when the existing rules of international law were formulated, and it is ready to make every reasonable allowance for these novel and unexpected aspects of war at sea; but it cannot consent to abate any essential or fundamental right of its people because of a mere alteration of circumstances.

Neutral Rights Above All.

The rights of neutrals in time of war are based upon principle not upon expediency, and the principles are immutable. It is the duty and obligation of belligerents to find a way to adapt the new circumstances to them.

Can Keep Within Law.

The events of the past two months have clearly indicated that it is possible and practicable to conduct such submarine operations as have characterized the activity of the imperial German naval commanders within the so-called war zone in substantial accord with the accepted practices of regulated warfare. The whole world has looked with interest and increasing satisfaction at the demonstration of that possibility by German naval commanders. It is manifestly possible, therefore, to lift the whole practice of submarine attack above the criticism which it has aroused and remove the chief causes of offense.

In view of the admission of illegality made by the imperial German government when it pleaded the right of retaliation in defense of its acts, and in view of the manifest possibility of conforming to the established rules of naval warfare, the government of the United States cannot believe that the imperial German government will longer refrain from disavowing the wanton act of its naval commander in sinking the Lusitania or from offering reparation for the American lives lost, so far as reparation can be made for a needless destruction of human life by an illegal act.

GENERAL LUIGI CADORNA

Italian Commander Reported to Have Taken Gorizia.

German Plan Unfair.

The government of the United States while not indifferent to the friendly spirit in which it is made, can not accept the suggeston of the imperial German government that certain vessels be designated and agreed upon which shall be free on the seas now illegally proscribed. The very agreement would, by implication, subject other vessels to illegal attack and would be a curtailment, and, therefore, an abandonment of the principles for which this government contends, and which in times of calmer counsels every nation would concede as of course.

German Champion of Sea Freedom.

The government of the United States and the imperial German government which are contending for the same great object have long stood together in urging the very principles upon which the government of the United States now so solemnly insists. They are both contending for the freedom of the seas. The government of the United States will continue to contend for that freedom, from whatever quarter violated, without compromise and at any cost. It invites the practical co-operation of the imperial German government at this time when co-operation may accomplish most, and this great common object be most strikingly and effectively achieved.

Another Illegal Act "Unfriendly."

The imperial German government expresses the hope that this object may be in some measure accomplished even before the present war ends. It can be. The government of the United States not only feels obliged to insist upon it by whomsoever violated or ignored in the protection of its own citizens but is also deeply interested in seeing it made practicable between the belligerents themselves, and holds itself ready at any time to act as the common friend who may be privileged to suggest a way. In the meantime the very value which this government sets upon the long and unbroken friendship between the people and government of the United States and the people and government of the German nation impels it to press very solemnly upon the imperial German government the necessity for a scrupulous observance of neutral rights in this critical matter. Friendship itself prompts it to say to the imperial government that repetition by the commanders of German naval vessels of acts in contravention of those rights must be regarded by the government of the United States, when they affect American citizens, as deliberately unfriendly.

EASTLAND SINKS IN CHICAGO RIVER

VESSEL'S BOILERS EXPLODE

CHICAGO — A total of 846 bodies have been taken from the Eastland and the Chicago river. Coroner Hoffman said he estimated the total death roll to be nearly 1,500.

Permission to dynamite away walls in the interior of the Eastland to facilitate recovery of more than 200 bodies which he believes are still in the hull of the vessel was asked of Coroner Peter Huffman by F. H. Avery, foreman of a gang of eight city divers working at the scene of the horror.

CHICAGO — Between 1,000 and 1,500 men, women and children were drowned and scalded to death shortly after 7 o'clock Saturday morning when the excursion steamer Eastland, loaded with Western Electric employes, starting on their annual picnic at Michigan City, overturned in the Chicago River at the Clark street dock.

Trapped in the saloon and on the lower decks, hundreds went to their death without warning. The boat turned completely over, pinning the victims on the bottom of the river. The boilers exploded, scalding others to death.

Jammed with the merry excursionists the Eastland was ready to sail when she began to list. The docks were lined with hundreds waving their farewells to relatives and friends.

2,500 Persons on Board.

As the great steamer began to weave as she lay on the south bank of the river the crowds rushed to the other side of the vessel. Government officers say 2,500 people were on the boat. Realizing that the Eastland was doomed the crowds became panic-stricken. Maddened by their desire to reach shore screaming women rushed from the upper decks. Men temporarily crazed by the thought of death, raced wildly to the rails and leaped into the river. Women and children were recklessly trampled under foot. For fully twenty minutes the panic reigned.

The Chicago fireboats were the first to go to the rescue, and scores were picked up as they were making their death fight in the river. Police ambulances from nearly every station in the city rushed to the river bank.

Rushed to Hospitals.

The dead, injured and unconscious were loaded into the wagons and taken to hospitals.

Thousands on their way to work witnessed the rescue work from the elevated and the Clark street bridge. Hundreds of volunteers soon began to aid in the rescue.

The Clark street bridge, jammed with sightseers began to totter and another tragedy was narrowly averted as the police drove the crowds into the street.

Friends and relatives of the excursionists fought to reach the doomed vessel which lay between LaSalle and Clark on the south side of the river with bottom up. Rafts and tugs surrounded the stricken ship.

Seek Guilty in Disaster.

CHICAGO — A triple investigation of the Eastland disaster—federal, state and city—that promises to reach "higher ups" in the government inspection service and include steamship officials as well as the crew of the ill-fated ship, was begun.

After responsibility had been fixed, the accused will be prosecuted on the charge of manslaughter and a determined effort made to land the guilty persons in the penitentiary. State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne has practically concluded his preliminary investigation of witnesses, and indictments are expected. The federal grand jury called by Judge Landis will convene Thursday.

Interest in the probe centered in the work of government investigators. This quiz promises to reach Washington and is expected to result in a shake-up in the Department of Commerce.

Great Crowds Hund Kindred.

CHICAGO — The sorrowful work of identification proceeded slowly all day Sunday, throughout the night and Monday.

One by one the bodies in the rows of "unidentified" on the floor of the Second Regiment armory at Washington boulevard and Curtis street are given names and taken away by undertakers.

Frequently some searcher falls down by a body, the long quest ended, and weeps hysterically.

Face after face is uncovered; strange eyes, glazed and fixed, look up at one; this one is bruised, that one distorted, and after one has looked at many victims, he comes at length on the one he seeks, or else continues walking among the rows of blanketed figures.

Shiawassee County "Broke" Again.

CORUNNA, MICH. — Shiawassee county is again without money and it is all because the court house, which has figured more or less in the history of the county during the last ten years. The supervisors failed to provide for the $15,000 court house bonds, now due. The result is that the county treasurer's report shows a deficit of $16,000.

Girl Has Indian Arrested.

SOUTH HAVEN, MICH. — Lawrence Desaw, an Indian, aged twenty-five, is in jail on a serious charge, preferred by a nineteen year old girl, who says he attacked her at a lonely spot in a road half a mile west of Covert. Desaw is said to admit his guilt.

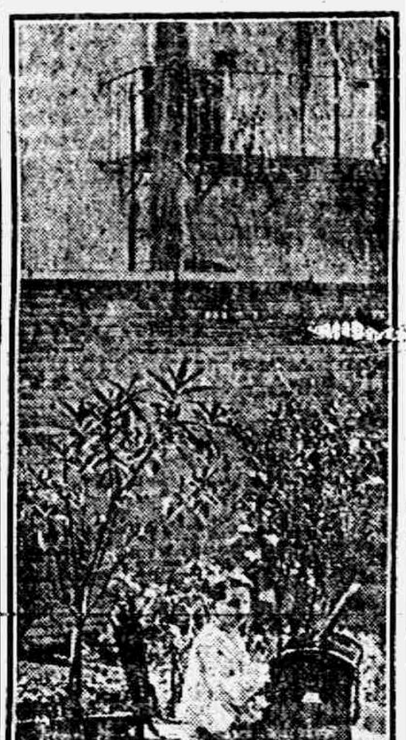
An Important Problem of Education Is Involved Which Can, It Is Believed, Be Solved In No Other Way So Well as by Home Gardening Done by Children Under School Direction.

The child's garden movement has recently struck New York city. From the west it has come, and Portland, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Denver, St. Louis, Milwaukee and many other cities are already proud of their school children's gardens. In New York, too, it has been tried in a tentative manner, but now that the International Child Welfare league has taken it in hand the child gardening movement is assuming importance. The movement has become one of national scope, and everywhere so far it has proved a great success.

The enthusiasts who are directing the movement are confident that the establishment of children's gardens will solve many questions. They differ, however, as to its main object. Some say that the value lies in the fact that children will be taught habits of industry. Others say that children who have formerly worked in mills and factories may add to the family means by raising vegetables instead, and thus the child labor evil will be lessened. Others say that the main object is to teach children the fundamental principles of morality; that each individual must by some kind of labor contribute to the common wealth as much as he takes out of it. All are agreed, however, that it will mean health, strength and joy in labor to the children who work in these gardens.



IN A CHILD'S GARDEN.

Children are now at work cleaning up back yards and vacant lots and dividing the land into plots. An experienced gardening instructor superintends the work and suggests what is needed. The soil is examined, and the qualities that are lacking are added. Seeds are being provided to the children by the gardening committee of the Child Welfare league and by several large seed houses.

In this situation is involved an important problem of education and economics which can, it is believed, be solved in no other way so well as by home gardening done by children under the direction of the school. In other large cities where vacant lots in the suburbs have been turned over to the children to use as gardens a teacher who understood practical and theoretical gardening was employed to direct the work of the children throughout the summer. When the first interest and enthusiasm began to flag it was she who revived a new interest in the growing of vegetables and flowers; it was she who inspired the weeding, the hoeing and raking that must be kept up during the hot days of July.

Adolph Lewisohn, chairman of the home garden committee of New York city, had this to say of another aspect of the movement:

"In England, Holland, France, Germany—in every European country, for that matter—every piece of ground is utilized, and the result of this cultivation is a beauty that our country lacks. The bald ugliness of American towns and cities is due in a large measure to this neglect of unoccupied ground. We pile up our vacant lots and the outskirts of our cities with tin cans, unsightly dumps and all sorts of refuse. The first thing a foreigner notices when he comes to our country is this dreary ugliness. We shall do much to beautify our country if we encourage children's gardens."

TURKS FALL BY THE THOUSANDS

Sir Ian Hamilton Reports Terrific Slaughter.

MADE UNCEASING ATTACKS.

Hot Fire of Allied Artillery Shatters Foe's Ranks—Sir Ian Hamilton Officially Fixes Enemy's Losses In Four Days at 5,000 Killed and 15,000 Wounded.

London.—More than 5,000 Turks were killed and 15,000 wounded in Dardanelles operations from June 28 to July 2, according to an estimate made by General Sir Ian Hamilton, commander of the British forces, in a report made public by the official press bureau. The report says:

"About 2 a. m. (date not given) the searchlights of the destroyer Scorpion discovered half a Turkish battalion advancing near the sea, to the northwest of Krithia. The Scorpion opened fire, and few of the enemy got away.

"Simultaneously the enemy attacked a knoll which we had captured, due west of Krithia, advancing from a nullah in close formation in several lines. The attack came under artillery and enfilading rifle fire, the enemy losing heavily. The foremost Turks got within forty yards of the parapet, but only a few returned.

SIR IAN HAMILTON.

"The Turks made several heavy bomb attacks during the night, our troops being twice driven back a short distance. Early in the morning we regained these trenches by a bayonet attack. They have since been strengthened. At 5:30 a. m. 2,000 Turks, moving from Krithia into a ravine, were scattered by machine gun fire.

"The operations reflect great credit on the vigilance and accurate shooting of the Scorpion. The Turkish losses in the nullah and ravine are estimated at from 1,500 to 2,000 dead.

"About 10 p. m. on June 30 the Turks again attacked with bombs a portion of the most northerly trench captured by us on the 28th. An officer of the Gurkhas being wounded (not dangerously, as it turned out), the men became infuriated, flung all their bombs at the enemy and then, charging down out of the trench, used their kukris for the first time and with excellent effect.

"About dawn the Turks once more attempted to attack over the open, but nearly the whole of these attacking forces, about half a battalion, were shot down, and a final bomb attack, though commenced, failed utterly.

"Prisoners brought in state that three fresh battalions were employed in the main attack, which was made by personal order of Enver Pasha, the Turkish war minister, who, as they definitely assert, was present in the trenches on June 29. This is confirmed by the statement of an intelligent Armenian prisoner captured on that date. According to him, stringent orders were recently issued that no further attacks were to be made, because if the Turks remained on the defensive the British would be forced to attack and would suffer severely, as the Turks hitherto had suffered, but Enver Pasha when he arrived in the northern section overrode the instructions, and orders were received by the prisoner's regiment that the Australians were to be driven into the sea.

"On July 2, after a heavy bombardment of our advanced positions by high explosives and shrapnel, lasting half an hour, the enemy infantry advanced, but were driven back to the main nullah, about a mile from our front, by the accurate shooting of the Scorpion.

"The Turkish officers could be seen endeavoring to get their men forward, but they would not face the fire and retreated in disorder after suffering heavy casualties. The ground in front of our trenches in every direction can be seen covered with Turkish dead. Patrols sent out at night report that the valleys and ravines are also full of them.

"After checking and counterchecking the reports from all sources I put down their total casualties between June 28 and July 2 at 5,150 killed and 15,000 wounded."

Poetry and Patriotism.

Zakris Topelius, "the most popular poet Finland has ever known," was a lover of his native land above all else. Once, says Paul Waineman in "A Summer Tour In Finland," he wrote as follows to a little Finnish boy who was at the time residing in England for his schooling:

"You are in a great and rich country, but never forget that you are only an exile. If Queen Victoria herself should write and offer you a post in her kingdom remember that you must answer: 'I cannot because I have a cottage waiting for me when I am grown up. It has a roof higher than the loftiest hall in Windsor castle. That roof is the blue sky of my own land.'"

BARRETT HOUSE ADDITION

Barrett Brothers have nearly completed the improvements on their stores north of the hotel. A new cornice to match the hotel has been added the front painted and the interior of each store renewed.

The first room will be used as a lunch room for men. A new steel ceiling has been put up and the side walls neatly finished. Some forty feet of counter with stationary stools has been put in for a lunch counter. The room is well lighted by large windows and doors facing Evans street.

The second room has been fitted up for a billiard room with two tables, an arch connecting the two rooms The third room has been remodeled and will be used for a sample room. This is also well lighted and will be a fine place for the display of goods.

As yet it has not been decided to what use the present cafe will be put. The improvements are decidedly fine and add much to the good appearance of Tecumseh.

ANOTHER BURGLARY

The store of W. L. Coller was broken into Monday night and $9.00 taken from the cash drawer. Entrance was made through a window in the back of the store. Sometime ago a small break was made in one pane of glass. This [illegible] broken so the [illegible] could reach the fastening and raise the window and enter. Nothing else was taken so far as has been discovered.

FURNISHING VERANDA.

Hammock, Willow Armchairs and Paint Among the Possibilities.

Every well appointed country house has a veranda, terrace or gallery that is practically an outdoor sitting room Unfortunately, however, the best appointments for these are still expensive at the select shops, being classed as novelties or specialties. Willow arm chairs and Gloucester hammocks have been greatly reduced in price, but tables, garden seats, settles, etc., of good design are still high.

On the other hand, it is possible, with a little skill and a great deal of paint, to furnish a veranda very attractively with little money.

A charming breakfast porch can be equipped entirely with kitchen furniture painted and decorated like the expensive peasant and cottage sets which are in vogue at present. One of the heavy, plain ironing tables that can be converted into a settle is the best type of table to buy, and the chairs should be of the plainest. Get your furniture in the natural wood and paint it any color you wish, though green, on the whole, is most satisfactory. Make or buy a stencil of some simple design; conventionalized flowers, like the decorations on the Swedish or Hungarian pottery, are good. Stencil a border of these around your table and on the backs of your chairs. Paint it in bright peasant colors, and when these are dried go over the decorations with a waterproof varnish.

This is not work that demands any great skill, but it calls for time, patience and extreme neatness. The effect is well worth the trouble, for with the outlay of a few dollars you will have a set of furniture that you could not buy for five times that amount.

Dairy benches and stools decorated in the same way make very attractive garden furniture.

ANOTHER BARGAIN DAY

Has come and gone. Considering the weather the trade was good, quite a number of our friends taking advantage of our weekly bargains. By evening the clouds broke away and it cleared up [illegible] of people drove in for the evening's program and by 7:30 the streets were lined with autos and rigs.

The band concert was given from 7 to 9 on the corner of Chicago and Evans streets. John Pennington sang several numbers.

On the band stand near, LeRoy the juggler held forth, giving some fine stunts. The merchants were kept busy waiting on trade. Quite a number of the young people attended the dance given by Will Coller at the Witherell Hall.

These bargain days are meeting with favor, many people taking advantage of the bargains offered and it is hoped that many more who have been unable to reach Tecumseh so far, will arrange to drive in and see what we are doing. Our Tecumseh merchants are making a special effort to give real values on these days. Remember it will be worth your time to visit Tecumseh on Bargain Days during the summer. Look for our bargain sheet in Tuesday's issue.

ARTHUR R. PARDINGTON

GENERAL BREAKDOWN FROM OVERWORK

The news of the death of Arthur R. Pardington, vice president and secretary of the Lincoln Highway Association, came as a great shock to his many friends in Tecumseh where he spent his boyhood and early manhood.

He had been in Harper's Hospital for about two weeks suffering from a general breakdown from overwork in his zeal to complete the work of the highway from coast to coast. His health had been failing for sometime, but he would not give up until it was too late.

His funeral will be held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the chapel of W. R. Hamilton & Co., 26 West Elizabeth street, Detroit.

A little over a year ago Mr. Pardington was in Tecumseh and visited among his friends, making the Herald office a very pleasant call. He was quite enthusiastic over his work at that time giving us some interesting details. It is generally conceded that his perseverance and enthusiasm has made possible the success of this great venture.

KUESPERT—DARLING

Married, at South Bend, Ind., Saturday, July 24, 1915, Miss Gladys Darling and Wolfe A. Kuespert, Rev. M. Gaffony of Zion Lutheran church officiating. Miss Darling was a former Tecumseh girl and is a sister of Mrs. Clement Hardenburg. We extend congratulations.

WOOLFE—SCOFIELD

A pretty wedding occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Scofield Tuesday July 20, when their neice, Miss Cline Scofield of Eugene, Oregon was united in marriage to Mr. Ray A. Woolfe of Devils Lake, N D.

Promptly at six o'clock to Mendelssohon's Wedding March played by Miss Ivah Waldron, a cousin of the bride, the bridal procession proceeded to a bower of pink roses where the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Hartzog. The ring service was used.

After the congratulations a two course dinner was served by the Misses Lila VanValkenburg, Ivah and Florence, Waldron, Maude Scofield, Florence Bryan and Mrs. Floyd Bryan and Valder VanDyke, Mrs. Mattis catering.

The bride wore a gown of white embroidered organdy with a corsage bouquet of sweet peas

Mr. and Mrs. Woolfe left by machine for Manchester where they took the evening train for Detroit. They were followed by a merry bunch of young people who made their departure one long to be remembered.

Mr. and Mrs. Woolf will reside in Grand Rapids N. D. where Mr. Wolfe has a fine position with the Ohio Weather Stripping Co.

The out-of-town guests were Mrs Nina Miller of Detroit, Mrs. Frank Harris and daughter of Chicago and Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Harris and son Lynn of Adrian.

Miss Scofield will be remembered by many in Tecumseh as she was a graduate of T. H. S. in 1902 and resided here prior to her graduation from the M S. N. C. Since then she has been teaching in the West.

Too

MODEST?

Michigan people are apt to think that when a manufacturer says, "My product is best," he means it, but maybe his enthusiasm makes the statement a trifle exaggerated Therefore it is interesting to find that one manufacturer is accused of being too modest in regard to his 68-year-old liniment. Messrs Nicholson & Stuhr of Cheyenne, Wyo., says: We know from personal experience that Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh will do all and more than the Hanford Company claim for it."

AN ORDINANCE RELATING TO DOGS.

(361) Section 1. Be it ordained by the Common Council of the Village of Tecumseh: That no dog shall be permitted to run at large in any street or place in said village, away from the premises of the owner, at any time from the 15th day of June to the 15th day of September, in any year, unless so thoroughly and securely muzzled that no bite or harm can result there from to any living creature.

(362) Section 2. That the owner or person having possession or custody or harboring any dog, who shall allow such dog to continue within, pass through, or come within the bounds of this corporation, off the premises of such owner excepting such dog be so muzzled, shall be punished by a fine not less than five dollars and not exceeding ten dollars on conviction thereof before any Justice of the Peace of the Township of Tecumseh or imprisonment in the jail of Lenawee County not exceeding ten days for each offense or by both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

(363) Section 3. It shall be the duty of the village marshal and street commissioner and of each of them, to kill forthwith any dog running at large contrary to the provisions of this ordinance.

For sometime back people in Tecumseh have been having trouble with dogs, several having been bitten.

The above is the Village Ordinance relating to dogs and the attention of the people of Tecumseh is respectively called to the same. Through the balance of the summer and up to September 15th this ordinance will be inforced to the letter.

BARN STRUCK BY LIGHTNING SUNDAY

Wm. Richmond Rendered Unconscious.

MACON SCENE OF DISASTER

The large new barn on the Wm. Richmond farm in Macon was struck by lightning Sunday afternoon during the fierce storm that raged so furiously over the country. Fortunately the barn was not burned but Mr. Richmond who with James Hatch and the hired man had taken shelter in the barn received a severe shock and remained unconscious until in the night.

Monday he was in a critical condition and Tuesday suffered greatly with pain in his right side and lower limbs. Mr. Hatch was knocked down but suffered no injury, the hired man also felt the shock.

Mr. Richmond is one of the banking firms of Smith & Richmond in Clinton and also a prosperous farmer in Macon. He has many friends throughout the country who hope for his speedy recovery.

PLEASANT PARTY

Mrs. Henry Wilson gave a party Tuesday to a number of girl friends of her granddaughter Margeret Osborn of Columbus, O., who is spending the summer here. Games furnished the amusement of the afternoon and a fine two course supper was served. Those enjoying the party were the Misses Dorothy and Frances Weiser of Chattanooga, Tenn., Margeret and Gertrude Turner, Marian Williamson, Bernice Austin, Marjorie Field, Arline Gillespie, Helen McIntyre and Cecil Clark. The young ladies certainly had a most enjoyable time with Miss Margeret.

MRS. GEO. HAYWARD

Mrs. George Hayward passed away Tuesday morning at four o'cock after a long illness extended over a number of years from cancerous trouble aged 60 years. The funeral was held at 2 o'cock Thursday Rev. Geo. W. Jennings officiating burial at Holloway.

A Cool Wave Coming

Many times during the sweltering summer days, when duties in the home seen to almost overwhelm us, we have longed for the welcomed sign "A Cool Wave Coming."

With an Electric Fan in your home you will not fear the stifling heat of the summer.

Its gentle breese freshens and cools the surrounding atmosphere giving you new life and strength to withstand the sweltering days that otherwise would be almost unbearable.

Electric Fans can be carried from room to room. No wiring is necessary. Just plug the cord into any electric light socket and turn the switch. It will run continuously without attention and consumes little current. adv

NATURE TELLS YOU

As Many a Tecumseh Reader Knows Too Well.

When the kidneys are weak,
Nature tells you about it.
The urine is nature's index.
Infrequent or too frequent passage.
Other disorders suggest kidney ill,
Doan's Kidney Pills are for disordered kidneys.

Tecumseh people testify to their worth.

Mrs Geo Burroughs, W Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, says: "My whole body ached and my strength and energy left me. Knowing several people in Tecumseh who had been helped by Doan's Kidney Pills I got a supply of this remedy at Wright & Son's Drug store and began using them. In a few weeks I improved in every way and the pains and aches were a thing of the past. I cheerfully endorse Doan's Kidney Pills again for the benefit they brought me has been permanent.

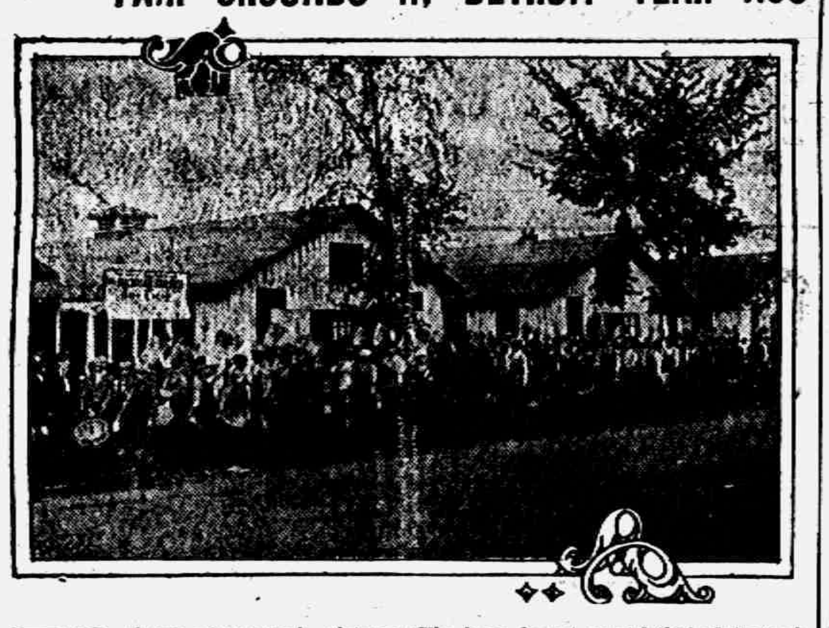
"CLEANUP" BRIGADE AT THE STATE FAIR GROUNDS IN DETROIT YEAR AGO



THE above photograph pictures the boys who attended the State Fair Boys' school in 1914, ready to begin their early morning cleanup at the grounds. The youths represent all Michigan counties and are sent to the State Fair school as a result of having passed successfully examinations which are conducted by the county school commissioners. The boys do not regard their daily task as work, but take great delight in looking after the grounds.

During the time that the boys are in Detroit they are guests of the State Fair management at the grounds. Tents and cots are provided for the youths, and they have a regular outing as well as receiving instruction during the day.

Odds and Ends.

A lightweight moire with irregular and only vague water design is used for silk coat and frock costumes, but not extensively, and much more often in combination with other materials than alone.

As for taffeta, it seems to have reached the top note in favor, but instead of being made up in semitailored styles is seen more often in quaint models reminiscent of 1830 and in many cases with much fussiness of trimming detail.

Viewing the fashion field casually and impartially, one is impressed with the fact that an exaggerated fussiness threatens to characterize the season's modes. The clever dressmaker and the clever woman will avoid these styles.

BOY SCOUTS WILL HAVE FIELD DAY AT STATE FAIR

Michigan Youths Will Gather at Detroit.

One of the big features of the Michigan State Fair, Sept. 6 to 15, will be the grand review and field day of the Michigan division of the Boy Scouts of America to be held at the Fair grounds Friday and Saturday, Sept. 10 and 11. Boy scouts from Lansing, Bay City, Saginaw, Grand Rapids, Jackson, Kalamazoo, Ann Arbor, Battle Creek, Detroit, Pontiac, Mount Clemens, Flint and other Michigan cities will be attracted to the Fair grounds at Detroit to participate in the various contests.

The boy scouts will arrive in Detroit Friday morning and will go directly to the State Fair grounds, where they will camp in tents.

Prizes will be offered by the State Fair, and the boy scouts are already planning for the big event. The program includes a rally of troops and review, building of lean to, each team to be composed of eight members, with stability, workmanship, neatness of structure and lashings at time of building only to be considered; fire by friction contest, awards to be made to boy scout producing flame in shortest time; first aid (team of six and three patients), best, neatest application and accuracy of method used to be considered as well as speed; wall scaling, exhibition events by various troops and signaling.

In the first aid contest there are a series of five events, and the scouts are to be judged on the whole series.

In the wall scaling contest the teams are to be composed of eight members each, and the start and finish points are to be ten yards respectively on each side of the wall. The height of the wall is to be nine feet. Time only is to be considered.

In the signaling event each team is to have four members, both stations sending and receiving. The international Morse code is to be used. Accuracy and time are to be considered.

The boy scouts will have wireless apparatus at the Fair grounds and will demonstrate the manner in which messages are sent. Messages will be received from and sent to boy scouts in Ann Arbor and Mount Clemens.

One of the national directors of the Boy Scouts of America will have direct charge of the grand review and field day and will be assisted by scout masters from various Michigan cities. Actively interested in the success of the big gathering of the Michigan boy scouts is Dr. J. H. Sowerby, field secretary of the Detroit Y. M. C. A.

TWO AEROPLANES WILL BATTLE IN CLOUDS AT FAIR

Big Feature Announced For State Exposition.

A marvelously realistic battle in the clouds between two aeroplanes has been booked by the Michigan State Fair and will be presented at Detroit, Sept. 6 to 15 by the Patterson aviators.

Big Sensation of Year.

The battle in the clouds is the nearest possible reproduction of the thrilling air conflicts that are being fought above the battlefields of Europe. It is considered one of the big sensations of the season. The Patterson aviators are today the most talked of flock of bird men on the the continent. They have originated half a dozen absolutely unique programs. Their spectacular bombs used in the aeroplane battle were made with the collaboration of F. S. Hamilton, director of the Michigan Naval reserves, Detroit battalions, formerly an official in the United States government powder plant at Indian Head.

National guard infantrymen, cavalrymen and marines are to participate in the battle and assist the defending aeroplane in repelling the invading plane. Actual war conditions will be adhered to. This will give the people

A good "dustless" duster can be made of a pair of old stockings, slit open, stitched together and then soaked in coal oil for several hours before hanging in the air to dry.

Machine Oil Stains.

Yellow machine oil stains on white material may be removed by rubbing the spot with a cloth wet with ammonia before using soap.

RADISH ROSES.

Radish roses are not hard to make, and they are very attractive when served as a salad garnish or with celery and olives. Make two deep cuts at right angles in the radish, but leave the ends intact. Then loosen the red skin and place the radishes in ice water. The water makes the skin curl back like rose leaves. A tiny bit of the green stem left on the radish heightens the rose effect.

WILL CONSERVE WORKERS' HEALTH

Three Score and Ten Heritage of All Men.

BIBLICAL LIFE LINE THE AIM

Many Large Industrial Enterprises Have Developed Just as Efficient Departments of Health as Are to Be Found in Most Advanced Municipalities—Seek Longer Life of Employees.

San Francisco.—The biblical limit of threescore and ten will eventually be the natural heritage of every man, and the railroads are engaged in an earnest effort to bring about this condition as promptly as possible, said Dr. C. W. Hopkins, chief surgeon of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway company, in a paper presented to the Academy of Medicine on "The Hospital Organization of the Railway System."

Dr. Hopkins pointed out that many large industrial enterprises had developed just as efficient departments of health as were to be found in the most advanced municipalities and sometimes made even greater per capita expenditure. The railroad physician or surgeon had an especially fine field before him, as the railways were finding it their duty not only to prevent accidents, but to prevent disease from crippling the efficiency of their armies of employees. "It is now a well recognized fact among the managements of the railroad," he said, "that it is just as important to care for their sick and injured as it is to maintain a certain standard of efficiency or perfection of their rolling stock and roadbed."

In considering the organization of such work he said the first consideration was the proper housing of railway employees, in order that the man could feel well in the environment of a home and be free from worry and anxiety. The next step toward efficiency lay in the direction of physical examination to determine the approach of disease in its incipient stage. "There should be an understanding with the workmen that this examination is not for the purpose of preparing him for the scrap pile," he said, "but for the purpose of maintaining a condition of bodily health that will materially prolong his working days, together with a higher degree of earning capacity and efficiency.

"Two general methods have been in use for some years by forty-two representative railroads of this country, with the general predominance in favor of the hospital organization, where the men themselves contribute a certain monthly amount toward their maintenance. Twenty-four of the forty-two railroads are today using the hospital organizations, some of which were established as long as fifty years ago. This was primarily brought about on account of a certain number of these roads running through a very sparsely settled country, where settlements and doctors were few and far between, and there were no hospitals, and where it was found that men often suffered and sometimes died because of lack of immediate and proper care. By a small contribution by the men they were enabled to receive the proper care by good men and to enjoy the comforts that were necessary toward their well being, and with but small cost to themselves.

"The other eighteen roads employ surgeons and hospitals and treat their men for occupational injuries, paying all bills for such treatment and care without the small monthly assessment contributed by the men. There have been many arguments by learned economists both for and against each method."

"The Transportation of Consumptives" was exhaustively considered in a paper by Dr. Henry B. Hemenway of Evanston, Ill. Dr. Hemenway said that, although consumptives were prone to travel in greater numbers than any other one class of persons afflicted with disease, humanitarianism, as well as law, would protect them in their desire to travel unless it be shown that their journeys particularly endangered their fellow travelers. The conclusion to which he came after reviewing statistics and laws bearing on the subject was that the dangers involved were comparatively slight and that any attempt at segregation of consumptives during transportation was impracticable.

If the federal government were to undertake restriction of the travel of consumptives in the United States, he said, it could do so only if the nuisance were very real. One thing to be considered, he said, was the fact that most cases of tubercular infection occurred during childhood and that the large proportion of travelers were adults. Again, if there were special dangers to the traveling public we should find passenger brakemen and conductors showing a higher consumptive rate than similar employees on freight trains. But the reverse is the case, he said, and quoted a number of authorities to that effect.

A MODERN FABLE

How a Town Was Made.

HUSTLE BUILT IT

Claude Came Along With the Big Newspaper Idea, and Isit Sat Up [illegible] Notice—Injection of Printing Ink Galvanized Dead Burg Into Life—Modern Improvements Then Converted Tank Town Into a Real Metropolis.

By W. B. POWELL of the Clearwater (Fla.) Sun.

[With apologies to George Ade.]

Once in the Dim and Misty Pathways of Civilization, before the days of the Referendum and Recall, a Gink wearing Overlapping Cuffs and Underlapping Collars, and who combed his hair Straight Back like a Sea Lion, dropped off of Number Six, Southbound, at a certain Half Mast Dump out on a Spur Division somewhere between the Celery Belt and the Everglades, where the Leading Citizens wore Gum Arctics with Big Buckles and where Parched Corn, lubricated with Photo Paste, was served at Select Functions.

He was Welcomed-to-Our-Town by a Large and Commodious Audience which packed the Amphitheatre of the Railroad Loafing Place. There was the Gazook with a black sweater who operated the Ark which Navigated between the Steel Rails and the Only Hotel, two Giggling Milk-fed Girls out for a Mash; four Prominent Citizens sitting back on their Surplus trying to Hatch out Eight Per Cent, and eleven leading pillars of High Society who were there to Grab some express packages which contained Great Joy that they could Lap Up faster than the Revenue Officers could paste on the Stamps.

"Isit" Is Its Name.

"Isit" was blazoned on both ends of the Da-po, and Isit [illegible] destined by Lurid Literature to become the New York of Sub-tropical, Sun-Kissed Florida.

It was a Low, Rambling, Sheetiron Cornice, slab-sided sort of a town, so out of harmony with Nature that it couldn't be set to Rag Time or a Sonata in B Minor. It was a Lead Pipe Cinch that its Vertebra was Catalogued as Broadway.

It was a Blot on the Landscape afflicted with an Eczema of Architecture, splotched with a Dull Weather-Beaten Complexion and Running Sores like Rotten Sidewalks and Galvanized Awnings. Its 642 acres of Various and Assorted Weeds needed Manicuring. There were so many For Sale Signs impaling the climate that it looked a National Cemetery by moonlight.

Claude—for our hero's name was Claude—Claude DeShon—gave the Once Over to the Human Mephitis Mephitis who navigated the Village Ox Cart; passed up the Giggling Girls with Contumely; scorned the Overtures of the Eight Per Cent Night Riders, and taking his bearings from the Solitary Coal Oil Glimmer which Pinkled so Pale at the end of Broadway, he Jiggled his Carburetor, threw himself into Low Gear and set his course a little East by So'east and went pulsating into the Solitude of the Night.

He Was a Man With a Mission.

He had a Mighty Mission to perform.

While his Massive Thinktank was Conning a Suitable Approach to make to the Geezers of this Misfit Village he collided with a Razorback employed as Sanitary Officer. He had no more than Apologized for his Offense of Interfering with the Town's Chief Rooter, than he Floundered into a Hog Wallow. By this time his Religion was Cracked.

With a Flat Tire and his Radiator Bubbling over with Wrath he steered into the Assembly Room of the Palace Hotel, rates one dollar per, with the Grace of a Stone Boat in Sloppy Weather.

Si Jenks, the prop. and gen. man., was awaiting his coming. He had been Awaiting the coming of some Weak-minded Victim all day. Si ran a livery, sale and feed stable in Conjunction with his Palace Hotel. You could take your choice. He had Strange whiskers and a Mackerel Eye, and Drank Soda Pop when he wanted to be Devilish. The Palace was some hotel. Even the Hound Dog, which was part of the Furniture, howled when the Dinner Bell called one to Partake. The rooms were as big as a Telephone Booth, and furnished like a Box Stall.

"Evening, stranger," he spoke, shoving a Stubby Pencil into his Digits, and pointing to the Register. "My rates be one dollar a day, strictly terra firma."

He, a Newspaper Man!

"Evening, sir," replied Claude, for he was Feeling His Way, as he did not know whether Si was a Leading Gazook or just a Plain Timekiller. "I want a Rabbit Warren where the Alfalfa is Deep, and by-the-bye you can Lead me to the Fodder. For the night, put me next to Pure Reading Matter, Top of the Column. I Crave Rest, for my Soul is Tortured and I have Callouses on My Conscience. I have Kotowed to your Sanitary Officer and Chief Rooter; have Inspected your Real Estate; been Lamped for a Hardware Drummer by Loud Calicoes; been Approached by your Animated Movie William Jennings Bryan to speak to them on the Commission Form of Government.

The Isit Hurrah came out within the course of three weeks.

The town made Merry.

There was a Grand Free Barbecue and the Boom-de-Aye lads Punctured the Atmosphere with "A Hot Time in the Old Town To-night."

Beginning of the Improvements.

The first copy was auctioned off to the Highest Bidder and it brought $7.89, which Sum was immediately placed to the Credit of the Womans' Civic Society to build a Public Park and the balance to be appropriated to the Research Society and the Home for Indigent and Indignant Grass Widows.

The Hurrah was real sassy in its initial Issue. Claude was strong on Uplift and Fussy on Social Shams. He said that Isit was Suffering from a Parcel of Hasbeens and Mossbacks with green scums on their Moose Hides; that it was a Long Primer Community on a Nonpareil Diet; that it was Starving Itself to Death waiting for Something to Transpire; that the Richest Man in Town was a Loafer because he didn't Mix it up with Progress—it would Increase his taxes and they might Discover that he should be Paying an Income Tax to preserve the Nation from Bankruptcy; that there were too many Churches and too little Religion; that the town should Scatter some Paving Material over its Sand Streets; that the Old Maids had better be tangoing than Knitting Socks for War Sufferers; that it needed more spirit than a Guinea Pig and should have [illegible] where its Wishbone was; that it should take a Rise out of Itself and Get Right and Stay Right.

Many who welcomed Claude with the Glad Hand and Loose Pocketbook began hedging and wanted to Retrench on Fellowship and Mazuma. They said he was a Two-faced Walhalla with a Misfit Conscience, and Gratitude was a Total Stranger to him.

Claude was just as popular as Lagrippe or Tonsilitis.

But he only smiled and replied: Watch My Smoke. I haven't began to Steam Up.

He Girded Up His Loins and began Mental Exertion on the Second Issue of the Hurrah.

Reform Gets on the Job.

He tackled the Social Evils as well as the Dry Rot of Commercialism.

The Hurrah stirred Society and Church from Center to Circumference.

Claude was there with the Bells On.

The Denizens got so mad that they Voted him Mayor and told him to Go as Far as He Liked.

Claude had them tax themselves for Water under ground and Brick on Top; an Electric Light plant paid Current Rates for a Franchise. He ordered Modern Plumbing for the Fire Department, and Red Upholstered Furniture for the Council Chamber.

Everything and Everybody Climbed Aboard the Uplift Wagon.

The Palace Hotel divorced its Livery Stables from its Dining Room and changed the Roller Towel every other day whether it Needed it or not.

Harry Floyd wrote an idiom, or something idiotic about the place.

Dame Fortune Lamps Claude.

In the meanwhile Claude held Quiet Sessions with Brick Manufacturers, Sewer Contractors and other High Brows, and his Bank Account got so Heavy that the Steenth National Bank asked him to Remove it as it interfered with the Ordinary Course of Business.

He married the Dresden China Daughter of the Richest Man in Town and owned two automobiles with decorated Jeweled Fenders. They led the Delicatessen Circles, and ranked above the First Families who dated their ancestry back to the Freeze of 1895, or those who Got Their start selling catfish to Salmon canneries.

He was a director in Every Watered Corporation in Isit, and His Name was the Trademark of Commercial Probity.

Now Isit Is Really "It."

Isit is now Some Town. It has half as many Refined Caucasians as the City Directory Attributes to it. It has all the Modern Improvements and they are Just as Unsatisfactory as Elsewhere. It has a Surfeit of Culture and can tell an Oil Painting from a Can of Sardines; its People read Josephus and the Six Best Sellers; It has Afternoon Teas and enjoys Sponge Cake with Clinkers in it. It has a Chautauqua everytime some Idle Parlor Entertainers want some Coin. It has a National Ball Team Capering Over the Green each Spring eating their Heads Off at the town's expense. It has a fine collection of Punk Dollars and is ready to Absorb some State Fair Rosettes at one dollar per. It gives the Lofty Tip to every kind of Money Extractor, from cripples with Pasteboards to Write-Up Men from the Northern Papers who Come Down Each Winter to Save the Country from the Demnition Bowwows. It sends Vaudeville Artists traveling over the Country by auto, by canoe and shoe leather to Advertise the place. The Board of Trade has a large and Influential Membership of nonpaying members and a larger Outstanding Indebtedness.

Isit is now famed.

It has all the Other Towns in its Class hanging their Chins Over Tombstones weeping their hearts out.

It has them Faded to a Faretheewell.

MORAL—The town makes the newspaper.

The Ethics of Borrowing.

Some time since a little girl who lived in a rural community appeared at the back door of a neighbor's house with a small basket in her hand. "Mrs. Smith," said she, as the neighbor answered her timid knock, "mother wants to know if you won't please lend her a dozen eggs. She wants to put them under a hen."

"Put them under a hen?" was the wondering rejoinder of the neighbor. "I didn't know that you had a hen!"

"We haven't," was the frank rejoinder of the little girl. "We are going to borrow the hen from Mrs. Brown."—Christian Endeavor World.

To Clean Bronze.

Dip the bronze object into boiling water and rub with a flannel cloth dipped in soapsuds made from yellow soap. Dry with a soft cloth and then polish off with a chamois.

GETTING THEM SOFT.

It was their first breakfast in their little flat after they had returned from the honeymoon trip. Lovey had asked Dovey to fix him a couple of soft boiled eggs. When the eggs were served Lovey opened one of them and found it to be as hard as a rock.

"These eggs are very hard," exclaimed Lovey. "I wanted them boiled soft."

"Well, dear, they ought to be soft," replied Dovey. "I just boiled them and boiled them and boiled them until I felt sure that they must be soft. But I only boiled them for twenty minutes. Perhaps I should have let them boil for half an hour."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

For the Army Worm.

Spray heavily with arsenate of lead for the army worm. Spray the lawns and all plants and shrubs. Do not wait until the insects arrive, as that will be too late. Spray at once and keep all foliage well covered with the spray.

Polish For Steel.

PROTESTS ACTIVITIES GERMAN SPIES IN U. S.

Washington Makes Representations to Kaiser.

Washington, July 30.—As a result of investigations by the United States government the state department has instructed Ambassador Gerard to bring to the attention of the German government evidence indicating that agents of the German government have been engaged in forging American passports and furnishing them to German spies.

Evidence collected by the state department's representatives through various channels tends to establish beyond a doubt the fact concerning which complaint is made. One of the forged passports was found on a German spy. The state department also has extensive data compiled from the statements of self-confessed German spies arrested in England. More than one case is involved.

There is little doubt here that certain authorities in Berlin are and have been fully cognizant of what has been going on. Captain Prieger of the Germanman admiralty said to be head of the spy system in Berlin has been mentioned as the man who was furnishing the spies with the forged passports.

Belgian Ship Is Torpedoed.

London, July 30.—The Belgian steamship Princesse Marie Jose, of 1,953 tons gross burden, was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine. Twenty-two members of the crew of twenty-five were saved.

CORN [illegible]

Cool Weather and Uneven Distribution of Rain Still Prevail.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 30.—Condition of Michigan crops and a review of the weather of the past week are given in the following weekly report of the local weather bureau.

"On account of the continued cool weather, corn is still quite backward, although it has improved somewhat during the week. Haying is well advanced throughout the lower peninsula and has begun in the upper. Wheat and rye are being cut in the northerly parts of the lower peninsula; in the southern and central counties the grains are mostly in shock or stack. Oats are turning and in good condition. Potatoes and fruit, especially peaches, are promising."

HANDCAR TURNS SOMERSAULT

Alma Man Fatally Hurt, Is Belief, and Others Are Injured.

Alma, Mich., July 30.—Warren Keep of Alma was probably fatally injured when a gasoline hand car on the Pere Marquette railroad turned over here. It is believed his skull was fractured.

Jesse Phillips, section foreman, sustained a fractured right leg, and Henry Claybuth suffered severe cuts in his right leg.

For Sore, Tired Eyes.

One of the simple home remedies for troubled eyes is hot water. Hot water applications can be managed by soaking two soft cloths in very hot water. Place one cloth over the eyes as hot as can be endured while the other is heating. Apply a fresh cloth as soon as the first cools.

Boracic acid, a quarter of a teaspoonful added to a glass of warm water and permitted to cool before using, makes an excellent eye lotion within the reach of all.

EASTLAND PROBE TO SPARE NONE

Judge Landis Orders Thorough Inquiry by U. S. Grand Jury.

WHOLESALE JAILINGS HALTED

Witnesses Who Come to Testify in U. S. Court Must Not Be Interfered With by State and County Authorities—Redfield Inquiry Has Begun—Fixing Number of Passengers.

Chicago, July 30.—Judge Landis selected twenty-three men from a grand jury venire to investigate criminal phases of the Eastland disaster. He instructed the federal grand jury to go into every phase of the disaster and not to limit itself to the conditions existing at the instant of the occurrence on July 24, but to become familiar with the career of the boat and the experience of the owners, managers and crew in her management and navigation.

"Investigate thoroughly," said the judge, "in order that you may answer the question:

"Did the occurrence result from any act or acts of omission or commission enjoined by federal law on the part of either the owners, managers, crew or other persons having to do with the subject matter, or on the part of any governmental official or officials charged with a duty respecting the same measures? And should you become convinced that such was the fact it will be your duty to express your finding by appropriate presentments."

Jurors to Go to Scene.

Following the instructions to the jury Judge Landis directed Deputy United States Marshal Thomas Hennebry, bailiff of the grand jury, to conduct the grand jury members to the scene of the Eastland disaster before they begin their consideration.

Landis Orders Hull Released.

William H. Hull, vice president and general manager of the St. Joseph & Chicago Steamship company, who was ordered held to the state grand jury on a charge of manslaughter by the coroner's jury, will not be taken into custody by the state as long as he is in Chicago as a government witness. This was decided by Judge Landis in the United States District court.

Coroner's mittimi were served on Robert Reid and Charles C. Eckliff, federal inspectors, as they sat in the federal building ready to testify before Secretary Redfield's committee, but later the effort to arrest them also was abandoned because they too had come to the state in response to federal subpoenas.

Greenebaum Gives Bond.

The three men not so protected, however, were taken into custody. They were W. K. Greenebaum, general manager of the Indiana Transportation company; Captain Harry Pederson and Chief Engineer Erickson of the Eastland.

Greenebaum was taken to jail, but later was released on $20,000 bond.

Redfield Inquiry Under Way.

The inquiry into the Eastland disaster under the direction of Secretary of Commerce William C. Redfield, which had been branded by a committee of the city council as a whitewash, is in progress in another part of the federal building.

Robert H. McCreary, one of the United States steamboat inspectors, whose duty it was to count the passengers as they went aboard the Eastland, told how the two thousand five hundredth passenger was allowed to go aboard.

Hoyne Not so Fiery.

State's Attorney Hoyne, after considerable activity in the probe, discovered that his office has little jurisdiction in the case, and turned most of his evidence over to the United States authorities.

DRIVER OF JITNEY MAY DIE

Car Containing Five Turns Over Twice—All Are Injured.

Attica, Ind., July 30.—Lee Little, twenty-eight years old, of this city, driver of a jitney car, was injured, perhaps fatally, and Chester Cheak, also of Attica, was injured seriously at Stafford's corner just outside this city, when Little's automobile skidded in soft gravel and turned over twice.

Little sustained a dislocation of a hip and is believed to have been internally injured. Cheak suffered concussion of the brain and is still unconscious. James Sheridan, Thomas East and Clyde Boyer, the other occupants of the car, were thrown clear of the wreck and were only bruised. The party of young men was returning from the automobile races at Covington.

Squeaky New Shoes.

No matter how I tippy toe,
No matter where I try to go,
My brand new shoes keep squeaking so—
You sneaky, squeaky, creaky shoe!
I really don't know what to do
With such a naughty thing as you!
You squeaky shoe!

You squeak like tiny little mice
Who've nibbled at the cheese and rice;
Now, tell me, shoes, is this thing nice?
You sneaky, squeaky, creaky shoe!
I really don't know what to do
With such a naughty thing as you!
You squeaky shoe!

You squeak like squirrels in a tree,
You squeak at mother, then at me;
Now what can all this trouble be?
You sneaky, squeaky, creaky shoe!
I really don't know what to do
With such a naughty thing as you!
You squeaky shoe!

BRITAIN WILL MODIFY ORDERS IN COUNCIL

New Note Said to Make Important Concessions to U. S.

Washington, July 30.—The state department has been advised informally by Great Britain that she is prepared to make certain concessions to American commerce, which, it is hoped, will remove some of the causes of friction between the two countries.

Great Britain will modify her order prohibiting the shipment out of Germany or Austria of goods bought by Americans. The original order declared June 1 as the last day on which these shipments could be taken out. The time was later extended to June 15. Great Britain will lift this order completely from certain classes of goods, a list of which will be announced.

The modification of Great Britain's order regarding the shipments out of Germany and Austria will have an important effect on American trade. Orders amounting to millions of dollars were placed in Germany by American establishments before Great Britain's order went into effect. Tremendous quantities of goods have been held up in Germany.

The result has been that some American industries have been forced to cut down their production and almost close because of failure to get material.

NO SUNDAY LID, SAYS MAYOR

Privilege to Break Law Part of East St. Louis Investment.

East St. Louis, Ill., July 30.—Mayor Mollman will not put the lid on saloons on Sunday in East St. Louis, at least not until Jan. 1.

He made this plain to a committee which called on him yesterday to urge Sunday closing of saloons. He said he was not disposed to insist on Sunday closing at this time. He pointed out that the saloon men had taken out licenses expecting to run seven days a week, and said he was not inclined to make any change in the system at present.

Pioneer Thrashes Wheat With 125-Year-Old Flail.

Columbus, Ind., July 30.—Joseph Thayer, eighty years old, of Clifford, took down an old flail used by his grandfather more than 125 years ago and flailed out four bushels of wheat. The wheat was flailed on a large piece of canvas on which the aged man jolted the wheat up and down, then raking the chaff from the top.

Many residents of Clifford gathered to witness the thrashing and hear Thayer explain how it was done before thrashing machines were invented.

WILSON HURRIES NOTE TO MEXICO

Stiff Demand Put up to Factions Is Near Ultimatum.

FOOD MUST BE DISTRIBUTED

Zapatistas Assault American Citizen and Son of Chilean Consul, Arrest Spaniards and Trample on American Flag—Starvation Grips City of Mexico—Situation Desperate.

Washington, July 30.—Representations about to be made to military leaders in Mexico may precipitate a situation that will compel the United States to resort to extreme measures south of the Rio Grande. Dispatches received at the state department indicate that conditions are worse than ever in Mexico City and that the entire native population of the capital is facing starvation. Under these circumstances it is feared that foreign life and property are in danger.

Way for Food Delivery.

The new representations went forward today. They were sent to First Chief Carranza and General Zapata, who are in control of parts of the federal district in which Mexico City is located. These leaders will be informed that the United States must insist upon the admission of food to the capital for the relief of the starving population and that it would regret any action on the part of either that would tend to defeat the consummation of the relief measures proposed. Should Carranza and Zapata refuse to obey this injunction, it is believed by some that this government may be obliged to take other steps to see that the food is delivered.

In the note sent to Carranza and Zapata, the United States insists that they order that food be shipped inland for the relief of the starving thousands.

Zapatistas Assault U. S. Citizen.

The temper of the Zapatistas, who are operating in and around Mexico City and at points between the capital and Vera Cruz, is strikingly shown in a recent outrage on an American citizen, the son of the Chilean minister to Mexico and two Spaniards. At the same time the Zapatistas offered an affront to the American flag. Allen Mallory, accompanied by the son of the Chilean minister and the two Spaniards, was traveling in an automobile just [illegible] of Mexico City. He had an American flag displayed on his machine. Encountering a band of Zapatistas, Mallory and his companions were ordered out of the car.

Mallory and the Chilean were assailed and the Spaniards were ordered to be shot.

Mallory protested and was threatened with death. The Zapatistas pulled down the American flag and trampled it in the dust. The dispatch received here did not say whether or not the order for the execution of the Spaniards was carried out. The report of this incident came to Vera Cruz from unofficial sources in Mexico City.

Chili Also Protests.

From the same source in the Mexican capital came a report that Paul Hudson, an American publisher of the Mexican Herald, and his family have been taken into custody. Grave fears are felt for their safety.

This government will make representations in behalf of both Mallory and the Hudson family and no doubt is expressed that Chili will protest against the indignities offered the son of its diplomatic representative in Mexico City.

DESERTED WIFE KEEPS DATE

But She Takes Along Policeman—Hubby on State Farm.

Hartford City, Ind., July 30.—Howard Fleming, eighteen years old, brought Clara Reitz, nineteen, here from Fort Wayne with her money, May 8, and married her after an acquaintance of three weeks. After a honeymoon of three days the couple went back to Fort Wayne. The bride returned to work and her spouse took things easy, deserting her two weeks after the ceremony. Then one night he called his wife by telephone and asked her to get a girl companion and meet him and another young man. The wife promised, but took an officer with her and caused her husband's arrest. The city judge sentenced Fleming to serve sixty days at the state farm.

Sewer Cavein Kills Man.

Crawfordsville, Ind., July 30.—Elijah Zachary, fifty-five years old, was crushed to death by a sewer cavein here. He was laying tile with two other men in an eighteen-foot hole when tons of sand piled in on them.

Probably Fatally Burned.

Evansville, Ind., July 30.—Frank Kaffenberger, thirty years old, was probably fatally burned when a kettle of beer boiled over, drenching him with the boiling liquid.

Portland (Ore.) School Garden.

The Shattuck school garden, located in the foreign residence section of the city, was organized in January of 1914, securing a piece of land 100 feet square. This lot was an unsightly dumping ground for all sorts of debris. The boys took quick action in clearing this ground and removed in all ten tons of rubbish, besides clearing the stumps, and within a very short time had transformed this eyesore into a garden which was a surprise to all after having first viewed the same place before its transformation.

Movies for Children.

The Atlanta (Ga.) chamber of commerce has definitely formulated plans to present moving pictures especially selected to please and instruct children. These children's movies will be shown every Saturday morning.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound and imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The City Beautiful

BEAUTIFYING CITIES WITH FLOWERS.

A Practice Quite Common Abroad Might Well Be Made General Here.

At small expense the denizens of a city can easily help in a material way to make it more beautiful. The beauty of many foreign cities is heightened by the co-operation of the inhabitants in placing in the windows of their houses or apartments small flower boxes. Nothing makes for cheerfulness more than a profusion of greens and bright colored plants. Some residents of a few of our cities now carry out this beautiful practice. If residents were to place small flower boxes outside the windows of their homes little trouble or expense would be involved. The cost would be trivial, and the care of the plants would take but a few minutes a day.

In all our larger cities the apartment house is coming more and more into use, and great numbers are now in course of construction. Builders might help make the city more beautiful by constructing in these apartment houses window boxes ready for use. Care must be taken that they do not fall.

MAYOR'S PUBLICITY PLAN.

Atlantic City Executive Would Have Advertising Done by Municipality.

To systematize resort publicity, which heretofore has been largely a matter of individual enterprise, is the purpose of Mayor William Riddle. He expects eventually to have the municipality assume entire responsibility for advertising Atlantic City, N. J., and securing conventions, making ample provision through tax levy.

"We haven't been doing this thing as it should be done," Mayor Riddle said recently in announcing his intention to insist upon an initial appropriation of $25,000 for publicity and conventions in this year's budget. He believes that if the hotel men and other live citizens give the municipalization of publicity approval the appropriation can be doubled next year.

"There isn't any place under the sun where there is greater need of advanced methods for obtaining conventions and great numbers of visitors," the mayor continued. "Providing health and pleasure for great crowds is Atlantic City's business—our only business, because we haven't any industries. Yet we have been doing our advertising in a hit or miss fashion, depending upon individual expenditures by hotel men and a publicity bureau supported by a small number of people.

"What we need to do is to follow the lead of cities where this thing is done much better and put our publicity upon a business basis, financed as we maintain our police and fire departments and the board walk."

Fountains in Parks.

Foutains in city parks not only help to beautify the park, but are very popular as drinking places for the children who get thirsty at play. On warm days these fountains are apt to be surrounded with children, to whom drinking in this fashion seems to be a part of their play, so thoroughly do they enjoy it. Also these fountains are much used by the birds, and these little creatures come regularly to them in the early morning and in the evening as well. Altogether these fountains are a boon and a blessing, and their multiplication should be encouraged.

CHILDREN DRINKING AT A PARK FOUNTAIN

For the Children

Wild Lamb Which Looks Like Its Tame Relatives.

Nearly every child has seen at one time or another the gentle little lamb which frolics so gayly in the pasture with its mother. But here is a wild lamb that was captured in the mountains of Spain and which is said by scientists to be a member of the family from which our domestic sheep are descended. A beautiful and innocent little creature it is and differs slightly from the playful little fellows we all know so well. This lambkin is said to be of the Musmon family, which had its origin, so far as known, in southern Europe. Whether this is true or not, the fact remains that any person who had ever seen a lamb would at once pronounce this little animal to be a baby sheep. He doesn't look so very wild either. When wild animals are treated kindly they soon become tame and love those who are gentle with them.

CIRCUS DAY

In Tecumseh

Howe's Great London Shows arrived in Tecumseh bright and early Friday morning from Hudson and pitched their tents on the Issac Sloan property. Some difficulty was encountered in getting some of the heavy wagons on the soft ground but with the help of the usual booster "The Elephant" the deed was accomplished.

A free street parade was given at 10.30 a. m. and was witnessed by a big crowd. A finer bunch of horses is seldom seen, the costumes of the riders were very attractive and the work of Mr. and Mrs. Cornstock on a load of hay was most amusing.

At the Show Grounds was found the usual number of side shows, barkers calling out their attractions and say, "you could win, buy some of that famous "circus lemonade." Two performances were given one at 2 o'clock and the other at 8 in the evening.

The Howes Shows provide for two rings and a platform and from the opening grand pageant until the end there was not a dull moment. Many clever acts were seen noticeable among them the work of a group of tight wire artists, Japanese troupe of tamblers and acrobats, trained horses who danced the latest dances and trapize work.

Instead of the usual cut and dried concert at the close of the performance they gave a real wild west show. The educated horse was well worth the price asked.

SEAWEED AS FERTILIZER.

How It Can Be Used to the Best Advantage.

In general the use of seaweed as a fertilizer is a good investment, says a contributor to the Country Gentleman. On sandy soils it may merely be plowed under, but in general it is preferable to compost it.

Seaweed varies considerably in analysis, according to species, but all kinds contain a high percentage of moisture and more potash than do soft structure land plants. The kelp species in particular carry much potash.

The disadvantage of applying large quantities of seaweed to farm land lies in the possibility of injury to some crops through the chlorine in the salt that adheres to the weed and in the acidity that may be developed through decomposition of masses of the weed.

The weed should be spread on the land as far ahead of crop planting as possible to permit of the chlorine's being carried off by drainage. An application of lime will remedy both the acidity and the ill effects of the chlorine. Much larger applications of the seaweed can be made on sandy soils than on heavy soils or on those not well drained.

Plowing under leguminous crops if they are of the deep rooted species, like clover and alfalfa, will maintain soil fertility. The nodules on the roots will collect nitrogen from the air, and the deep roots will bring up potash and phosphoric acid from the subsoil.

But lime should be applied occasionally to prevent any acidity that may develop as the result of decomposition of masses of green growths. At intervals of seven to ten years it would also be advisable to apply phosphorus in the form of ground bones, slag or raw phosphate rock. Commercial fertilizers may be termed crop producers only. They do little for soil improvement.

A Cool Wave Coming

Many times during the sweltering summer days, when duties in the home seem to almost overwhelm us, we have longed for the welcomed sign "A Cool Wave Coming."

With an Electric Fan in your home you will not fear the stifling heat of the summer.

Its gentle breeze freshens and cools the surrounding atmosphere giving you new life and strength to withstand the sweltering days that otherwise would be almost unbearable.

Electric Fans can be carried from room to room. No wiring is necessary. Just plug the cord into any electric light socket and turn the switch. It will run continuously without attention and consumes little current. adv

The FORESTER'S DAUGHTER

A ROMANCE OF THE BEAR TOOTH RANGE

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1914, by Hamlin Garland

CHAPTER VIII.

The Walk In the Rain.

ONE by one, under her supervision, he made preparations for morning. He cut some shavings from a dead, dry branch of fir and put them under the fly and brought a bucket of water from the creek, and then together they dragged up the dead tree.

Had the young man been other than he was, the girl's purity, candor and self reliance would have conquered him, and when she withdrew to the little tent and let fall the frail barrier between them she was as safe from intrusion as if she had taken refuge behind gates of triple brass. Nothing in all his life had moved him so deeply as her solicitude, her sweet trust in his honor, and he sat long in profound meditation. Any man would be rich in the ownership of her love he admitted. That he possessed her pity and her friendship he knew, and he began to wonder if he had made a deeper appeal to her than this.

"Can it be that I am really a man to her," he thought, "I who am only a poor weakling whom the rain and snow can appall?"

Then he thought of the effect of this night upon her life. What would Clifford Belden do now? To what deeps would his rage descend if he should come to know of it?

Berrie was serene. Twice she spoke from her couch to say: "You'd better go to bed. Daddy can't get here till tomorrow now."

"I'll stay up awhile yet. My boots aren't entirely dried out."

After a silence she said: "You must not get chilled. Bring your bed into the tent. There is room for you."

"Oh, no, that isn't necessary. I'm standing it very well."

"You'll be sick!" she urged, in a voice of alarm. "Please drag your bed inside the door. What would I do if you should have pneumonia tomorrow? You must not take any risk of a fever."

The thought of a sheltered spot, of something to break the remorseless wind, overcame his scruples, and he drew his bed inside the tent and rearranged it there.

"You're half frozen," she said. "Your teeth are chattering."

"I'll be all right in a few moments," he said. "Please go to sleep. I shall be snug as a bug in a moment."

She watched his shadowy motions from her bed, and when at last he had nestled into his blankets she said, "If you don't lose your chill I'll heat a rock and put it at your feet."

He was ready to cry out in shame of his weakness, but he lay silent till he could command his voice, then he said: "That would drive me from the country in disgrace. Think of what the fellows down below will say when they know of my cold feet!"

"They won't hear of it, and, besides, it is better to carry a hot water bag than to be laid up with a fever."

Her anxiety lessened as his voice resumed its pleasant tenor flow. "Dear girl," he said, "no one could have been sweeter—more like a guardian angel to me. Don't place me under any greater obligation. Go to sleep. I am better—much better now."

She did not speak for a few moments, then in a voice that conveyed to him a knowledge that his words of endearment had deeply moved her she softly said, "Good night."

He heard her sigh drowsily thereafter once or twice, and then she slept, and her slumber redoubled in him his sense of guardianship, of responsibility. Lying there in the shelter of her tent, the whole situation seemed simple, innocent and poetic. But looked at from the standpoint of Clifford Belden it held an accusation.

"It cannot be helped," he said. "The only thing we can do is to conceal the fact that we spent the night beneath this tent alone."

In the belief that the way would clear with the dawn, he, too, fell asleep, while the fire sputtered and smudged in the fitful mountain wind.

The second dawn came slowly, as though crippled by the storm and walled back by the clouds.

With a dull ache in his bones, Wayland crept out to the fire and set to work fanning the coals with his hat, as he had seen the supervisor do. He worked desperately till one of the embers began to angrily sparkle and to smoke. Then, slipping away out of earshot, he broke an armful of dry fir branches to heap above the wet, charred logs. Soon these twigs broke into flame, and Berrie, awakened by the crackle of the pine branches, called out, "Is it daylight?"

"Yes, but it's very dark daylight. Don't leave your warm bed for the dampness and cold out here. Stay where you are. I'll get breakfast."

"How are you this morning? Did you sleep?"

"Fine!"

"I'm afraid you had a bad night," she insisted, in a tone which indicated her knowledge of his suffering.

"Camp life has its disadvantages," he admitted, as he put the coffee pot on the fire. "But I'm feeling better now. I never fried a bird in my life, but I'm going to try it this morning. I have some water heating for your bath." He put the soap, towel and basin of hot water just inside the tent flap. "Here it is. I'm going to bathe in the lake. I must show my hardihood."

When he returned he found the girl full dressed, alert and glowing, but she greeted him with a touch of shyness and self consciousness new to her, and her eyes veiled themselves before his glance.

"Now, where do you suppose the supervisor is?" he asked.

"I hope he's at home," she replied quite seriously. "I'd hate to think of him camped in the high country without bedding or tent."

"Oughtn't I to take a turn up the trail and see? I feel guilty, somehow. I must do something."

"You can't help matters any by hoofing about in the mud. No, we'll just hold the fort till he comes. That's what he'll expect us to do."

He submitted once more to the force of her argument, and they ate breakfast in such intimacy and good cheer that the night's discomforts and anxieties counted for little.

"We have to camp here again tonight," she explained demurely.

"Worse things could happen than that," he gallantly answered. "I wouldn't mind a month of it, only I shouldn't want it to rain or snow all the time."

"Poor boy! You did suffer, didn't you? I was afraid you would. Did you sleep at all?" she asked tenderly.

"Oh, yes, after I came inside; but, of course, I was more or less restless expecting your father to ride up."

"That's funny. I never feel that way. I slept like a log after I knew you were comfortable. You must have a better bed and more blankets. It's always cold up here."

The sunlight was short lived. The clouds settled over the peaks, and ragged wisps of gray vapor dropped down the timbered slopes of the prodigious amphitheater in which the lake lay. Again Berrie made everything snug while her young woodsman toiled at bringing logs for the fire.

At last fully provided for, they sat contentedly side by side under the awning and watched the falling rain as it splashed and sizzled on the sturdy fire. "It's a little like being shipwrecked on a desert island, isn't it?" he said. "As if our boats had drifted away."

At noon she again prepared an elaborate meal. She served potatoes and grouse, hot biscuit with sugar sirup and canned peaches and coffee done to just the right color and aroma. He declared it wonderful, and they ate with repeated wishes that the supervisor might turn up in time to share their feast, but he did not. Then Berrie said firmly: "Now you must take a snooze. You look tired."

He was in truth not only drowsy, but lame and tired. Therefore he yielded to her suggestion.

She covered him with blankets and put him away like a child. "Now you have a good sleep," she said tenderly. "I'll call you when daddy comes."

When he woke the ground was again covered with snow, and the girl was feeding the fire with wood which her own hands had supplied.

Hearing him stir, she turned and fixed her eyes upon him with clear, soft gaze. "How do you feel by now?" she asked.

"Quite made over," he replied, rising alertly.

His cheer, however, was only pretense. He was greatly worried. "Something has happened to your father," he said. "His horse has thrown him, or he has slipped and fallen." His peace and exultation were gone. "How far is it down to the ranger station?"

"Don't you think we'd better close camp and go down there? It is now 3 o'clock. We can walk it in five hours."

She shook her head. "No, I think we'd better stay right here. It's a long, hard walk, and the trail is muddy."

"But, dear girl," he began desperately, "it won't do for us to camp here alone in this way another night. What will Cliff say?"

She flamed red, then whitened. "I don't care what Cliff thinks. I'm done with him, and no one that I really care about would blame us." She was fully aware of his anxiety now. "It isn't our fault."

"It will be my fault if I keep you here longer!" he answered. "We must reach a telephone and send word out. Something may have happened to your father."

"I'm not worried a bit about him. It may be that there's been a big snowfall up above us, or else a windstorm. The trail may be blocked, but don't worry. He may have to go round by Lost Lake pass." She pondered a moment. "I reckon you're right. We'd better pack up and rack down the trail to the ranger's cabin—not on my account, but on yours. I'm afraid you've taken cold."

"I'm all right, except I'm very lame, but I am anxious to go on. By the way, is this ranger Settle married?"

"No; his station is one of the lonesomest cabins on the forest. No woman will stay there."

This made Wayland ponder. "Nevertheless," he decided, "we'll go. After all, the man is a forest officer, and you are the supervisor's daughter."

She made no further protest, but busied herself closing the panniers and putting away the camp utensils. She seemed to recognize that his judgment was sound.

It was after 3 when they left the tent and started down the trail, carrying nothing but a few toilet articles.

He stopped at the edge of the clearing. "Should we have left a note for the supervisor?"

The trees were dripping, the willows heavy with water, and the mud ankle deep in places, but she pushed on steadily, and he, following in her tracks, could only marvel at her strength and sturdy self reliance. The swing of her shoulders, the poise of her head and the lithe movement of her waist made his own body seem a poor thing.

For two hours they zigzagged down a narrow canyon heavily timbered with fir and spruce, a dark, sternave, one, crossed by roaring streams and filled with frequent boggy meadows whereon the water lay midleg deep.

"We'll get out of this very soon," she called cheerily.

By degrees the gorge widened, grew more open, more genial. Aspen thickets of pale gold flashed upon their eyes like sunlight, and grassy bunches afforded firmer footing, but on the slopes their feet slipped and slid painfully. Still Berea kept her stride. "We must get to the middle fork before dark," she stopped to explain, "for I don't know the trail down there, and there's a lot of down timber just above the station. Now that we're cut loose from our camp I feel nervous. As long as I have a tent I am all right, but now we are in the open I worry. How are you standing it?" She studied him with keen and anxious glance, her hand upon his arm.

"Fine as a fiddle," he replied, assuming a spirit he did not possess, "but you are marvelous. I thought cowgirls couldn't walk."

She Found Herself Confronted by an Endless Maze of Blackened Tree Trunks.

"I can do anything when I have to," she replied. "We've got three hours more of it." And she warningly exclaimed, "Look back there!"

They had reached a point from which the range could be seen, and, behold, it was covered deep with a seamless robe of new snow.

"That's why dad didn't get back last night. He's probably wallowing along up there this minute." And she set off again with resolute stride. Wayland's pale face and labored breath alarmed her. She was filled with love and pity, but she pressed forward desperately.

At last they came to the valley floor, over which a devastating fire had run some years before and which was still covered with fallen trees in desolate confusion. Here the girl made her first mistake. She kept on toward the river, although Wayland called attention to a trail leading to the right up over the low grassy hills. For a mile the path was clear, but she soon found herself confronted by an endless maze of blackened tree trunks, and at last the path ended abruptly.

Dismayed and halting, she said: "We've got to go back to that trail which branched off to the right. I reckon that was the highland trail which Settle made to keep out of the swamp. I thought it was a trail from Cameron peak, but it wasn't. Back we go."

She was suffering keenly now, not on her own account, but on his, for she could see that he was very tired, and to climb up that hill again was like punishing him a second time.

When she picked up the hinged trail it was so dark that she could scarcely follow it, but she felt her way onward, turning often to be sure that he was following. Once she saw him fall and cried out: "It's a shame to make you climb this hill again. It's all my fault. I ought to have known that that lower road led down into the timber."

Standing close beside him in the darkness, knowing that he was weary, wet and ill, she permitted herself the expression of her love and pity. Putting her arm about him, she drew his cheek against her own, saying: "Poor boy. Your hands are cold as ice." She took them in her own warm clasp. "Oh, I wish we had never left the camp! What does it matter what people say?" Then she broke down and wailed. "I shall never forgive myself if you"— Her voice failed her.

He bravely reassured her: "I'm not defeated. I'm just tired. That's all. I can go on."

"But you are shaking."

"That is merely a nervous chill. I'm good for another hour. It's better to keep moving anyhow."

She thrust her hand under his coat and laid it over his heart. "You are tired out," she said, and there was anguish in her voice. "Your heart is pounding terribly. You mustn't do any more climbing. And, hark, there's a wolf!"

He listened. "I hear him, but we are both armed. There's no danger from wild animals."

"Come!" she said, instantly recovering her natural resolution. "We can't stand here. The station can't be far away. We must go on."

CHAPTER IX.

The Other Girl.

THE girl's voice stirred the benumbed youth into action again and he followed her mechanically, often stumbling against the trees, slipping and sliding, till at last his guide, pitching down a sharp slope, came directly upon a wire fence.

"Glory be!" she called. "Here is a fence, and the cabin should be near, although I see no light. Hello! Tony!"

No voice replied, and, keeping Wayland's hand, she felt her way along the fence till it revealed a gate; then she turned toward the roaring of the stream, which grew louder as they advanced. "The cabin is near the falls, that much I know," she assured him. Then a moment later she joyfully cried out, "Here it is!"

Out of the darkness a blacker, sharper shadow rose. Again she called, but no one answered. "The ranger is away," she exclaimed, in a voice of indignant alarm.

Leading him toward the middle of the room, Berrie said: "Stand here till I strike a light."

As her match flamed up Norcross found himself in a rough walled cabin, in which stood a square cook stove, a rude table littered with dishes, and three stools made of slabs. It was all very rude, but it had all the value of a palace at the moment.

The girl's quick eye saw much else. She located an oil lamp, some pine wood and a corner cupboard. In a few moments the lamp was lit, the stove refilled with fuel and she was stripping Wayland's wet coat from his back, cheerily discoursing as she did so. "Here's one of Tony's old jackets, put that on while I see if I can't find some dry stockings for you. Sit right down here by the stove; put your feet in the oven. I'll have a fire in a jiffy. There, that's right. Now I'll start the coffee pot." She soon found the coffee, but it was unground. "Wonder where he keeps his coffee mill." She rummaged about for a few minutes, then gave up the search. "Well, no matter, here's the coffee, and here's a hammer. One of the laws of the trail is this: If you can't do a thing one way, do it another. I depend on this coffee to brace you up," she said.

After hanging a blanket over the broken window, she set out some cold meat and a half dozen baking powder biscuits, which she found in the cupboard, and as soon as the coffee was ready she poured it for him, but she would not let him leave the fire. She brought his supper to him and sat beside him while he ate and drank.

The hot, strong coffee revived him physically and brought back a little of his courage, and he said. "I'm ashamed to be such a weakling."

"Now, hush," she commanded. "It's not your fault that you are weak. Now, while I am eating my supper you slip off your wet clothes and creep into Tony's bunk, and I'll fill one of these sirup cans with hot water to put at your feet."

It was of no use for him to protest against her further care. She insisted, and while she ate he meekly carried out her instructions, and from the delicious warmth and security of his bed watched her moving about the stove till the shadows of the room became one with the dusky figures of his sleep.

Value of White Oilcloth.

White oilcloth can work a transformation in the darkest, dingiest kitchen and add to the charm of the brightest. A yard will save you from facing the indifferent or worn out paint at the base of the dish closet shelving, and besides, make cleaning easy and gratifying. The inside window ledge of the kitchen and the bathroom treated in this way will be conducive to beauty and cleanliness.

A strip along the wall beside the sink will catch spattered drops of dish water or drainings and may be readily cleaned with a lightly soaped cloth rubbed over the surface.

A stretch of oilcloth above the japanning about the range will catch any spattering grease, the vapor of steam or the blackest of escaping smoke, which can then be washed off, though here one of the coarse cleansers may be necessary to restore the pristine whiteness.

A yard of white oilcloth will cover the top of a kitchen table, with some to spare. A length of a few inches more of the scalloped kind will render the tops of the washtubs sightly and convertible to table uses. The top of the refrigerator covered in this way will be taken as a pledge of the sweet, clean interior below.

Porch Rugs.

Rag rugs for your porch can be bought anywhere at from $1.50 to $10, depending on the size and style. These rag rugs are much the best for porch use, as they are washable.

Keep plenty of flowers on the porch table, also all the new magazines, arranging them neatly on the top. If afternoon tea is to be served there daily, the tea tray can be kept on the table, too. These alterations will cost you very little and will transform your porch.

Riddles.

When is love a deformity? When it is all on one side.

Why is London bridge like merit? Because it is so very often passed over.

When are eyes not eyes? When the wind makes them water.

Which is the best behaved food, cake or wine? Cake, which is only occasionally "tipsy," while wine is always drunk.

What we all require, what we all give, what we occasionally ask for, yet very seldom take? Advice.

What is it that walks with its head downward? A nail in a shoe.

Why is a child with a cold in its head like a winter's night? Because it blows, it snows (its nose).

Why are poets like children's toys? Because they are given to a muse and indulge in fancy (infancy).

Weather Wise.

Wrinkled and old and gray,
With a magician's skill,
The spider toils each day
Weaving his threads at will.

Dew spangled on the lawn
His webs are all in place
Looking at peep of dawn
Like coverlets of lace.

Just at the rise of sun
His net he spins and spins,
And dewdrops, one by one,
Into the mesh he wins.

The day will then be fair,
No drop of rain will fall;
Children without a care
May picnic, one and all.

The spider's weather wise
And we can trust his sign,
The storms will not arise
To spoil the glad sunshine.

But had his webs be spun
Upright from spray to spray,
No outdoor picnic fun
Could we have had that day.

For the Children

Walter Gunther, Mascot of Battleship Band.

This gay drummer boy is Walter Gunther of New York city, and he is considered one of the best drummers for his years in the great city, which is saying a great deal, for there are hundreds of boys who can wield the drumsticks with skill. Walter is the son of Charles Gunther, who is a member of the Thirteenth regiment, national guard of New York. It was in the drum corps of the Thirteenth regiment that Walter learned to drum with rhythm and precision. Walter also enjoys the honor of being the mascot of the military band of the battleship New York. During the recent parade of the marines and sailors in New York city Walter was in line with the battleship's sailors and played throughout the line of march.

Hidden Animals.

1. I went only by the naval orders.
2. Good Dr. Ambrose allowed me to go out.
3. Arthur, at what time will you meet me tomorrow?
4. The stone exploded and the saucepan therefore was badly broken.
5. Jack, all children should obey their parents.
6. Let us play hide and seek, as tag is so tiresome.
7. Oh, Leo, pardon that poor man for my sake!
8. Rebecca, take this present from me to John.
9. There is that bad German lad who stole my book.
10. I saw strange men in the wood, chuckling and laughing as I went by.
11. That squalling babe arrived yesterday.
12. Charles asked me if oxen ever were in deer parks.
13. After getting on the steamcar I bought some candy and a magazine.
14. Is Douglass ablebodied and healthy?

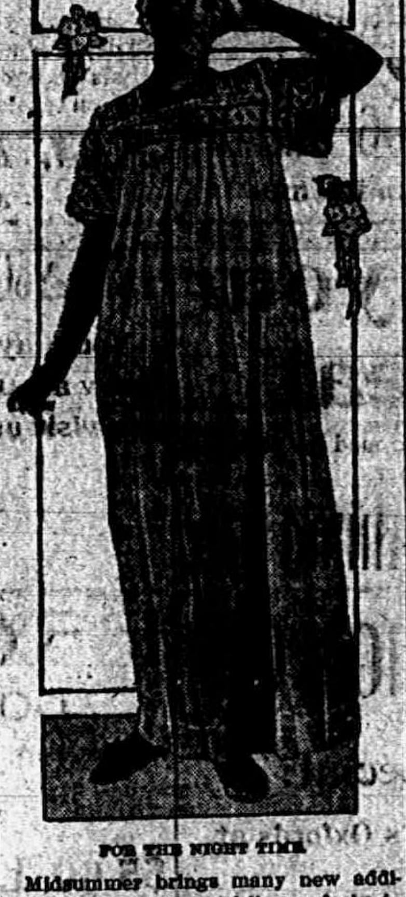
Answers: 1. Hen. 2. Ram, seal. 3. Rat. 4. Panther. 5. Jackal. 6. Stag. 7. Leopard. 8. Cat. 9. Badger. 10. Woodchuck. 11. Bear. 12. Fox, reindeer. 13. Caribou. 14. Sable.

Feeding Ducks and Geese.

Ducks and geese are partial to soft feed. By seeing that they get a share of it, as well as green feed, you will get better results. They also like to fish for their feed, and if you place some cornmeal in the bottom of a pan that contains their drinking water it will add greatly to their pleasure, as well as feeding them at the same time.—American Poultry Advocate.

CHARMING CAP AND GOWN.

Sheer Batiste, Embroidery and Valenciennes Lace Used.



FOR THE NIGHT TIME.

Midsummer brings many new additions to the summer girl's wardrobe in the way of charming lingerie. The pattern shown here is not so elaborate or complicated, but that a clever girl could fashion it. Lingerie makes very good "pick up" work, and if a piece is always kept in the work basket it will only be a short time before a useful and dainty article of wearing apparel is fashioned.

ABOUT POULTRY.

The hens should be dusted with a good insect powder. Many of the powders that are sold are no better than dry earth, having lost most of their efficiency. You can make a good lice powder by taking three parts gasoline and one part crude carbolic and mixing it with plaster of paris. Put a little of the liquid on to the plaster of paris and mix thoroughly till it is dry. Then apply to the feathers of the hens.

Geese ought to be shut up to fatten for a month before they are killed. To get a successful result it is most essential to keep them eating all the time, and to do this they must be carefully watched at feeding times, and any bird which does not respond to the call of the pail should be given a teaspoonful of warmed castor oil at once.

Have you plenty of good clover or alfalfa hay, and have you been buying wheat bran for your hens? If so you have been throwing away your money. Not all of it, but you have wasted a good deal nevertheless. Alfalfa is virtually as rich a feed as bran. Good clover hay is almost as rich. In some respects these feeds are preferable to wheat bran, for they are not so irritating to the bowels.

Lime Sulphur Solution.

A lime-sulphur solution is now considered one of the most useful of the spray materials employed by fruit growers. It serves the double purpose of an insecticide and a fungicide. It is especially desirable in the control of the San Jose scale, peach leaf curl and apple scab.

If You Need More Fat.

If your physician advises you to eat more fat, see that your diet includes plenty of cream, butter, olive oil, bacon, walnuts, pecan nuts, egg yolks, suet, salt pork, salmon and beef and mutton fat. All these foods contain a very large percentage of fat.

HOW TO THIN PEACHES.

Pennsylvania State Zoologist Tells Grower the Best Method.

A peach grower in southern Pennsylvania wrote to State Zoologist H. A. Surface, Harrisburg, saying: "My young trees are prolific with fruit. Will you kindly inform me as to the pruning and also as to the plucking of excess fruit in order to get a normal crop of large, healthy peaches? Also should a tree be sprayed at this time of year and with what?"

This is a practical subject with which many peach growers will need help within a few weeks. Therefore they will be interested in the following reply:

"The best thing to do is to prune the trees in such a way as to keep the tops open, low and spreading. It does not hurt to give them light pruning at this or any other time of year. Very severe pruning is generally done during the dormant season.

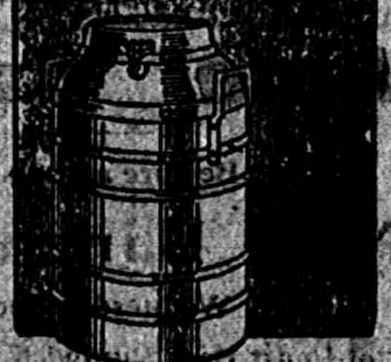
"Excess fruits should be picked off in the process commonly called 'thinning.' Make it a rule, first, to pull off all defective fruits and, second, all excess fruits that will leave those remaining on the trees no closer than the width of your four fingers. This distance is easily measured by simply extending the hand between the fruits, and persons engaged in this work get accustomed to it. I find that women are good hands at thinning fruits and are more careful and more speedy than men. The sooner the thinning is done the better for the trees.

"As a rule I do not recommend spraying peach trees during the summer, but much depends upon varieties. If your varieties are those that are subject to brown rot or ripe rot, such as Speed, Triumph, Early Crawford, etc., or the early varieties that rot easily, they should be sprayed with the self boiled lime-sulphur solution now and again when the fruit is about two-thirds grown.

"Use eight pounds of sulphur and eight gallons of lime in fifty gallons of water, made according to Scott's formula published by the United States department of agriculture. Also, if your fruit is of a variety that shows black spots or scab and crack among the very late fruits, such as Salway and Bilyeu, they should be sprayed in the same way with the same material to prevent the disease known as peach scab and which causes the dark blotches and cracks in the skin of the late varieties of fruits. It is not necessary to add arsenate of lead when spraying at this time of year."

Refrigerator Milk Can.

A new way of shipping milk and cream for long distances during the heated season is offered by the invention of a refrigerator milk can which is simply two cans, one within the other, the space between being filled with baked cork and hair felt. In severe tests, under practical road conditions, milk shipped in these cans showed a rise in temperature of but 18 degrees in twenty-four hours when exposed to a continuous temperature of 92 degrees. A special form of neck is provided, the inner portion being a segment of a sphere over which the bowl of the cover fits closely, so that the can is perfectly tight, even if the cover be tilted to one side or the other.—Popular Mechanics.



Good Pastures.

Good pasture combinations are: Rye (early spring); rape (summer); corn in field and rape (fall); rye, alfalfa, cowpeas, clover, oats and peas.

Armour's Animal Fertilizer

has the largest sale in this section for several reasons. They are manufactured from the best of material in the most up-to-date factories.

They are finely ground and will feed in any drill.

They are always uniformly up to guarantee.

Farmers realize they can get more results from ARMOUR'S than any other Fertilizer made.

Farmers know that in using ANIMAL fertilizer from the largest Packing-house they are putting back on the soil what has been sold off.

Tell us your soil and its conditions and we will furnish you with a brand that will give you big results.

Don't be deceived, there isn't any fertilizer in the same class, ask any farmer who has used ARMOUR and other brands and he will tell you of its superiority.

DAISY MEAT MARKET

About "April Fool" Day last year Big Happy Jim McDermott came to Tecumseh and bought the Hughes market fixtures. His many friends here were happy to welcome him on the business street and the business he has worked up has proved no joke. We notice his Clinton friends do not forget him either.

He put in a large line of excellent goods and during this hot weather you need not worry about his meat not keeping for everything perishable goes directly into the great refrigerator which has a capacity of some three tons.

He carries a good stock of canned goods and everything usually kept by city markets. The shop is clean and sanitary and customers are sure to come back.

ALBERT CLARK

An introduction to Albert Clark is certainly unnecessary to Tecumseh people as for 26 years he has been in meat markets in Tecumseh. When a little shaver he went to work for Chas. Dickinson and has kept jumping ever since. Five years ago he bought Munson & Randall's equipment and continued their business in the Witherell block. He has been adding to the stock and equipment constantly and now has one the best equiped and cleanest markets in this end of the state.

Two years ago he installed a Stevens cooler, one year ago it was refrigerator display counters and a new sausage machine and now there is a pair of Toledo electric scales on the way, which will be set up before this paper goes to press. The words "No spring—Honest weight" beam forth each time an ounce is placed on the tray.

Mr. Clark sells home killed meat entirely with the exception of some of the pork in the summer. His stock is complete, including anything you may want in the meat line, also a full line of canned goods. He is giving the latter item much attention and now has about the best and largest assortment in town.

E. SERVICE & SON

It was May 20, 1910 that Eugene Service bought C. E. Williamson's interest in the furniture business of Williamson & Stahl, the firm being know as Stahl & Service. The stock was moved to Mr. Service's store on East Chicago street and materially increased.

June 20, 1913, J. D. Service bought Mr. Stahl out. The latter was the untertaker of the concern so Duaine took up that portion of the business. He took a thorough course at the Barnes School of Anatomy, Sanitary Science and Embalming at Chicago. Upon his graduation he returned and took up the work here. He has made good and proven himself a splendid undertaker.

The firm of Service & Son have increased their stock so that they now occupy 7,724 sq. ft. of floor space and can certainly set up all the newly weds in this end of the county in house keeping.

GUY E. BELDING

Guy E. Belding is about the best known Tecumseh man over the largest strip of surrounding territory. For sixteen years he has been undertaker here and for years has answered calls from all directions from Dundee to Brooklyn, from Manchester to Adrian.

Eleven years ago he and Dr. W. D. Reed bought W. F. Sisson's furniture stock continuing as Guy E. Belding & Co for three yeari when he bought the doctor's interest, and has been alone since. His furniture stock is complete, all three floors of the large store being full.

This spring he added to his stock a piano business carrying the R. S. Howard Co. instruments mostly. This department in charge of Leonard Greenwald a splendid musician and is bound to be a success. They have some player pianos which are beauties.

THE TRIBOLET CO.
5 & 10 Cent Store

In this day and age when people are ever in a hurry every community demands a store with a 5 and 10 cent line of goods, conveniently arranged for the quickest service to the public.

When the Tribolet Company 5 and 10 cent store opened on February 13, 1915, the large crowds that patronized their special sales showed that this community was eager for an up-to-date store of this kind.

H. A. Tribolet, manager of The Tribolet Company, and his sister Miss Mary Tribolet have at all times shown a willingness to please the public and their growing business has shown that this kind of conduct towards the public pays not only in a financial way but in friends.

Besides a 5 and 10c. line The Tribolet Company handle a full line of enamel ware, tin ware and dishes. The manager and his assistants are always pleased to serve the public at all times.

Since coming among us Mr. and Miss Tribolet have made hosts of friends and their store is a great favorite. On each Wednesday they certainly put on some bargains, Watch their announcements.

Woman's World

Sister of the Kaiser, Who Is Exceedingly Pro-German.

QUEEN SOPHIA OF GREECE.

Queen Sophia has made it quite clear to the members of the reigning house and to the statesmen of Greece—has, indeed, publicly announced to the people of the land of her adoption—that she will leave it forever in the event of its joining the powers of the triple entente against her brother, the kaiser, and his allies.

Her name will be commemorated at Athens by one of the strangest of memorials, for whereas King Constantine's mother, Queen Olga's, name is identified with the magnificent Evangelismos hospital, founded, endowed and managed by herself, that of her German daughter-in-law is associated with the principal slaughter house of the Greek metropolis.

Some years ago Queen Sophia's attention was attracted to the shockingly insanitary condition of the then existing abattoirs and to the needless cruelty attending the killing of cattle, sheep and swine. Accordingly she made a personal study during her stays abroad of the abattoirs of Frankfort, Berlin, Hamburg and London and even sent an emissary to the United States to make reports on the slaughter houses of New York, Chicago, Cincinnati and other centers of the meat packing industry in America. On the basis of the data thus obtained she caused to be built at Athens at her own expense a great central abattoir, equipped with all the most up to date appliances, and presented it to the city. The municipality of Athens naturally accepted the gift with gratitude and by way of showing its appreciation of the kindness of the royal donor called the great slaughter house in question "the Sophia."

One Of Interest To Our Readers

Good news bears repeating, and when it is confirmed after a long time even if we hesitated to believe it at first hearing, we feel secure in accepting its truth now. The following experience of a Tecumseh man is confirmed after several years.

W. W Shurtz, Ribbuck St., Tecumseh says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills at different times during the past ten years and they have always given me relief from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint. I have procured my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills from Wright & Son's Drug store and my experience has been so satisfactory that I willingly give this public account of it. You may continue to use my name as a reference."

SELECTING TOMATO SEED.

All tomato plants produce branches which bear perfect flowers. Though the tomato plant is largely self fertile, especially when grown in the open air, there is always more or less mixing of varieties when the plants are grown close together.

The selection of your own seed is a simple matter. Select plants that are ideal in vigor, freedom from disease, production and character of fruit. Practically all the tomatoes from each plant thus selected may be saved, only fruits that happen to be inferior being discarded.

Inasmuch as not all plants possess equal powers in transmitting their qualities, it is desirable to keep the seed from each plant in a separate package and then to plant the contents of the packages in separate lots next year.

This will give you an opportunity to judge the best stock. An excellent plan is to conduct a trial test of about twenty-five plants from each lot of seed. You will not find it much trouble to weigh and even to count the tomatoes from each lot of plants. The results will justify the work involved.

PIGEONS FOR PROFIT.

Some Information as to the Growing of Squabs For Market.

The pigeon house should be erected on a well drained plot of land facing south or southwest. Pigeons will stand any amount of cold and raise young, but a drafty or damp house will cause sickness. The floor of the pigeon loft had best be a foot or two above ground and made of double flooring, with heavy building paper between.

Novices should take little stock in the dealer who wishes to sell unmated birds to him and argues they are as good as mated ones, says Farm Journal. Perhaps with an old timer it might be very good to start with this kind provided he could get a reduction in the price. In many cases some birds will not mate up promptly, and in our experience we have known cases where it was impossible to keep a pair together.

Nearness to market is a valuable consideration in successful squab farming. Selected common pigeons sometimes do well and are improved by mating with homers, but they are not to be recommended in starting a squab farm. The pigeon pictured is a straight homer.

Very frequently a room can be fitted up in a stable or shed loft that will answer admirably as a pigeon loft, but where it can be afforded more pleasure will probably be taken with a little building used wholly as a pigeon cote.

One of the most healthy, best producing and most profitable flocks of squab producers we are familiar with is kept in a loft the floor of which is covered five or six inches every spring and fall with dry earth from the farm. This earth becomes very dry, makes clouds of dust and the interior of the loft is not so clean and attractive as one well cared for, but the dust prohibits the possibility of there being any insect vermin about. The interior of the loft being perfectly dry, the soil is always light and healthful. This is gone over weekly with a close toothed rake. Before this is done the shelves and boxes are scrubbed clean. All the dirt that the close toothed rake will gather up is raked off and taken away. Other than this no special attention is given to cleanliness. The earth gathers all the dirt. The droppings are quickly dried up with the dust and earth. When the nest boxes and shelves are scraped on to the floor all that would produce an odor is gone. After the hatching of each pair the nest pan and box are thoroughly cleaned so that there cannot be any accumulation of filth. This would not be considered the ideal plan of caring for a loft, yet it is a successful plan that may be followed when a large number are to be cared for with but little labor.

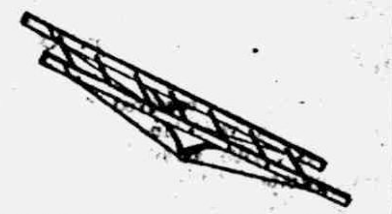
It is best to place the nests against the north, east and west walls.

The old style of having perches or roosting places in the loft has been abolished by up to date pigeon keepers. They are considered dangerous.

Running boards in front of the nests are not seen any more, as they afforded too good a chance for a fighting cock to torment busy parents.

A Well Braced Long Ladder.

Farmers who have occasion to use long ladders often find them weak and dangerous when set up at the proper angle. This can be overcome by a wire brace. Get a blacksmith to make two V shaped irons and fasten them to the side sills with small bolts. Bore small holes through sills at each end. Take two pieces of No. 9 wire and fasten to the sills at one end by passing through the holes and forming a lock by turning the end back through the holes over small iron pins; then pass the wire over the V irons, drawing them tight with a lever and fasten at the other ends in the same way. This brace will more than double the strength of the ladder and adds but little expense.—Farm Progress.



For Poultry Raisers.

There is good money in selling eggs for hatching. It calls for absolute honesty. Only sell strictly fresh and fertile eggs that can be expected to hatch under favorable conditions.

Mongrel fowls should not be kept for egg production because the eggs will be uniform neither in color nor size. This factor of itself is of enough importance to induce one to select a pure breed, even though the mongrels might possibly lay as well as the pure bred fowls, but this is very doubtful.

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

In the dairy section of Illinois and in a number of other localities throughout the country the corn crop is below normal, and many farmers would be in a serious predicament but for the amazing success of alfalfa.

At corn planting time last year the weather in Illinois was cold and wet, delaying work and giving the crop a poor start, but in the fine weather of April, three or four weeks before anybody would dare put in corn, alfalfa was growing vigorously. It came through the winter in good condition, and the yield of hay has been far the heaviest ever obtained from the alfalfa fields of the northwest.

In hundreds of individual cases alfalfa makes up for the deficiency in corn, so that farmers will be able to feed their cattle to advantage. It goes without saying that alfalfa has come into high favor all over the north, and farmers are learning all they can about the crop. This legume ought to net $50 to $75 an acre where it is cut three times in a season. The return is $75 to $100 an acre in southern latitudes, where the crop is cut five or six times.

Most of the arguments for growing alfalfa are based on the plan of feeding the crop to dairy cows at home. There is another side to this. Hamlet Worker of Onondaga county, N. Y., sells the hay and cuts out the work of running a dairy. He has sold his cows. His thirty-five acres of alfalfa this year gave five tons of hay per acre, for which he has received an average of $10 a ton. Perhaps his work on the hay represents two months of actual labor, whereas when he fed his crop to dairy cattle he worked from daylight till dark the year round, and seven days in the week. He claims the dairy never showed more net profit for a year than does this crop of thirty-five acres of alfalfa.

A FIELD OF YOUNG ALFALFA.

All along the limestone soils in central New York alfalfa is working farm miracles. Wherever its culture becomes general all crops improve, land values rise, incomes increase and prosperity attends the farm. One-half pound more of butter and one pound more of beef for each household in the middle west is a possibility if only three-tenths of the land now in grass were given over to alfalfa. The protein in alfalfa hay is substantially as great as that from bran in feeding ration. Alfalfa ranges in price from $15 to $25 a ton, but after all it pays to feed it up as closely as possible in dairy and beef cattle on the farm. Whether sent to market or consumed at home, it has become established as one of the greatest of the money making products and in many cases is solving the whole problem of farm finances. The yield of four to six tons per acre is a common experience all over the country where modern methods are employed in raising the crop. At minimum market prices this means a money value above that of corn, when compared acre for acre.

The first step to insure success of alfalfa is to provide a good seed bed. For this purpose it is well to choose land on which corn, sugar beets, potatoes or other cultivated crops have been grown. Through the cultivation of these crops the land is clean from weeds and usually works down to a mellow seed bed. The field should be plowed deeply in the fall, so that the soil may be exposed to frost and thaws during winter, and eight or ten tons of manure per acre should be used. In the spring the land is to be disked and harrowed. Then there should be obtained a quantity of soil where alfalfa or sweet clover has been grown. This soil contains suitable bacteria. In other words, it is inoculated. This inoculated soil should be scattered over the surface in quantities of about 500 pounds per acre. It must be harrowed in at once, as sunlight is deadly to bacterial life. The field is then ready for seeding, and it will pay to drill in with the seed 400 pounds per acre of a fertiliser analysing 2 per cent ammonia, 12 per cent available phosphoric acid and 2 per cent potash. Twenty pounds of seed is a liberal supply. Less may do, and the farmer, if satisfied with his soil, may cut out the commercial fertiliser. It is assumed that the land has been limed or is sweet enough for leguminous crops. If there is sourness apply 2,000 pounds of lime. Spring seeding of alfalfa is generally favored. Cut the crop when blooming begins. In order to save the leaves the hay should be raked up soon after cutting and cured in cocks. In starting out with alfalfa look for the seed of hardy varieties, and do not use soggy land.

LARGE PROFITS IN NUTS.

Planting of Orchards, Says an Authority, Should Bring Excellent Returns.

No land is so poor, stony and hilly; no fence corner so useless; no city front or back yard so valuable but will profitably grow native and some varieties of foreign edible nuts, says Emil Gammeter of Akron, O., an authority on nut culture.

Probably no other field of undeveloped natural resources in all the wide domain of diversified production offers richer and happier results than does nut culture. Ethical and educational institutions are rapidly assuming a share in planting and growing nut trees.

The advantage of nut raising over other forms of recreation or business at the present time rests in the fact that one can hardly avoid doing new and constructive work in any part of the field. One then becomes a public benefactor, wittingly or unwittingly, notwithstanding the fact that stock companies for producing just one of the hickories—the pecan—offer at the present time one of the very best of financial investments when such investments are made carefully, and large private capital is being invested in nut orchards. Our imports of nuts rose from $1,700,000 worth in 1896 to $7,300,000 worth in 1907. No one can foretell the magnitude of the new field, but it is pretty safe to say that America could not only have raised most of the $7,000,000 worth of nuts that were imported in 1907, but could have exported nuts to the tune of the same harp.

PERSIAN WALNUT TREE.

The increased demand for nuts is due in the main to two causes—namely, a better appreciation of their appetizing qualities and the numerous ways in which they form a palatable addition to the diet for the average family, and, second, to their use by the vegetarians and persons of similar belief—a group small in proportion to the total population, but still fairly large numerically—who use peanuts, etc., as a substitute for meat and other nitrogenous and fatty foods.

Almost any kind of nut trees will grow in this climate, but not all kinds can be grown profitably, so why not improve and cultivate such of our well known varieties that we are sure will yield abundantly? No nut excels the shellback hickory in flavor and richness, and they will always bring a good market price and a premium for selections.

Black walnuts and butternuts can be easily grown by planting the nuts where trees are wanted or can be successfully transplanted. They are useful for shade and also ornamental. English filberts or hazelnuts succeed well on almost any kind of soil. The larger varieties are sweet and much in demand by candy manufacturers. The purple variety are frequently used as an ornamental shrub and for hedging.

The best method of propagating the so called English walnut, which is properly known as the Persian walnut, says a contributor to the Country Gentleman, is either by the cleft graft in sap wood at the time the buds are starting, or by the annular or patch budding process during the growing season in July or August. These methods are also apparently the most successful in propagating the pecan.

Details of these processes, except ring budding, are given in bulletin 254 of the bureau of plant industry, department of agriculture, Washington.

It is probable that certain varieties of Persian walnuts and pecans may be used successfully on black walnuts and hickories, although it is not safe to attempt very extensive planting in any district where peaches also are not fairly dependable. In other words, the success of peaches is a better index of the probable success of the Persian walnut than is the success of hickories or black walnuts.

Some planters follow the practice of setting rows of hardy English walnuts and pecans with the purpose of top grafting them a few years later with better varieties which may then be available.

STUFFED CUCUMBERS.

Take large, firm cucumbers and cut them in two lengthwise. Peel and remove the seeds and pulp. Mix bread crumbs with the pulp and season it with melted butter, salt and pepper. Place this mixture in the shells, sprinkle more breadcrumbs over the top and set in the oven to brown. A little water must be put in the pan to steam the cucumbers while they are browning, otherwise the crumbs will burn before the cucumber shell is cooked. This dish goes well with almost any combination of food.

LIVE STOCK HUSBANDRY

HOGGING DOWN CORN.

Where practical methods are employed the hogging down of corn has proved of great benefit, and many of the most successful raisers now fatten their hogs in this way, writes W. F. Purdue in the National Stockman. In nearly every case on record it has been found that it will return as much for the corn while standing on the stalk as will the same corn husked and cribbed and later fed out to the hogs.

Of course to be profitable the operation of hogging off corn must be managed properly. For one thing, the hogs must not be allowed too much range at one time, for if they have more to eat than they can handle they naturally will waste some of the feed. For best results from a large field a temporary fence should be provided so that the hogs can be limited to about the area that they will clean up in a week or ten days. In this way they will have fresh forage from time to time and will clean up the field much better as they go. Do not change them to a fresh patch of corn until the first is thoroughly cleaned up.

Herewith is shown a picture of a prize winning Chester White sow. Chester White hogs have long been a favorite breed throughout a large part of this country and are still holding their own against other varieties of swine. The Chester White has been known as a distinct breed for almost a century, having had its origin, so history relates, when some white boars from Bedfordshire, England, were imported to cross with sows then raised in Chester county, Pa.

Spring shotes, those weighing from 75 to 125 pounds, will make the best gains in the corn field. Before turning the shotes in they should be accustomed to the new corn. This can be done by feeding some new corn every day with their regular feed. The amount of new corn should be gradually increased for a week or ten days, at the end of which time the shotes will be ready to go into the field and help themselves. However, they should not be turned into the field until the ears have matured sufficiently to prevent their souring in a short time when left only partly eaten. When the corn is well past the roasting ear stage or about the time it is ready for cutting for the shock is the proper stage at which to hog it off. Small pigs can advantageously follow the fat hogs, as they will take up much of the grain left by the shotes. If possible the hogs should be removed and fed elsewhere during periods of rainy weather, as this prevents much waste of feed which would otherwise occur.

It is important that the hogs should have access at all times to an abundance of water as well as to shade. Clover or cowpeas adjoining the corn field is an ideal range for hogs. Some farmers who aim to hog off corn sow some forage crop in the corn at the last cultivation, such as rape, rye, soy beans, etc. These crops furnish green feed and help to balance the ration. A good supply of pumpkins in the field is also excellent for variety in the diet.

GROWING BEEF CATTLE.

Large Size Can Only Be Attained Where Good Feed Is Plentiful.

It has too often been assumed by live stock men that through breeding and inheritance large size can be secured in our domestic animals. Large size carries with it the need for an abundance of feed and it is only by properly combining these two principles that size can be maintained. E. N. Wentworth, professor of animal breeding at the Kansas Agricultural college, made the following statement recently regarding these points:

"Many cattlemen in the short grass and short feed country cannot obtain size in their steers by feed, due to its scarcity, and hence try to obtain it by breeding and inheritance through the introduction of large boned and large framed bulls. Yet it takes a definite amount of feed to make a pound of gain, and the big rough stock may require more feed a pound than smaller sized animals. The engine does not run without coal, but the larger it is the more coal it requires. The same is true of the steer, except that if it lacks fuel it does not develop into as big an engine.

"The rancher says, 'If a big strain of cattle deteriorates so much in size a small strain doing the same will disappear.' The small strain does not disappear, however, for in a state of nature or of an agriculture differentiated as in the English shires the small breeds live in the short feed countries, the large breeds in the full feed countries and each develops a size and meat productiveness characteristic of that district. The secret of success in ranch breeding is not to seek corn belt results where corn belt feeds are absent, but to adopt the ends to the means."

CHILDREN'S TEETH.

Train Them to Do It Regularly and Insist Upon Use of Toothbrush.

It is most important to get young children into the habit of regularly cleaning their teeth. This should be done after every meal, but sometimes this is not possible. At least the children should scrub the teeth as a matter of routine after breakfast and the last thing at night.

Dentists are advising that the gums as well as the teeth should be scrubbed carefully. First, because it is just at the place where the gum and tooth meet that decay begins and, second, because friction of the gum brings a good supply of the blood to the part, and that, of course, nourishes the teeth and preserves them. Any simple tooth powder can be used, and after scrubbing the children should rinse the mouth out with clean cold water.

The mother should remember how important it is to preserve the first teeth. Any spot of decay should be stopped immediately. The wise mother takes her children regularly to the dentist, perhaps once in six months, to have the teeth inspected. This is a real economy in the end.

The Case of L. L. Cantelon

The case of L. D. Cantelou, Clarendon, Texas, is similar to that of many others who have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says, "After trying a doctor for several months, and using different kinds of medicine for my wife who had been troubled with severe bowel complaint for several months, I bought a 25c bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. After using the second bottle she was entirely cured." For sale by all dealers. advt

Not So Strange After All

You may think it strange that so many people are cured of stomach trouble by Chamberlain's Tablets. You would not, however, if you should give them a trial. They strengthen and invigorate the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Mrs. Rosie Rish, Wabash, Ind., writes, "Nothing did me the least good until I began using Chamberlain's Tablets. It is decidedly the best medicine for stomach trouble I have ever used." Avoid Self-Consciousness.

To think about oneself all the while is to turn energy in on oneself continually that might much better go out into constructive action. The self-conscious person needs to pour out this force of attention and thought, instead of concentrating it on self and wasting it in awkward embarrassment and hurt pride.—Great Thoughts.

Profit-Sharing with Retail Buyers

On August 1, 1914 we made the announcement that if we could make and sell at retail 300,000 Ford cars between August 1, 1914 and August 1, 1915 we would share profits with the retail purchasers, to the extent of from $40 to $60 on each car. We have sold over 300,000 Ford cars in the time specified, profit-sharing checks of $50 each will be distributed as rapidly as possible after August 15, 1915. Retail purchasers who have not yet mailed us there profit-sharing coupons, properly endorsed, should do so without delay.

Our plan to profit-share with retail purchasers of Ford cars during 1914-15 has been most successful. We thoroughly believe in it, but, realizing the uncertainty of conditions generally makes it advisable to defer any announcement of future profit-sharing until a later date.

We are, however, confident of our inability to reduce costs for several months, and therefore can offer no profit-sharing for cars delivered during August, September and October, 1915.

NEWS OF THE STATE

Boys Forcing Dog to Swim.

MARQUETTE, MICH. — After taking a swim in a pond in an abandoned quarry at Eben, fifteen miles east of here, Emil Louma, thirteen, and John Mantoholma, ten, tried to force their dog to take a bath.

The dog resisted when on the edge of the quarry and the boys lost their balance and fell in. They grasped each other and sank together, drowning. The bodies were recovered.

Two Are Victims of Haying.

MARLETTE, WIS. — Thrown in front of the knives while cutting hay, when his team ran away, Gale Bruce, a young farmer, sustained shocking injuries. One leg was cut to shreds. While standing in the barn door, Mrs. William A. Mahaffy was knocked down and trampled upon by a team of colts attached to a hay sling. One leg was broken.

The victims of the accidents are son-in-law and daughter-in-law of Hugh Mahaffy, pioneer of Sanilac county.

Girl Bleeding Internally.

MARQUETTE, MICH. — Florence McDowell, aged nine, of Ishpeming, was struck by a teetering ladder while playing on one of the Ishpeming public play grounds and has since bled continuously from an internal hemorrhage.

Physicians say that they had reduced the bleeding, which is in the abdominal region, to a point where they believed the effect would not be fatal.

Owner's Buggy Company Dividend.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — Creditors of the Michigan Buggy company will receive 22 cents on the dollar. Federal Judge Clarence W. Sessions has authorized the payment of an additional dividend of 2 per cent. The creditors had already received 20 per cent.

Would Give Away Hotel.

OWOSSO, MICH. — Edward M. Cramer of Chesaning has a hotel at Vernon which he is ready to give away to anyone who will pay the taxes. The building has been closed for two years.

Rattlesnake Bite Kills Child.

To Clean White Furniture.

To clean the fashionable white painted furniture, which often becomes spotted and dirty in appearance, use clear turpentine on a soft cloth. This will remove all of the dirt without taking off the gloss, as soap and water always are sure to do.

THOUGHT LID THROWN AWAY, SEVEN JOLTED

One Prisoner Manages Store Run in Mayor's Name.

FLINT, MICH. — Seven men were arrested on charges of violating the local option law and more warrants are being prepared, the police say, as the result of detective work covering a period of two months. The arrests created a sensation, as it had been declared by many that the lid was off for good and that those selling liquor illegally were not liable to be arrested.

Among those arrested was Otto Robertson, manager of one of three stores operated by the McKeighan Drug Co. Records in the county clerk's office show the owners of the Mc Keighan Drug Co. to be William H. McKeighan, mayor of Flint, and his brother, John J. McKeighan, who is a police commissioner. Mayor McKeighan declares, however, that he has no interest in the store in question now.

There were thirteen complaints against the seven men arrested, four against Christopher Westran, a former city fireman, who is charged with having sold beer on each occasion. His house was raided and 198 bottles of beer confiscated by the police.

Joseph Berridge, a druggist, was arrested on two separate complaints charging that he sold liquor without a prescription and three complaints were made against Joseph Taggert, a clerk in Berridge's store.

Starts Trip; Finds Money Lost.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — With her vacation plans carefully made and a trip to Portland, Ore., included, Miss Edyth Prendergast, stenographer in Judge Dunham's office, drew $145, the savings of a year, and started to buy her ticket. Then she discovered the money was missing.

Close Call for Two Muskegon Men.

MUSKEGON, MICH. — Louis W. Donaldson and Gustav F. Gergren narrowly escaped death when the rowboat in which they were crossing Muskegon lake capsized. They clung to the craft for nearly an hour before being rescued by Frank Storrs and Guy Osterbaan.

Steps in Front of Auto.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — Run down by an automobile in the north end of the city, Clyde Major narrowly escaped death. He alighted from one machine when he stepped in front of another, which passed completely over him. He has a chance for recovery.

BELIEVE GIRL MADE "GOAT"

Officials Loath to Think Miss Wakefield Is Counterfeiter.

BAY CITY, MICH. — That the pretty little Lillian Wakefield, arrested by the Saginaw police in company with Matthew Hennessey and Edith Grey in connection with wholesale passing of counterfeit money, has been made the "goat" was the substance of the disclosures at the examination of the trio before United States District Court Commissioner Frank S. Pratt.

After all the testimony had been taken it was shown that Miss Wakefield had told the same story to all the officers, who, in turn all testified that they believed she was innocent of any criminal intent and had not known that the bill she had passed—or "changed" as her attorney chose to call it—was a counterfeit one. Even District Attorney Bland said that he did not believe her guilty of any intent of wrongdoing and the secret service men who have been working on the case and looking up the records of the girls say that they cannot find a blemish on Miss Wakefield's reputation up to the time she met Hennessey en route to Saginaw at 11 o'clock the day of her arrest.

ALBION CLASSMATES MARRY

Miss Ada Louise Sackett Becomes Wife of Coach McKale.

ALBION, MICH. — A pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Sackett in Eckford township, when their eldest daughter, Miss Ada Louise, was married to Coach J. Fred McKale of the University of Arisona, at Tucson. Both McKale, whose home is in Lansing, and his bride were students in Albion college a few years ago. The groom was a member of the Sigma Nu fraternity and was well known as an athlete, while his bride, who has been teaching in Heber, Utah, was a member of the Delta Gamma sorority.

BOY'S PRANK MAY BE FATAL

Stone Intended to Splash Water Hits Girl in Head.

PORTLAND, MICH. — Miss Charlotte M. Bugbee, nineteen year old, daughter of Mart Bugbee of Collins, is hovering between life and death at the home of I. A. Leslie, operator at the municipal electric power plant here, as the result of a fractured skull received when a young son of Frank Dorin of Collins accidentally hit her on the back of the head with a large stone.

The accident occurred on Grand river. Miss Bugbee had just pushed away from shore in a rowboat when Dorin, in a playful mood, hurled the stone for the purpose of splashing on her.

FIERCE FIGHTS NEAR WARSAW

Effective Defense by Russ Delaying Entry of Teutons.

CZAR'S MEN MAY ESCAPE TRAP

Vienna Official Statement Says 126,838 Russians Were Taken Prisoners in July—Trieste May Be Evacuated by Austrians—Machinery in Munitions Factories Reported Removed.

PETROGRAD — The Russian armies falling back from Warsaw are fighting one of the most magnificent rearguard actions the world war has seen. Small forces standing along the Narew and west of the Polish capital are determinedly holding up the Germans while the main bodys of Slavs continues the retirement eastward.

So effective is the Russian defense just outside the gates of the city that military men declared that Warsaw could never had been won by direct assault. The great Austro-German siege guns and the massed forces of the enemy could not have battered their way into the capital, they held, and the capture of Warsaw was only made possible by the progress of the Austro-Germans along the Lublin-Cholm line.

Fail to Entrap Russians.

The taking of Warsaw will only slightly relieve the German feeling of disappointment over their failure to entrap the grand duke's armies, according to advices to the war office. When it become evident that the Russians were about to escape the trap, General von Hnidenburg sent out a hurry call for re-enforcements from the western battle front. These forces arrived, and have been seen in operation in Poland, according to an official statement from the war office, which contained this significant clause: "This fact creates favorable conditions for active operations on the part of our allies in the West."

Capture 126,838 Russians in July.

VIENNA — An official statement issued here says: "The troops under the Austro-Hungarian supreme command captured in July 527 Russian officers, 126,311 men, 16 cannon and 302 machine guns."

Austrians May Evacuate Trieste.

LONDON — An unconfirmed report comes from Rome that the Austrians are preparing for the evacuation of Trieste, and have already removed the machinery of the munitions factories.

A dispatch from Laibach to the Tribune of Geneva says:

"A general Italian offensive was begun Sunday on the Tyrol Trentino and Carnia front, forcing the Austrians to evacuate some of their strongest positions. Dalmatian regiments which attacked Freikopf lost 60 per cent of their effectives. The Italians have pierced the second Austrian line on the Carso plateau, taking several miles of trenches."

FRENCH MARINES LANDED IN HAYTI

U. S. Grants Republic Permission to Safeguard Legation.

WASHINGTON — France has requested and been given permission by the United States to land marines at Port au Prince, Hayti, for the protection of the French legation in that city, where Admiral Caperton is in control.

This attitude of France shows that she at least regards the United States as in unquestioned control of affairs in Hayti. In the opinion of officials it shows also that, after the landing of marines by Admiral Caperton, the United States must be regarded by foreign nations as fully responsible for eventualities. The United States will thus take care of not only English and French but German, Austrian and other interests.

It was stated that the danger in the city is regarded as increasing. It is expected by navy officials that as Admiral Caperton has cabled that more marines "might be needed," the department will at a moment's notice send a thousand marines as reinforcements from Philadelphia either by the Hancock or by the North Dakota or by both.

Navy officials say the situation may be made critical for the 400 marines in Port au Prince at any moment. They estimate the population at about 60,000. There are therefore about 12,000 men capable of bearing arms in the city and suburbs.

Within ten days President Wilson will be asked to recognize the constitutionalist government of Mexico with First Chief Carranza as the de facto president. He will be told that Carranza is entitled to recognition because he has won the revolution.

IT IS ILL WIND THAT BLOWS NOBODY GOOD

Subsea Warfare Danger Stays Deportation of Undesirables.

LANSING, MICH. — German submarine warfare is responsible for the sojourn in America of John Oddo, John Fransono and Frank Gorsche, all Italians, inmates of the Michigan reformatory at Ionia.

The trio was paroled by the state board of pardons although their minimum expired some months ago. They were being held for deportation, but owing to the condition of the seas deportation upon a "safe" vessel is impossible and the United States government has forgotten the deportation idea.

The men were guilty of crimes before they had become American citizens and, consequently at the expiration of their minimum, should have been deported. But federal officials said that was impossible, so the pardon board paroled them for a year. The men all have good prison records.

RACE RIOT STIRS DETROIT

Negroes Rush to Protect Black Robber; Four Persons Are Hurt.

DETROIT — One man was shot and a woman and two men were stabbed in a fierce race riot in Hastings street. Five arrests were made. Two negroes approached a woman alighting from a car and cut the strings that held the handbag over her arm. The negroes fled, pursued by a crowd. One took refuge in a car. The trolley pole was lowered, and the crowd surrounded the car.

Bricks, sticks, and stones were hurled at the car, and the passengers hurried out. Standing alone in the car, the negro stabbed Max Reisman, who attempted to remove him. Then reinforcements of twenty-five negroes hurled themselves on the whites. They scattered and fled down Hastings street. The yelling negroes pursued them with knives and revolvers until stopped by the police.

AUSTRIA'S NOTE IS MADE PUBLIC

Protests Sale of War Munitions to Entente Allies.

HOLDS TRADE IS TOO LARGE

Officials at Washington See Full Text in Monday's Newspapers—Entire Page Is Lost in Transmission of Official Copy—Declares Spirit of Law Is Violated.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The complete text of the Austro-Hungarian note to the United States protesting against the trade in war material between the United States and the allies was made public here by the Austro-Hungarian embassy.

Upon receiving the permission of the United States government the Austro-Hungarian government made its note public in Vienna early in July, but only portions of it were cabled to the United States. By an accident a whole page of the note was lost in transmission from the American embassy in Vienna to Washington so that the state department had for the first time before it the complete text of the note when Monday's papers were published. The missing page is coming by mail but has not yet been received.

Holds Trade Is Too Big.

The complete text reveals more clearly than the press reports from Vienna the lengths to which the government of the dual monarchy goes in objecting to the sale of war material to the allies by persons in the United States. The note admits that the trade is permitted by law, but declares that the spirit of the law is violated by the proportions which this trade has assumed in the United States.

It asks therefore that the United States enact legislation imposing an embargo on the shipment of war materials to the allies.

Declares U. S. Position Illegal.

After pointing out that the business of furnishing the allies with war munitions has become so large as to change the economic life of the American nation, and that it is for the exclusive use of the allies, the note declares:

"The United States government could meet with no reproof if it were to avail itself of its competency, even if it took recourse to the passage of a law in accordance with its constitution. Even if it proved correct in principle that a neutral state may not change the laws in force within its jurisdiction concerning its attitude toward belligerents during the war, there is, however, an exception to the principle as is clearly shown in the preamble of the thirteenth Hague convention. 'Where experience has shown the necessity for such change for the protection of the rights of that power.'

"This case arises for the United States government by the mere fact that Austria-Hungary as well as Germany are cut off from any commercial intercourse with the United States without the existence of a legal ground—a legally effective blockade.

"To the possible objection that although American industry is perfectly willing to supply Austria-Hungary and Germany as well as Great Britain and her allies the United States are not able to carry on trade in the consequence of the war situation it may well be mentioned that the United States is without doubt in a position to remedy the above described condition. It would be entirely sufficient to hold out to the adversaries of Austria-Hungary and Germany the inhibition of the export of foodstuffs and raw materials if the legitimate trade in these articles between the union and the two central powers is not permitted."

LINER IBERIAN IS TORPEDOED; 7 DIE

LONDON — The Leyland liner Iberian has been sunk by a German submarine. Five members of the crew were killed, two died aboard a rescue boat and sixty-one were landed safely. Four of the men killed are said to have been Americans. The vessel has been carrying horses from America to England and a number of those on board were hostlers and caretakers.

The Iberian, a steamer of 5,223 tons gross, sailed from Boston July 7 for Manchester, where she was reported to have arrived July 20. She was 437 feet long, with a beam of 48 feet, and was built at Sunderland in 1900. A. Leyland & Co., Limited, of Liverpool, were the owners.

The Iberian has been used for several months for the transportation of war supplies between the United States and England.

British Steamer Clintonia Sunk.

LONDON — The British steamship Clintonia has been sunk. Fifty-four of the persons aboard her were saved.

Thief With Conscience.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — Because some thief suddenly developed a conscience, Mrs. A. Baird is in possession of plunder, including a gold watch and chain stolen from her a month ago. It came through the mails, enclosed in a small box. Thomas Reed of Detroit who insists he is a detective, has been in jail for some time, awaiting trial on a charge of robbing Mrs. Baird.

Sending In Dry Petitions.

LANSING, MICH. — Petitions for a vote on statewide prohibition will be placed in every county in the state by the Anti-Saloon league. Major Arthur P. Loomis of Ionia predicts a substantial majority for the dry side. The first township to send in a petition is one in St. Clair county.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound and imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

ELECTRIC FARMING.

Advantages of Electricity Over Any Other Motor Agent.

In order to obtain a clearer idea of the advantage of electricity over any other agent and to show that electricity is the best medium for the farmer, the following facts are cited by Frank Koester in his book, "Electricity For the Farm and Home." There are thousands of steam and internal combustion engines in use on our farms today, principally for replacing draft animals, and of course a proportionate number of farm hands, and they are used with machinery, such as plows and thrashers and especially pumps. For operating small machinery such as is required in dairies, as cow-milkers, cream separators, butter kneaders, etc., an internal combustion engine could not be as advantageously used as an electric motor, however, for the reason that the smallest commercial internal combustion engine is about two horsepower, while the electric motor may be chosen in capacities of one-tenth of a horsepower and upward to suit the machine to be operated. Further, no fuel is necessary, the only requirement being to turn on a switch to start the motor.

In fact, practice has proved that farm machinery can advantageously be operated by electric motors. The machines usually operated on the farm are plows, rollers, reapers, thrashers, corn grinders, corn shellers, corn shredders, fodder cutters, woodsaws, pumps, horse and sheep clippers and apparatus for unloading and hoisting hay and other products. Another great saving of labor in the use of electricity is in serving washing machinery, carpet cleaners, sewing machines, fans and appliances for cooking and for heating laundry irons, none of which could well be served by any agent other than electricity. In addition to its use for power, electric energy, which has to be supplied to the motors either from an outside source or from its own central plant, may be utilized for light and warmth.

MILKING MACHINE OPERATED BY MOTOR DRIVEN VACUUM PUMP.

Where connection cannot be made with a local electric distributing company, the farmer should have his own electric generating station, which may be operated by water, steam, gas, gasoline oil or windmill power. Where a stream runs through a farm or is in the neighborhood, cheap power, both as regards the first cost and operating expenses, may be derived from this natural source.

Another source of energy for generation of electric current for farm and country residences is the windmill. The early Dutch windmills were built with sweeps from fifty to a hundred feet of swing in diameter, but our modern American windmills have a sweep of only twelve to eighteen feet, and generate more power than the early Dutch mills, with less attention.

All the above prime movers can be connected to electric generators by belt, gearing or couplings, and their control may be accomplished automatically, so that little attention is required.

The greatest amount of energy being used in the daytime, and the load for illumination being small and wanted principally in the evening, it is therefore not profitable to run the prime movers except during the day. The use of a storage battery is therefore of great service in supplying energy at periods of small demand, when the generators are shut down. In connection with the storage battery, and with the new development of the low voltage tungsten lamps, the cost and size, as well as the maintenance expense, may be considerably reduced by proper engineering.

The main feature in which the great advantage of a farm operated by electricity lies is that the farmer himself has at all times under his direct control the entire supply of electric energy being used, whether obtained from some public service corporation or supplied by his private plant.

Timely Tips.

Here is a description of an outside coat that one can wear through an entire day, say, if one comes to town from the country home, goes shopping in the morning, to tea in the afternoon and stays in town to dine and the theater. For this suede cloth or a first class duvetyn is just right. Taube, dull green or one of the dull orange or golden brown shades can be had in these materials. A king's blue, futurist or Roman striped lining gives life to such a garment and lends it individuality when it is thrown back over the chair.

KEEP EGGS INFERTILE.

It is estimated that the annual loss of eggs in the country is $45,000,000. Nearly all of this is sustained by farmers, and much of it can be prevented by keeping eggs infertile through the summer. This means that roosters should be killed off or at least kept away from the layers. It is figured that the eggs become infertile from seven to fourteen days after the male bird is removed from the flock. Repeated trials have shown that fertile eggs and infertile ones placed side by side under similar conditions show a much longer keeping quality of the infertile ones.—American Agriculturist.

BURY THE HESSIAN FLY.

Plow In July to Destroy Pest and Improve Next Year's Crops.

We feed 50,000,000 bushels of good wheat to the hessian fly every year, to say nothing of what it costs us to feed our chinch bugs and other pests, and have only ourselves to blame. Get together. Every neighborhood should have a farmers' club and appoint a hessian fly committee.

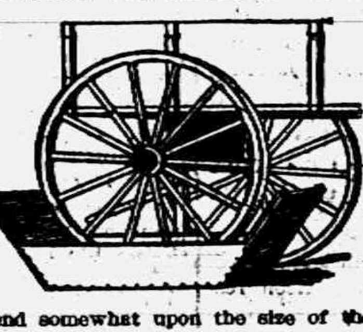
Cut the wheat high above the second joint. Remove the grain from the field and stack it somewhere else. The fly is now in the resting stage, and the safest way and only sure plan is for every farmer to plow every acre deeply and thoroughly within two weeks after harvest, turning under the stubble completely.

Team work is necessary. Teach the school children to look for the fly and report it at every stage. Appoint a captain in every school district, who should be the best wheat grower in the neighborhood.

This early complete plowing will not only reduce the fly, but will be a great benefit to next year's crop. It does not let the field dry out after harvest and gets it ready to hold all of the moisture which is so badly needed in most sections. It is stated that other things being equal, three acres plowed in July are worth five acres plowed in September.

Wheel Soaking Box.

When wheel tires become loose, as they often do in hot, dry weather, the watertight box shown herewith will be found useful for soaking them either in water or oil. The box consists of pieces of wood, preferably oak, cut in the forms indicated and nailed firmly together with numerous wire nails. All the cracks are then thoroughly filled with thick whitelead paint and the inside at least painted with two or three coats of paint to render the wood waterproof. The dimensions will depend somewhat upon the size of the wheels to be soaked. Large tired wagon wheels will need a wider box than will buggy wheels. In operation the wagon is jacked up until the wheel will slip over the edge of the box; then it is lowered until the rim almost touches the bottom. The oil or the water is then poured in till it covers the tire, and the wheel is slowly revolved so as to get every part wet. In order to reach the hub rags may be wound around it and kept soaked with oil or water.



AROUND THE HOGPEN.

Keep the pens clean and dry to prevent disease among your hogs. Don't let drafts blow on the hogs—drafts are fatal to them, causing pneumonia, rheumatism and various other ailments.

If your hogs are sick or not doing well find out what the trouble is. It will pay. A squealing hog is not profitable—a contented hog grunts. Don't keep them in too small a pen. Exercise is essential to health. Give small pigs plenty of exercise. It may prevent thumps.

Give the sow and pigs plenty of room on the sunny side of a building.

Colony houses for brood sows are more sanitary than a central house.

If your little pigs are troubled with scours change the diet of the sow. Do not feed dirty, spoiled or sour feed. Thoroughly cook all meat scraps.

If hard bony enlargements form on the hock joints of your small pigs the chances are that they have rickets. Introduce some new blood into the herd and feed your pigs per each 100 pounds weight a mixture of calcium phosphate pulverized, nux vomica two ounces, artificial carlsbad salts ten ounces.

For worms give five grains calomel and ten grains santonin per each 100 pounds, followed in about six hours by a bran mash or give ten grains santonin and twenty grains areca nut after a twenty-four hour fast.

Follow some of your hogs to the packing house and see them inspected. It will pay in case they are tubercular.

Use plenty of whitewash around the pens.

To Repair Satin Slippers.

If you have a pair of satin slippers that have split or worn across the toe, crochet a medallion of silk and sew on the worn part. The slippers will be prettier than when new.

POULTRY NOTES.

Better keep one good hen than three that you have your doubts about.

If meat scraps are fed to the poultry better see that they are not too old.

Ten drops of carbolic acid to a gallon of drink water makes a good disease preventive when cholera threatens.

Excited men and women make excited birds, and that has a bad effect on the egg producing mechanism of the birds.

Charcoal and grit should be kept where the fowls can have access to them at all times. They are a preventive as well as a cure for indigestion.

Dampness and contaminated ground are fruitful causes of poultry diseases. The quarters should be as dry as a

THE COMING CHAUTAUQUA

The dates fixed for Tecumseh's second Chautauqua are Sept. 5th to 10th. The formal opening will take place on Sunday afternoon followed by a program suitable for the day. Each day during the week an afternoon and evening program will be given. A special feature this year will be the Junior Chautauqua Play grounds, both morning and afternoon. A graduate playground expert will have charge.

The course this year is claimed to be stronger than last and is crowded full with good speakers, music and entertainers.

The tents will be pitched this years as last on the square known as Cemetery Park. The advance advertising man was in town the first of the week, getting out advertising matter and a meeting of the guarantors has been called to meet at Grange hall to-night at 8 o'clock for the purpose of effecting an organization.

The weather conditions have so far been very unfavorable for Chautauquas but perhaps the weather man will be good to us and give us good weather by Sept. 5th. We have heard so many favorable reports of last years course that we feel safe in saying that this years Chautauqua will be a big success in Tecumseh.

FIGHTING CABBAGE WORMS.

Different Remedies That Can Be Used For the Pest.

There are several remedies that control the cabbage worm, says a writer in the Michigan Farmer. Hot water heated to a temperature of 130 degrees F. and liberally sprayed or dashed over the plants will kill all worms with which it comes in contact and leave the cabbages unharmed.

Pyrethrum used at a rate of two ounces to five gallons of water, and sprayed at frequent intervals will control the worms. It can be dusted on in powder form when cabbages are damp. Buy pyrethrum in closed tin retainers, as it loses its strength by exposure. This powder is not poisonous to human beings. A third remedy is kerosene emulsion applied as a spray, but it has the disadvantage of being required to come in direct contact with the worms to destroy them.

Kerosene emulsion is made of two gallons of kerosene, half a pound of whale oil soap (or one quart of soft soap) and a gallon of water. Dissolve the soap in boiling water and pour in the kerosene while still boiling. (Take the materials away from the fire for doing this.) Agitate thoroughly by pumping the material through a force pump and forcing it from the nozzle back upon itself again.

This makes a solution and must be diluted from fifteen to twenty times to use on the cabbages. Paris green used at the rate of one pound to 150 gallons of water can be used safely until the heads are half grown, or until within about four or five weeks of harvesting. These are the most important methods of controlling this pest.

Special Communication, Tecumseh lodge No. 69 F. & A. M. at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon for the purpose of attending the funeral of Brother Wm. J. Osborn.

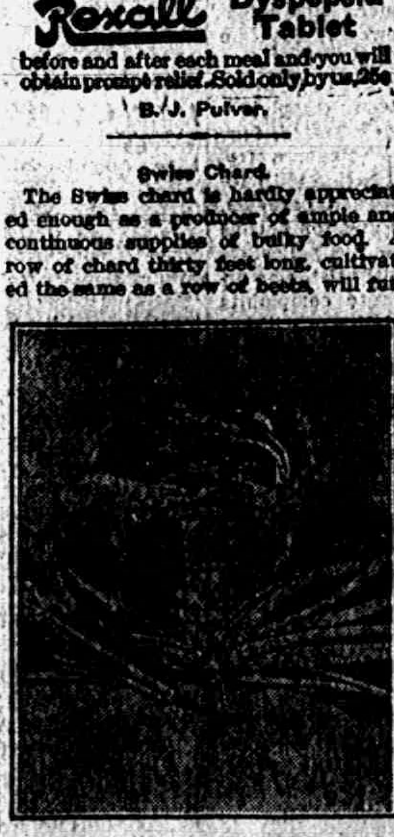
Swiss Chard.

The Swiss chard is hardly appreciated enough as a producer of ample and continuous supplies of bulky food. A row of chard thirty feet long, cultivated the same as a row of beets, will furnish plenty of greens for a family of average size. As fast as the outside leaves are taken off the growth is renewed, and moderate pickings may be gathered from each plant during the season. In localities where consumers have become used to this plant for greens there is considerable market demand. Almost anywhere a demand may be developed by giving away a pound or so of the leaves to customers buying other vegetables.



THERE IS DEMAND FOR SWISS CHARD.

AROUND THE DAIRY.

Proper feeding determines the amount of gain in the dairy business.

The profits of a dairy cow can be anticipated and realized with a greater degree of surety than in any other one phase of farming.

No cow can do her best or even keep up a normal flow of milk when compelled to stand out in the hot midday sun of summer and fight the flies.

It would seem that every man would realize the folly of having the profits of a good dairy herd eaten up by a few "boarders," which he could easily discover and eliminate from the herd.

ANOTHER BARGAIN DAY

Wednesday's bargain day morning broke cloudy and the weather conditions were not favorable for a large crowd, but considering the day due there were quite a few shoppers.

In the evening the usual band concert was given and with John Pennington's singing, there was quite a large crowd in to witness the sports. The attraction of the evening was advertised to be a tight rope performance by the Stanley Bros., but at the last moment the committee were notified that they could not get here but were sending a substitute which proved to be a pair of commedians in a comedy sketch.

This should have been given on a raised platform so that it could be seen by the crowd but the arrangements had to be made so hurridly that this could not be accomplished and many were disappointed in not being able to see the performance.

We sincerely hope that the weather man will be more considerate of our wishes and the community at large and bring more favorable bargain day comes round.

BUTTERFLY LUNCHEON

Miss Nina Hunter Guest Of Honor

Miss Bessie Cupples most delightfully entertained a company of her young lady friends at a luncheon party Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock honoring Miss Nina Hunter.

The color scheme throughout the home was pink and white, large bouquets of cosmos being used. The table was most beautifully decorated, a trellis of woodbine overhead was brilliant with butterflies, and a large basket of pink cosmos with ribbons leading to each guest. At a given signal these were drawn by the young ladies, and a large butterfly to each announced the old story of one I love two I love, three I love I say, until number twelve announced the marriage of Miss Nina Hunter and Don Heesen Saturday August 7, 1915.

A four course luncheon was served, by Mrs. Geo. Rathbun and Mrs. Floyd Heesen and a most enjoyable afternoon was passed in comparing notes and giving advice to those members of the party who were soon to embark upon the sea of matrimony.

Those present were Misses Josephine Hayden, Ruth Keeney, Zilla Mills, Jane Harris, Edyth Shull, Marian Rosecrans and Mrs. J D Service and Miss Inez Fay of Jackson.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER

Mrs. Floyd Heesen and Mrs. G. Arthur Rathbun entertained a company Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Heesen for a miscellaneous shower for Miss Nina Hunter. Miss Hunter received of many beautiful gifts. The evening was spent playing 500, Mrs. E Rosacrans winning the prize. Refreshments were served and in parting the guests extended many good wishes to the prospective bride.

Great Spectacle is to Be Staged Here

Gordon's "Panama In Peace and War," Will Be Shown in Fireworks at Hague Park.

JACKSON, MICH

There's going to be war at Hague Park nightly, starting Monday night, Aug. 9. And its not going to be a sham battle either Instead, it's going to show just what the United States would do in war time with a foreign country, with the illustrators using the Panama canal as a probable point of attack.

This interesting incident will be shown during the touching off of the greatest fireworks display ever seen in Jackson. Under the captain of "Panama in Peace and War," J. Saunders Gordon, the country's foremost fireworks manager, will unload enough dynamite in presenting this remarkable display to blow up Jackson in jig time if the realism of the attack was registered.

The spectacle is shown in two acts, with the first act picturing the opening of the great waterway to the world's commerce and vessels of war. The battleship Oregon, whose Spanish-American war historical records are readily recalled, is first lifted from the harbor into the Gatun loce of the canal, and with President Wilson standing on the bridge, starts on its triumphal trip to the Pacific. Army drills and native festivities which brings into action the 200 ballet girls and other features, complete the inteseating pageant of peace

The second act develops the war for a supposition is made that Columbia, though at the time the canal is opened is a weak country, has found itself through wealthy existence, and becomes a rival of Brazil and Argentina. She builds up a navy which she wants for an attack on Panama and Panama's most loyal backer, Uncle Sam Columbia warships steam into the harbor, and start a most unexpected attack, but Uncle Sam soons finds himself, and thereupon opens an attack that develops one of the finest pieces of fireworks workmanship ever attempted. United States conquers quickly, but no sooner is the celebration of the victory under way than the supposed to be extinct volcano of Mt. Esperanza erupts, shooting lava into the air and covering the slopes and burying all thereon, The eruption of this volcano in the midst of the activities, is one of the most thrilling spectacles ever offered.

The lighting and pyrotechnic effects of "Panama" are wonderful, not to say magnificent, but is followed by even a greater and varied style of fireworks display under beautiful arrangements.

There's a reason to believe the "Panama" display will surpass anything ever seen in the fireworks line in Jackson or in America for that matter.

When Ice Cream Sticks.

Ice cream is sometimes frozen so hard that it does not come out of the mold easily. When this happens let the cold water run over the outside of the can. The water is so much warmer than the ice cream that it melts it sufficiently to start it out and does not melt it enough to spoil the shape of the mold.

How to Clean Matting.

When matting is soiled rub it with a soft flannel cloth dipped in lukewarm salt water. Rub the spots with moistened cornmeal; then go over the whole surface again with salt water, this time cold. Wipe with a dry cloth. This method of cleaning does not turn the matting yellow, as water usually does.

MICHIGAN MAIDS WILL COMPETE IN MILKING CONTEST

Prizes Are Offered by Michigan State Fair.

Who is the champion milkmaid of Michigan?

The question is often asked in different counties, and answers vary, it being estimated that nearly 100 maidens claim the distinction of being superior in the art of milking the dairy cow.

To settle the dispute General Manager G. W. Dickinson of the Michigan State Fair announces that a milking contest will be held during the State Fair at Detroit, and all young women may compete. The first prize will be $15, second $10, third $5 and fourth $2.50.

In making the announcement General Manager Dickinson said: "Since the greater portion of butter is no longer made on the farm, but at creameries, and the care of this work no longer falls upon the women of the farm we believe that the daughters of the farm can help their fathers and brothers to increase the annual income by taking an interest in the practical affairs of the farm, and in order to encourage and promote such interest and such practical help we will conduct a milking contest.

"The cows to be milked will be selected by the superintendent of the cattle department, he having in view the time of freshening, so as to have them as near equal as possible.

"The cows will be milked clean at 6 a. m. the day of the contest. At 4 p. m. all contestants must be ready for the trial.

"The cows will be numbered, and each contestant will draw a number which will show the cow she is to milk. The time of the one finishing first will be taken as standard, and all others will be cut one point for each minute after the first contestant finishes. The weight of the milk by the one finishing first will be the standard, and all others will be allowed one point for each pound over the standard or cut one point for each pound under the weight of milk obtained by the contestant finishing first.

"The cows must be milked dry, and the condition of each cow as to showing how carefully and easily the milking is done will be considered by the judges."

AUTO DRIVERS TO ATTEMPT TO LOWER RECORDS

State Fair Races Will Attract Speed Demons.

Manufacturers of motorcars are taking a more active interest in racing contests than ever before, and several dirt track records are expected to be shattered this summer, according to President G. W. Dickinson of the International Motor Contest association, who is also secretary and general manager of the Michigan State Fair, at which speed contests will be featured next September. Noted drivers from all over the country have signified their intention of being at Detroit for the State Fair races, and that the events will be closely contested is certain.

Future of Racing Is Assured.

"With the new rules adopted by the International Motor Speed Contest association, and dirt track racing upon a basis that practically guarantees the greatest possible protection to driver and car, as well as spectator, the future of dirt track racing is assured," says Mr. Dickinson.

"In the early days of dirt track sport way back in 1902 the speed of the machine had not reached a development equal to the speed possibilities of the track. When Alexander Winton's Bullet No. 1 traveled a mile in 1:06 4-5 there was a great deal more comment throughout the country than there is today when a racing car breaks a world's record, but the driver was not called upon to take the chances then as now. Before many months had passed the mark for the mile had been reduced to one minute flat by Barney Oldfield, and then followed a series of speed trials which sent the records for all distances down to points where every attempt to beat them meant a game of chance.

"Louis Chevrolet invaded America, coming from abroad with his 90 Fiat racer. Earl Kizer not only defeated Oldfield, but won more races than any other man engaged in dirt track racing during the season of 1905, until he was injured in Cleveland. Web Jay, piloting the White Steamer, known as the "Whistling Billie," drove the fastest mile that ever had been negotiated on a mile track, being credited with a mark under 50 seconds. The record was made on Morris park track, New York, and was never officially recognized. Louis Chevrolet, the same year and at about the same time, established an official mark of 52 2-5 seconds with his Fiat.

Disbrow Holds Record.

"The mile track record made by Chevrolet stood until Walter Christie lowered it at St. Paul, Minn., during the first race meet ever held in connection with a state fair. Ralph De Palma in 1908 and 1909 made successful onslaughts and finally, in 1910, Barney Oldfield again came to the front and drove the first mile under fifty seconds that ever had been negotiated on a circular track. Ralph De Palma and Bob Burman came right back at the veteran and knocked the figures below forty-eight seconds, and then Louis Disbrow, who had suddenly blossomed out in 1912 as a dirt track star, sent the record to the lowest figure it has ever officially reached, the present record of 46.20 seconds.

"The manufacturer of pleasure cars is beginning to see the importance of this type of contest, and a half dozen firms will give their support to the big circular course meets in 1915."

STATE FAIR FOR ALL THE PEOPLE, SAYS DICKINSON

Not Private Corporation, Asserts General Manager.

CONTROLLED BY THE STATE.

Big Exposition Result of Legislative Action Taken in 1849—Purpose Is to [illegible] Agricultural and Manufacturing Interests of Michigan.

That the State Fair is not designed as a money making proposition and that its purpose is simply to encourage and promote the agricultural and manufacturing interests of Michigan was the statement of General Manager G. W. Dickinson today, while discussing the plans which are being made for the 1915 exposition which will be held at Detroit Sept. 6 to 15.

Not Private Corporation.

"The State Fair is not a private corporation," declared Mr. Dickinson. "It is not operated for private gains. It is for the people of the entire state.

"The State Fair was created by a special act of the legislature in 1849 and was brought into existence by the then governor and state officers," continued Mr. Dickinson. "Its directors are elected by the people who are members of the society, and it would be quite difficult to make the Fair more of a people's organization than it is at the present time. The ownership of the property is vested in the organization, which is controlled by its members, who are citizens of Michigan.

G. W. DICKINSON, GENERAL MANAGER OF MICHIGAN STATE FAIR.

"If in the future the State Fair directors should decide to sell the property in Detroit and discontinue having expositions all money received would go into the state treasury after the debts are paid. Some people have told me that they thought the money would be divided among the directors. Such belief is absurd. The Fair is controlled by the state of Michigan by the laws enacted, but the state is not responsible for any debts which may be contracted by the Fair.

Free From Politics.

"The State Fair is free from political influence. The law states that any male citizen of Michigan twenty-one years of age may become a member of the Michigan State Agricultural society, which is the official name of the State Fair, by paying $2 per year. For this fee the State Fair gives in return a membership ticket, which entitles the holder to make exhibits in any or all departments and admission to the grounds once each day during the entire Fair. The members have the right to vote at all caucuses and elections and in this way control the election of the board of directors.

"Another provision of the state law sets forth that all surplus must be used for improvements at the State Fair grounds."

Moving Four or Five Section Harrow.

This device is a great help in moving a four or five section harrow without taking the harrow apart. Take two 1 by 8 inch boards a little longer than the width of the harrow, splicing on top if necessary, and nail a 1 by 8 inch piece three feet long across each end. Fasten a hitch on one end and lay the harrow on it, teeth down. With this you can go through a gate almost too narrow for two horses.—Nebraska Farmer.

CHARLES BECKER

Former N. Y. Police Official Dies For Part in Rosenthal Murder.

LIEUT. BECKER DIES IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

Put to Death for Part in the Rosenthal Murder.

OSSINING, N. Y. — Charles Becker, former police lieutenant in New York, went to his death in the electric chair in Sing Sing penitentiary at 5:45 o'clock Saturday morning.

His was the fifth life which the state demanded for the conspiracy which resulted in the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, who was shot down in front of the Metropole hotel in New York on July 16, 1912.

Becker had been convicted of hiring a band of thugs to do away with Rosenthal to prevent the exposure of police graft in New York's Tenderloin.

The four gunmen who were convicted of the actual shooting—"Dago Frank," "Lefty" Louis, "Whitey" Lewis and "Gyp, the Blood"—were executed on April 13, 1914.

Becker spent a restless night in his cell. His wife was with him until 12:30 in the morning.

"I can now face death with a calm heart," were his last words as he bade his wife farewell. Mrs. Becker, accompanied by her brother, George Lynch, went to New York City.

After listening to the pleading of Mrs. Charles Becker for more than an hour at the Nelson House at Poughkeepsie Friday night Gov. Whitman refused to intervene in the behalf of Becker.

The governor gave as his reasons the fact that the appellate court has found Becker guilty and no new evidence had been produced.

MILITIA SUBDUES STRIKERS

N. Y. Troops Are Now Guarding Plant of Aluminium Co. of America.

MASSENA — Three companies of state militia took charge of the strike situation at the plant of the Aluminium Company of America after a riot in which one workman, who refused to walk out, was killed. Sheriff Day of St. Lawrence County, who was called to Massena at the first outbreak, was unable to subdue the strikers. With deputies and policemen he charged the strikers, but were driven back. In this encounter a policemen was severely clubbed.

Finding it impossible to control the 2,400 employes who struck for higher wages, Sheriff Day called upon Governor Whitman for troops and the three companies reached here at noon. The strikers barricaded behind the bridge were charged by the troops and dispersed.

Potatoes Under Straw.

One rather unusual way of growing potatoes is to lay the seed on the prepared soil and cover, with straw to a depth that will keep the seed moist. The potatoes develop just as they would if planted in the ground, and the tubers are formed above ground and under the straw. The roots strike down into the moist soil, and the tops climb above the straw layer. This mode of raising potatoes has been practiced by farmers for at least twenty-five years. The drawback is that possibly the straw might catch fire and burn up the possibilities of a crop. Also the process is profitable only when one has a large amount of straw that can be permitted to rot.

NOTES OF THE HOG LOT.

It's false economy to feed corn alone to the hogs.

Regularity in feeding fattening hogs is very important.

Pure air, pure water, clean food and a clean place to sleep make hogs profitable.

Constipation is very rare in a herd of fattening hogs that have all the clean water they will drink.

Hogs know to the minute when feeding time comes, and if not fed will fret off part of their previous gain.

Don't make the mistake of allowing the young boars to run with the gilts until they are three or four months old.

Feed a large variety of food, but avoid sudden changes—that is, do not change the whole ration at any one time.

The successful breeder always gives his hogs all the clean water they will drink before he gives them their grain ration.

The brood sow needs a mixed diet with plenty of food rich in protein. Early maturity is important in a profitable hog.

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

An example of what a city man can accomplish on land will be of interest in view of the general desire of town people to live in the country.

A young clerk who seemed to be in failing health got possession of two acres near town and concluded to do something in the line of fruit growing. After getting down to business he saw that by applying the strictest principles of intensive cultivation he would be able to spare space for apple trees and still get a living from his "green stuff" as he went along. So he expended a part of his little capital on twenty-five apple trees and as many plum trees, with fifty grapevines, these last taking up less room than one would imagine, as they grew against the buildings. The porches, front and back, that had presented a bare appearance, benefited by this innovation.

Five hundred strawberry plants, a hundred bushes each of raspberry and blackberry and half a hundred rhubarb roots occupied the patch for small fruits. At first he was at a stand between setting out some gooseberry and currant bushes or reserving their ground for vegetables, but decided for the "garden sass," as his need for returns the first season before the strawberries could come on was crying, and observation convinced him that there is quicker money in such planting than in any other farming. So he spent his extra time on vegetable and salad growing the first two years, but by that time his small fruits were producing, and he reveled in sweets to his soul's contentment.

A BUNCH OF "GREEN STUFF."

He started his "early stuff" in a hotbed or most of it—eggplants set out a foot and a half apart; tomatoes, two feet apart; cabbage, a foot and a half; salsify, a foot and a half; parsnips, beets, lettuce, parsley, peppergrass, in rows; squash, three feet apart; celery, six inches apart; peas, three to four inches apart; bunch beans, ditto; turnips, thinned to half a foot apart after leaves were big enough for salad; cucumbers, in hills, a yard apart. The lettuce was of two varieties, early and late, and was cut to grow up again and again as fast as he supplied his customers with it. Winter squashes and pole beans were planted in the space left by the parsley, peppergrass and lettuce when these crops finally gave out. The peas went into the ground as soon as the soil could be worked in the spring, as neither peas nor squashes do well if transplanted from hotbeds, and peas in such large quantities wouldn't pay to transplant even if they could be moved. He did well with his beets and turnips for salad, as these were thinned at just the right stage for selling for greens. The peppergrass he sowed in boxes in the house in quite moist soil half an inch deep two to three inches apart after thinning and kept at 40 to 50 degrees heat. In less than a month from appearance of plants they were ready for cutting, which he did with shears and repeated every two to three weeks. He learned to divide rhubarb roots every year and to remove to a new place every spring, as disturbance is needed by the roots. His health improves, and every day he learns something about cropping and marketing.

The case of an Illinois man who gave up a good salary as a mechanic and settled down on ten acres of land affords another illustration. This man began with fowls and pigs and in the first year had his business developed so that he had a larger income than when he was working for wages. The farm of ten acres raises feed for two horses, a cow, sixty hogs and 200 chickens. He has no rent to pay, most of the family living is obtained from the soil and life is free and independent. On such a place as this hired help is unnecessary, unless there are more berries to pick or vegetables to take care of than the family can manage.

BREEDING HEIFERS.

Early Freshening Tends to Make a High Producing Cow.

Those who are having their first experience with cattle of dairy breeding are sometimes at a loss to know how early it is desirable to have the young heifers freshen, says the Kansas Farmer. Dairy bred cattle, especially the smaller breeds, develop earlier than do beef cattle. While there is some difference of opinion as to how early dairy heifers should freshen, it is generally considered that they should be brought into the milking herd for the first time at about two years of age. They may not make quite so good growth during the next year when milking begins at this early age, but they are more likely to become sure breeders, and it is also generally believed by dairymen that a high producing cow is more likely to result where the heifer comes into production early.

It is very important during the first lactation to give the heifer the best possible chance to maintain a large flow of milk throughout the period. It must be remembered that the heifer of this age should make more growth, and in the feeding this must be taken into consideration. To properly develop the heifer it will take somewhat heavier rations in proportion to the amount of milk being produced than with the larger cows. A good deal depends upon the way in which a well bred heifer is started, and the beginner in dairying should recognize this fact and see that his young heifers of dairy breeding are given every possible care and attention during the first lactation.

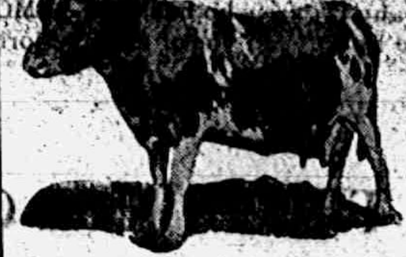
DAIRY and CREAMERY

BUTTER ON THE FARM.

Proper Way of Handling Cream and Operating Churn.

A [illegible] leads me to think that a great many farmers who are making up their milk at home are not getting as good results as they might if they thoroughly understood and put into practice the few principles which will be noted below.

In the first place it is impossible to get all the butter out of cream unless it is ripened as it should be, writes a correspondent of the Iowa Homestead. If several messes of cream are ripened together every time a new lot is added the whole should be stirred, so that the new and the old shall be well mixed.



The Guernsey cow is of a good size; she is ideal in color and type; she has a good udder and teats and is easy to milk; she is the most economical producer of butter fat and gives the richest colored product; she has a good disposition. The cow pictured is the pure bred Guernsey cow, May Rilma. Next to Minnie Cowan she holds the highest yearly record for the breed. In one year May Rilma gave 19,673 pounds of milk, containing 1,073 pounds of butter fat.

Again, the ripening ought to be done in a room where no bad smells or any smells from food that is cooking can reach the cream. Nor ought the cream to be kept where it will be too warm. That will tend to make the butter come soft, and it will not be just as good color as it would otherwise be.

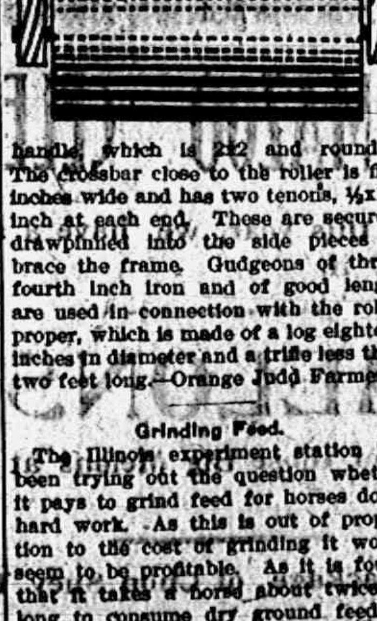
Then, too, not too much should be churned at one time. The facts about churning are that it is concussion which separates the particles of butter from the cream. If we use a revolving churn—and this is the best where we have any amount of cream to churn—not too much cream should be put in at once. A moment's thought will show why. Since it is one blow after another which pounds the cream out, there must be room enough for the cream to fall as far as possible in the churn with every revolution. It is this striking on an unyielding surface that churns the butter.

Right along in this line it is a good plan to remember that we do not gain anything by churning too fast. You see why it is so too. If we whirl the churn so that there is no concussion, or practically none, the particles of butter will not be knocked out of the cream as fast as if we took the time to let the contents of the churn fall from end to end every time we give the crank a revolution. Here is one place where we make haste slowly.

Washing in good, clean, cool water, gathering up the particles of butter with a strainer so that nothing shall be lost, properly working—these are all essentials, and we need to study them and be thoroughly in earnest in every single thing we do, or we will not save all of the valuable elements of our cream, and it is these for which we are working.

Garden Roller For Hand Use.

A roller should be used freely in the garden when the ground is dry, but not when wet, as it tends to pack the earth and retard the growing of the plants. The surface should always be made fine after rolling. A good roller for hand use is not expensive. The side pieces of the frame here illustrated are 1½x3½ inches, tapered from crossbars so as to be ½x2 inches at the handle, which is 2x2 and rounded. The crossbar close to the roller is five inches wide and has two tenons, ½x1½ inch at each end. These are securely drawpinned into the side pieces to brace the frame. Gudgeons of three-fourth inch iron and of good length are used in connection with the roller proper, which is made of a log eighteen inches in diameter and a trifle less than two feet long.—Orange Judd Farmer.



Grinding Feed.

The Illinois experiment station has been trying out the question whether it pays to grind feed for horses doing hard work. As this is out of proportion to the cost of grinding it would seem to be profitable. As it is found that it takes a horse about twice as long to consume dry ground feed as it does a feed that is dampened, it is certain that the feed is better prepared in the mouth for digestion in the stomach, and the feed should be better assimilated. In feeding ground grain allowance must be made for the increase in bulk due to grinding. It requires more by measure, but less by weight.

Orchard Cultivation.

Keep the cultivator going in the orchard during this month and for the two following ones. The conservation of moisture is a great thing for trees. Few people realize how much water trees require.

Profit-Sharing with Retail Buyers

On August 1, 1914 we made the announcement that if we could make and sell at retail 300,000 Ford cars between August 1, 1914 and August 1, 1915 we would share profits with the retail purchasers, to the extent of from $40 to $60 on each car. We have sold over 300,000 Ford cars in the time specified, profit-sharing checks of $50 each will be distributed as rapidly as possible after August 15, 1915. Retail purchasers who have not yet mailed us there profit-sharing coupons, properly endorsed, should do so without delay.

Our plan to profit-share with retail purchasers of Ford cars during 1914-15 has been most successful. We thoroughly believe in it, but, realizing the uncertainty of conditions generally makes it advisable to defer any announcement of future profit-sharing until a later date.

We are, however, confident of our inability to reduce costs for several months, and therefore can offer no profit-sharing for cars delivered during August, September and October, 1915.

"FREE" TREATMENT IS BURDEN TO MICHIGAN

Gratuity to Some Costs State $60,000 Past Year.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 6.—Some state officials do not take kindly to the report emanating from Ann Arbor to the effect that the hospital there is doing a grand work in treating sick children free.

The treatment may be free to the parents, but it is not by any means a free proposition. The state pays for it and according to the figures here, pays well.

"Don't let the idea get abroad that the University of Michigan hospital is doing something for nothing," was the way Auditor General Fuller put it. "Last year I see they treated 700 children free down there. Well those 700 children's treatment cost the general fund of the state $61,600. It is free to the parents but the state foots the bills and it foots good ones. They are itemized, so much for a pair of smoked glasses, so much for telegrams, and so much for everything, and they seem to know how to charge, too."

Brakeman May Die and Fireman Is Badly Injured.

St. Joseph, Mich., Aug. 6.—A Pere Marquette passenger and freight train collided head on at Sawyer, fifteen miles south of here.

C. T. Beebe of Grand Rapids, head brakeman on the freight, was injured and may die. John Jameson, fireman on the passenger, was seriously injured. Women passengers were in panic and three were hurt by being trampled upon.

WARSAW FALLS; FEW RUSS TAKEN

Teutonic Campaign One of Most Remarkable in History.

ONLY 4,862 ARE PRISONERS

Bavarian Troops Enter Polish Capital—Rear Guard Defense by Grand Duke Nicholas Conducted With Remarkable Skill—Russ Still Battle at Other Fronts.

London, Aug. 6.—Warsaw has fallen. In a brief but dramatic climax the German armies under Field Marshal Von Hindenburg crowned with victory the greatest military campaign in all history.

This much is admitted, and the immediate evacuation of all Poland is considered inevitable. England finds solace only in the official German report announcing that 4,840 men and twenty-two officers were captured. This is interpreted to mean that Grand Duke Nicholas had so perfected his plans that practically his entire army escaped capture, only a heroic rear guard, defending the city and the retreat of their comrades with the desperation of death, being sacrificed to the merciless German advance.

City an Empty Shell.

The fate of the hundreds of thousands of Slavs still in Poland, battling for the life of Russia on the line of the Bug, the Narew to the north, where the Germans are driving on the Warsaw-Petrograd railroad still hangs in the balance. The "masterly retreat" of the Grand Duke's army from the Polish capital, leaving only a worthless shell to the triumphant Germans, gives hope to military authorities here that similar heroic rear guard actions may make good the retreat on all these lines, leaving Russia still unbroken.

Dispatches from Berlin declare the city is wild with the joy of victory. There the absolute destruction of the Russian armies is declared to be inevitable, and the end of the war with absolute triumph for the kaiser is predicted before winter. Plans are under way for the triumphal entry of the kaiser and kaiserin into the captured capital, which twice before has been on the verge of collapse before the German arms.

Bavarians Take City.

Official and unofficial dispatches prove that the entry of the Teutonic troops into Warsaw was accomplished only after two days of the most terrific fighting ever recorded. But thirty-six hours before the news of the German occupation was received Petrograd admitted that the outer defenses on the Blonie-Nadzaryn line had been surrendered to the Germans, and the Russians had fallen back to the defenses of the city proper. To the Bavarian troops under Prince Leopold belongs the honor of the occupation.

GENERAL GONZALES IS IN MEXICAN CAPITAL

Carranza Agents, Deny Evacuation of Mexico City at All.

Mexico City, Aug. 6.—General Pablo Gonzales, chief of the Carrancista forces, has entered the capital, with his entire army. Three brigades of his troops paraded through the streets of the city while the church bells rang and throngs of people gathered along the route taken by the soldiers. The entrance of General Gonzales ends the uncertainty of the last Carrancista occupation of Mexico City due to the fact that opponents of the first chief spread many rumors to the effect that the Carrancista forces had evacuated the city again. Sponsors for these reports pointed with significance to the fact that General Gonzales remained at the nearby town of Guadalupe.

General Gonzales established his headquarters in the national palace. As head of the military government of Mexico he will begin to transact the business of the government. After troops paraded through the city food was distributed to several hundred of the poor of the capital.

OBREGON IS AT MONTEREY

El Paso, Aug. 6.—General Alvaro Obregon arrived at Monterey at 10 o'clock in the morning from San Luis Potosi, according to official dispatches received by Andre Garcia, consul for Carranza at El Paso. Following his train were long lines of coaches carrying 10,000 of General Castro's cavalry division. The arrival of this Carranza force makes the fall of Saltillo and Torreon almost inevitable within a short time.

General Francisco Villa, who arrived early in the morning in Juarez, declined to discuss the military situation in any way but asserted that he wasn't through fighting by any means. He refuses to discuss the report from Torreon that his entire army at that point had threatened to mutiny unless he returned and takes personal command.

Petitions Ask Screen Ban.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Aug. 6.—Petitions are being circulated all over this city, asking the city council to pass the recently introduced ordinance to make all saloons operate without screens, and to make cabarets in cafes and bars illegal. The petitions are being extensively signed.

GEN. VON BISSING

Governor of Belgium Said to Be About to Lose Post.

SAFETY IS URGED IN REPORT BY REDFIELD

No Finding Is Made on Eastland Disaster.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—The board of inquiry of William C. Redfield, secretary of commerce, closed its investigation of the sinking of the Eastland at noon with a report favoring improved methods of inspection. It stopped because it ran out of witnesses and means to resume sessions after the federal grand jury releases the men who are wanted to testify. It made a series of recommendations, dealing principally with the government inspection service. The report is not a finding on the Eastland disaster. This is to be made later.

The members of the board made a report asking the secretary to demand of congress the following changes in the laws:

Provide a board of naval architects to pass on all plans for vessels over 100 tons.

Provide tests for seaworthiness, safety and stability of such vessels.

Make possible appeals from findings of local inspectors.

Demand the approval in writing of the supervising inspector whenever a vessel's passenger carrying capacity is increased.

The board also suggested to Secretary Redfield that until such changes had been made by congress he should require inspectors to allow an increase in capacity of a vessel only after personal inspection and to make written records of the case, and to demand inclining tests on all vessels whose stability is not assured.

TRAIN WRECKER CONFESSES

Man Says He Derailed Scenic Limited in Utah for Revenge.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Aug. 6.—Harry G. Hontz, a printer, who gives Leighton, Pa., as his home, surrendered to the police and confessed that he wrecked the Scenic Limited on the Denver & Rio Grande railroad near Springville, Utah, last Monday when several cars left the rails and many persons narrowly escaped injury. Hontz said he threw a piece of angle iron under the train as it was passing to avenge himself on the railroad because a brakeman had ejected him from a freight train.

Hontz said he was arrested by Thomas Burge, then a special agent for the Southern Pacific and now of the Denver & Rio Grande, in Navada, in 1910, and was sent to prison for wrecking a semaphore and sending a handcar against a mail train at Fernley, Nev. This story was confirmed later and Hontz was recognized by Burge as the man arrested and convicted in Navada. Hontz has been in an insane asylum.

Shea Surrenders Sheriff's Office.

Rockville, Ind., Aug. 6.—The Kreitenstein-Shea contested election case, with the remunerativve office of sheriff of Vigo county as the prize, took an abrupt and somewhat unexpected turn when John J. Shea Jr. abandoned the contest and agreed to surrender the office to George W. Kreitenstein, Republican, who had been declared by Judge George D. Sunkel to have been legally elected by a plurality of 145 votes in the general election, Nov. 5, 1914.

ILLINOIS JUNKETS COST THOUSANDS

Legislators "Joy Riding" Over State in Pullmans, Charge.

GUESTS ARK TAKEN BY SCORE

Lieutenant Governor Barrett O'Hara Charged in New Injunction Suit of Signing Away Recklessly Thousands of Dollars for Pleasure Parties Calling Themselves Committees.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 6.—Joy riding up and down the state with all expenses not only for members but for families and friends paid out of the state treasury was a diversion of the forty-ninth general assembly, according to a new bill for injunction and accounting filed by Attorney Fayette S. Munroe for John B. Fergus. The bill deals particularly with the so-called committee expenses of the session. It contains copies of vouchers paid by the state treasurer on warrants from the auditor's office and alleges that all are in violation of the constitution and asks that the money be ordered returned to the state.

Sensational charges concerning other acts of the legislature also are contained in the bill. It challenges the validity of the committee now investigating the Chicago board of education, the O'Hara vice commission and the resolution giving the lieutenant governor an o[illegible] in Chicago.

Vouchers Illegally Paid, Is Charge.

A long list of vouchers which are said to have been paid illegally from the committee funds is given. The point made against many is that they were approved only by Lieutenant Governor O'Hara when the law requires that some committee chairman also sign them. Others are said to cover expenses incurred in the forty-eighth general assembly, though the committee appropriation was specifically for the forty-ninth assembly.

Beall Was One.

One which seems to fall under both classifications is for $171.25 paid a New York clipping bureau for newspaper clippings furnished up to Aug. 1, 1913, to Former Senator Edmund Beall, the "stork mayor" of Alton. At the time Senator Beall was a member of the O'Hara vice commission and achieved considerable newspaper comment by visits to Freiberg's, Roy Jones' and other resorts since closed by the police.

Paid O'Hara's Brothes.

Though the recent session refused to appropriate $10,000 which Lieutenant Governor O'Hara wanted to continue his vice investigation the bill mentioned more than $10,000, which he is said to have obtained for this purpose on vouchers approved only by himself. Included in this is $5,500 for his brother, F. H. O'Hara. Though Barrett O'Hara was chairman of the commission, the point is advanced that it could not exist legally as two of its members were no longer members of the legislature.

Mormons Couldn't Beat It.

Copies of accounts sent in by railroads show that the visiting committees were pleasure parties of from thirty to fifty each. The bill sets forth that their legal number is seven members, five from the house and two from the senate. It has been customary for members to take their wives on these pleasure jaunts at state expense. The expense accounts reproduced in the bill indicate that on some of the trips as few as five members of the legislature were present, while the party for which the state paid numbered fifty.

As Utah in the palmy days of mormonism could not achieve such a showing, members explain that these free trips were extended to favored state employes, friends of members and others.

What Educational Tour Cost.

The educational committee, of which Senator Sam Latham of Eldorado and Representative George Hilton of Chicago were the chairmen, made a strong showing. Its entire expense account was turned in by Senator Latham and approved by Lieutenant Governor O'Hara.

This committee consisted of nine members. The account would indicate that Senators Latham, Carroll and Meeker and Representatives Hilton and Pace made the inspection trip. Senator Bardill and Representatives Flagg, Barker and Frank Ryan, the other members, are not mentioned. The state paid for this trip railroad fare and expenses for fifty persons.

The committee which inspected charitable institutions consisting of eight members, of which six went, cost the state expenses incurred by forty persons. Six members of the committee to inspect state penal institutions out of ten made the trip, brought in a bill for $1,902.25 cents.

CLAD ONLY IN PATRIOTISM

Man Who Wanted to Carry Flag to Wilson Is in Padded Cell.

Jackson, Mich., Aug. 6.—Clad in the garb with which nature endowed him, E. R. McFall, who says he is on his way to Washington to present a tiny American flag to President Wilson, is held in the padded cell at the county jail. He was arrested at the Union depot.

McFall says he is the only man who dares to take the flag to the president and he modestly requested the police to charter a Pullman car for the rest of the journey. He said that while he had no objections to a few persons accompanying him on the trip he desired that the number be limited.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound and imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

NURSES WILL TEND BABIES AND RELIEVE MOTHERS AT MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

Women Are Urged to Attend Big Exposition.

General Manager G. W. Dickinson of the Michigan State Fair announces that mothers and their children are especially urged to attend the big exposition to be held at Detroit Sept. 6 to 15.

Arrangements have been made to have a large tent where mothers may leave their children with the assurance that their boys and girls will be with trained attendants during their absence. Absolutely pure milk, which will be kept in refrigerators, will be provided the children.

The Detroit W. C. T. U. will be in direct charge of the children, and there will be nurses to care for the infants every day of the Fair.

"We want the mothers to come to the fair and enjoy themselves," declared General Manager Dickinson today. "There will be many educational features which will attract the attention of mothers.

"From the inquiries received relative to the Better Babies' contest, I am confident that the number of entries for the cash prizes, which will total nearly $200, will be more than double those of 1914.

"The State Fair is as much for women as men, and we have provided many interesting exhibits especially for the ladies."

THE SUNNY SIDE.

Do Not Envy Your Neighbor; He Has Troubles of His Own.

Don't allow yourself to fall into the way of thinking that you have all the troubles there are in the world. Don't for a moment think that life is unfair, that the scales are unevenly balanced by an unjust fate; that you have all the sorrows and cares while some one else has all the joys. You will be in a bad way when you begin to follow such a train of thought.

Life is, after all, very square, very even. If we have sorrows we also have joys. If we have shadows we also have sunshine. But neither you nor any one of us can have a monopoly of either the shadows or the sunbeams; we each have an equal share of both. And if any one of us seems to have more than his share of shadows, if he seems to have been given the lion's share of care and trouble, it is only because he does not make the most of the sunshine while it is with him. He is too busy worrying about the sorrow he has had and the care he may have in the future to enjoy the happiness of the present.

Don't envy your neighbor who rolls about in a high priced automobile, while you have to walk. He has his share of troubles, even though poverty may not be among them. Don't wish you were in his place just because he seems to have every luxury. If you were in his place you might give anything to be back home again in your own home.

Our happiness is such as we make it. It is lying ready within hand's reach. We have only to stretch out our arms and take it. The difficulty is that most of us are too busy looking for trouble to see the happiness at our door. Most of us are no sooner through with the problems of today than we begin anticipating the difficulties of tomorrow. Is it any wonder that we find so much trouble in life when we are looking for it so unceasingly?

Let us reverse our usual mental processes and begin looking for happiness. If we keep thinking of the pleasures of life we will surely find them. "Search and ye will find." This being so, why not search for the beautiful, the happy and the bright instead of the dark and gloomy? Let us forget about trouble for awhile and look only for joy. You will be surprised to see how much of it you will find.

Don't let the shadows which fall on every path spoil your enjoyment of the sunshine. Far better to fill your mind so full of the subeams that when the shadows fall you will not notice them for the brightness in your heart.

Care of the Baby In Summer

(Prepared by the children's bureau, United States department of labor.)

Food For the "Runabout" Baby.

For the first nine months or more of a baby's life, when he is growing at a very rapid rate, nature has provided a perfect food in mother's milk. With such babies a healthy development usually goes steadily forward with little trouble. But after being weaned all too many babies seem to suffer from a setback, while accommodating themselves to digest a new food.

A list of the foods suitable to this period of the baby's life is given in greater detail in a bulletin called "Infant Care," published by the children's bureau of the department of labor, Washington. This publication is sent free to all who care to ask for it, sending their name and address to the bureau.

The average healthy baby of one year of age should be taking five meals a day at four hour intervals. At this period he should have about one quart of milk daily. In addition, he may have well cooked cereal twice a day, squeezed beef juice or broth once a day, some fruit juice once or twice a day, unless the bowels are loose, and dry bread or toast to chew.

As the baby grows and thrives various things may be added to his diet. The following are sample meals for a day for a healthy child from eighteen months to two years old (an ounce is two tablespoonfuls):

7 a. m.—Milk, 8 to 10 ounces, piece of swieback, toast or dried bread.
9 a. m.—Orange juice, 2 ounces.
10 a. m.—Cereal, 2 tablespoonfuls; cupful of milk, toast or dry bread.
2 p. m.—Broth, 6 ounces; meat, 1 tablespoonful; vegetable (spinach), 1 tablespoonful; stale bread, 1 piece; baked apple, 1 tablespoonful
6 p. m.—Cereal, 1½ tablespoonfuls; milk, 6 to 8 ounces; toast or bread.
10 p. m.—Milk, 8 ounces in cup. (May be omitted)

The following rules for cooking and preparing certain of these articles may be helpful to mothers:

Toast.—Bread one day old, cut in very thin slices; slices placed on edge in a toast rack in an oven to dry. Leave oven door partly open.

Broth.—Of round steak, one pound; of water, one pint. Put the meat on in cold water and allow it to come to a boil; then lower the flame so that it barely simmers for three or four hours. Remove the meat and add enough water to make up the original amount of liquid; strain through a wire sieve and set aside to cool. When cold the fat is removed in a solid piece, leaving a clear liquid or jelly. Heat a small portion when it is time to feed the baby. Keep the jelly covered and on ice.

Meat. — One tablespoonful. Take meat, round or sirloin steak, scraped with a silver spoon. When you have the desired amount shape into a pat and broil on a hot, dry spider. When done add a little salt. Or a piece of rare round or sirloin steak, the outer part having been cut away, is scraped or shredded with a knife.

Spinach.—Cook spinach in salted water until tender. Pour cold water over it and drain. Then rub through a fine sieve.

Baked Apple.—Apple baked three-quarters of an hour; skin and core removed; two tablespoonfuls of pulp strained through a fine sieve.

Cereal (four preparations). — Cereal preparation three-quarters of a cupful cooked with one quart of water for three-quarters of an hour in a double boiler. Add enough water to keep moist.

Oatmeal.—Have a pint of water boiling in the top of the double boiler; add one-half teaspoonful of salt and drop in gradually one-half cupful of oatmeal flakes, stirring all the while. Cook for three hours and strain through a wire sieve. Pour on it one or two ounces of milk.

The following are some of the things a baby should not have: Candy, cakes, doughnuts, pastry, fresh bread, griddle cakes, sirup or molasses, pork or tough meat of any kind, bananas, overripe fruits, pickles, tea, coffee, soda water or beer nor tastes of foods from the family table.

MANY BREEDERS TO EXHIBIT LIVE STOCK.

Entries Should Be Made Early, Says State Fair Manager.

General Manager Dickinson of the State Fair announces that prospective live stock exhibitors should send in their entries at the earliest possible moment. Already scores of live stock breeders have announced their intention of bringing cattle, horses, swine and sheep to Detroit in September, and it is now expected that the live stock exhibit will be the largest in the history of the State Fair.

The live stock must be at the fair grounds by 8 a. m., Sept. 6, the opening day of the fair, but will be released Saturday, Sept. 11, at 6 p. m. The live stock is released four days before the close of the fair because many farmers object to exhibiting their prize horses, cows, sheep and swine for a longer period. The poultry also is released on the Saturday preceding the closing of the Fair.

WET?

In view of the long spell of rainy weather through July and up-to-date. We think maybe the following lines will help us to accept the situation and make the best of it.

A bit of philosophy from WET WEATHER TALK
By James Whitcomb Riley

It han't no use to grumble or complane;
It's jest as cheap and easy to rejoice.—
When God sorts out the weather and sends rain,
W'y, rain's my choice.

Men ginerly, to all intents—
Although their apt to grumble some—
Puts most theyr trust in Providence,
And takes things as they come.

In this existunce, dry and wet
Will overtake the best of men—
Some little skift o'clouds'll shet
The sun off now and then.—

And mayby, whilse you're wundern who You've fool-like lent your unbrell' to,
And want it—out'll pop the sun,
And you'll be glad you hain't got none!

RURAL CARRIER EXAMINATION

The United States Civil Service Commission has announced an examination for the County of Lenawee, Mich. to be held at Tecumseh, Adrian and Hudson, on August 28, 1915 to fill the position of rural carrier at Jasper and vacancies that may later occur on rural routes from other post offices in the above-mentioned county. The examination will be open only to male citizens who are actually domiciled in the territory of a post office in the county and who meet the other requirements set forth in Form No. 1977. This form and application blanks may be obtained from the offices mentioned above or from the United States Civil Service Commission at Washington, D. C. Applications should be forwarded to the Commission at Washington at the earliest practicable date.

The New York Constitutional Convention, Its Personnel.

A visitor to the State Capitol at Albany this midsummer, seeing the members' seats in the Assembly Chamber occupied, might easily be led to believe that the State Legislature was holding an extra session. Moreover, if he chanced to be at all acquainted with the personnel of recent legislatures, he would recognize among the men seated at the members' desks not a few familiar faces, —these chiefly of State Senators rather than of Assemblymen. The general impression that he is likely to receive is that the State's lawmakers are on their good behavior and for some reason are clothed with rather more than their usual dignity. As for the presiding officer, few indeed have been the Speakers in the Assembly or Lieutenant-Governors in the Senate with the personal bearing of an Elihu Root.

Barring these differences, the likeness of the Constitutional Convention to the State Legislature is by no means a fanciful one. Beyond question, the small group of leaders in the convention exceeds in brain force and weight of personal character the corresponding group in either branch of the legislature. The rank and file, however, are made up of nearly the same material both bodies. As there are "$1500 members" in every legislature, so there are $1500 delegates in this convention. At the same time there are delegates (and these are the men who are doing the actual work) who are making real sacrifices every day that they spend in Albany, and whose disinterested devotion to the public service is unquestioned even by the most cynical and over sophisticated Albany correspondent.—From "Revising New York's Constitution," by W. B. Shaw, in the American Review of Reviews for August.

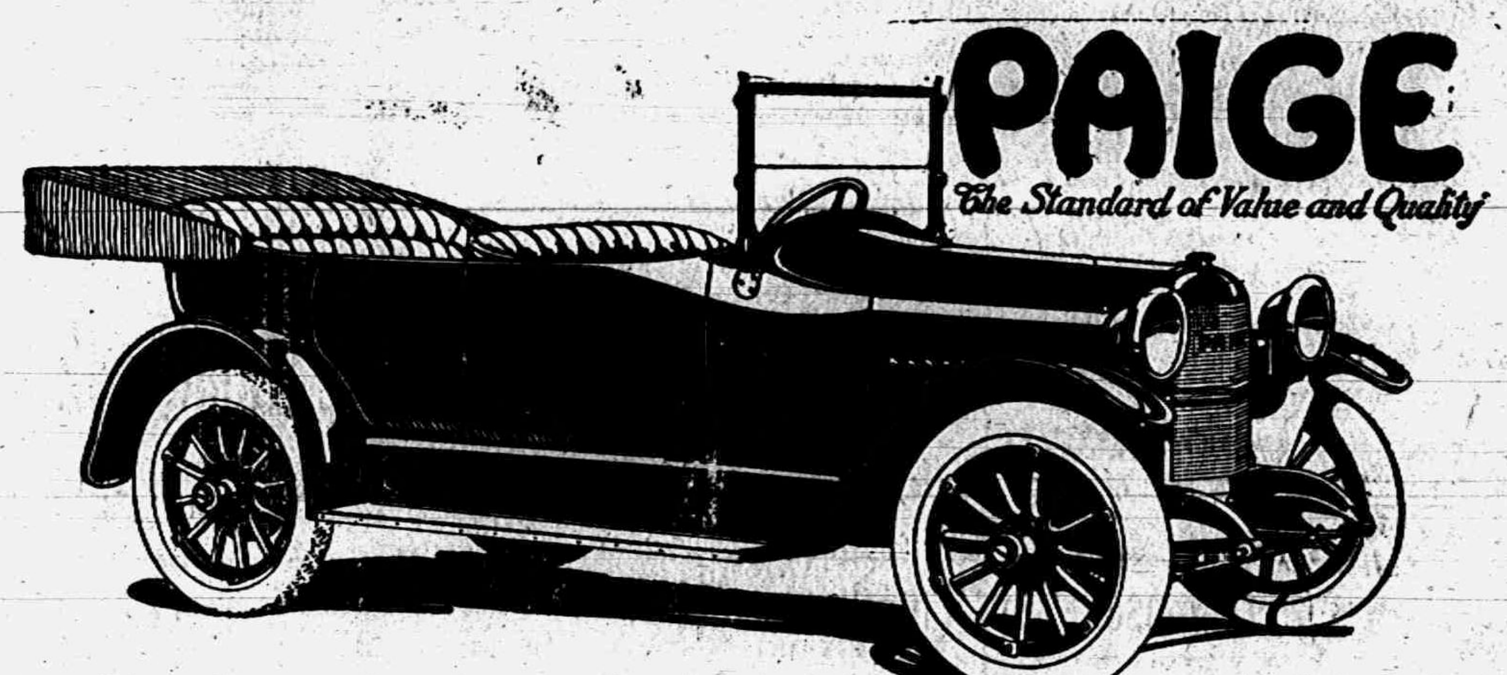
PAIGE
The Standard of Value and Quality



A NEW LIGHT SIX
Every Inch a PAIGE
$1095

Here you see the latest addition to a distinguished line of cars—a true Paige every inch of it—a car built to realize an ideal—a car that must not and cannot be judged from the standpoint of its astounding price alone.

When we say that this new Paige Six "36," has been built to realize an ideal we are speaking accurate, literal truth.

From the very beginning it has been the unfaltering purpose and policy of the Paige Company to build high class, dependable motor cars.

It has been the purpose and policy of the Paige Company to achieve a Standard of Quality and Value—not merely a standard of Price.

If you happen to know an owner of our larger, seven-passenger Six "46," you know precisely what we mean when we speak of Value and Quality.

All of the careful manufacturing, all of the painstaking attention to detail, all of the sturdy, reliable qualities which characterize the larger Six and have made it a pre-eminent Six of the year will be found in this newer and smaller five-passenger Paige Six "36."

The New Paige Six "36" Is Here

We realize that there are a vast number of people who do not require a large seven-passenger car.

But all of these people want a "Six," for they know that this is the day of the "Six" in quality cars.

Furthermore, they want a "roomy" car—a luxurious car—a "smart" car—an economical car.

In a word, there is an enormous demand for just such a car as the new Paige Six "36"

Glance at the illustration on this page and you will see that—from the radiator to tire carrier—this car is a five-passenger reproduction of the larger Six "46."

This body design has proved to be a sensation of the year No amount of money could buy more graceful lines or smarter appearance.

Inside the car you will find a great, big, comfortable tonneau and a broad driver's seat with upholstery of genuine leather which means ease and freedom from crowding for all of the five passengers.

Like the larger Six "46" you will find this car equipped with the world-famous Gray & Davis starting and lighting system.

Like the larger Six "46" you will find this car equipped with cantilever springs which insure easy, comfortable riding no matter what the road conditions may be—a velvety acting cork insert multiple disc clutch—forced feed lubrication system and the unequaled Rayfield carburetor.

When you raise the hood of this car, you will see an accessible, powerful six cylinder motor—3"x5"—which is a crowning achievement in motor construction.

We might attempt to tell you about the performance of this remarkable power plant, but we much prefer to have you ride in the car and establish the facts for yourself.

Then, you will realize what true six-cylinder Flexibility and Power really mean.

For the first time, perhaps, you will experience the indescribable sensation of riding in a car that is practically throttle controlled—a car that travels smoothly at a slow walking pace or the speed of the winds without change from high gear.

Low First Cost "Upkeep" Expense

Best of all, this is a car that any man can afford to drive. The Six "36" weighs but 2600 pounds and is equipped with oversize 4-inch tires. With this car you can enjoy true six-cylinder motor comfort without the penalty of excessive "upkeep" expense.

Space will not permit us to name even one-half the surprisingly good features embodied in the latest Paige.

But—accept our assurance—there is a tremendous surprise in store for you when you first inspect this car.

Then—and only then—you will appreciate what a truly great achievement it represents.

Then, we predict, your first query will be—"How is it possible to build such a car for $1095?"

The FORESTER'S DAUGHTER

A ROMANCE OF THE BEAR TOOTH RANGE

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1914, by Hamlin Garland

A moment later, as it seemed, something falling woke him with a start, and looking up, he found the sun shining and Berrie confronting him with an anxious face. "Did I waken you?" she asked. "I'm awfully sorry. I'm trying to be extra quiet. I dropped a pan. How do you feel this morning?"

He pondered this question a moment. "Is it tomorrow or the next week?"

She laughed happily. "It's only the next day."

He laid his hands together and then felt of his pulse. "I don't seem to have a temperature. I just feel lazy, limp and lazy, but I'm going to get up, if you'll just leave the room for a moment"—

"Don't try it now. Wait till you have had your breakfast. You'll feel stronger then."

At this point came again the disturbing realization that this night of struggle and the ministrations of his brave companion had involved him deeper in a mesh from which honorable escape was almost impossible. The ranger's cabin, so far from being an end of their compromising intimacy, had added and was still adding to the weight of evidence against them both. The presence of the ranger or the supervisor himself could not now save Berea from the gossips.

She brought his breakfast to him, and sat beside him while he ate, chatting the while of their good fortune. "It is glorious outside, and I am sure daddy will get across today, and Tony is certain to turn up before noon. He probably went down to Coal City to get his mail."

"I must get up at once," he said, in a panic of fear and shame. "The supervisor must not find me laid out on my back. Please leave me alone for a moment."

She went out, closing the door behind her, and as he crawled from his bed every muscle in his body seemed to cry out against being moved. Nevertheless he persisted and at last succeeded in putting on his clothes, even his shoes, though he found tying the laces the hardest task of all, and he was at the wash basin bathing his face and hands when Berrie hurriedly reentered. "Some tourists are coming," she announced in an excited tone. "A party of five or six people, a woman among them, is just coming down the slope. Now, who do you suppose it can be? It would be just our luck if it should turn out to be some one from the mill."

He divined at once the reason for her dismay. The visit of a woman at this moment would not merely embarrass them both, it would torture Berrie. "What is to be done?" he asked, roused to alertness.

"Nothing; all we can do is to stand pat and act as if we belonged here."

"Very well," he replied, moving stiffly toward the door. "Here's where I can be of some service. I am an excellent white liar."

The beat of hoofs upon the bridge drew his attention to the cavalcade, which the keen eyes of the girl had detected as it came over the ridge to the east. The party consisted of two men and two women and three pack horses completely outfitted for the trail.

One of the women, spurring her horse to the front, rode serenely up to where Wayland stood and called out: "Good morning! Are you the ranger?"

"No; I'm only the guard. The ranger has gone down the trail."

He perceived at once that the speaker was an alien like himself, for she wore tan colored riding boots, a divided skirt of expensive cloth and a jaunty, wide rimmed sombrero. She looked indeed precisely like the heroine of the prevalent western drama. Her sleeves, rolled to the elbow, disclosed shapely brown arms, and her neck, bare to her bosom, was equally sun smit, but she was so round cheeked, so childishly charming, that the most critical observer could find no fault with her makeup.

One of the men rode up. "Hello, Norcross. What are you doing over here?"

The youth smiled blandly. "Good morning, Mr. Belden. I'm serving my apprenticeship. I'm in the service now."

"The mischief you are!" exclaimed the other. "Where's Tony?"

"Gone for his mail. He'll return soon. What are you doing over here, may I ask?"

"I'm here as guide to Mr. Moore. Mr. Moore, this is Norcross, one of McFarlane's men. Mr. Moore is connected with the tie camp operations of the railway."

Moore was a tall, thin man with a gray beard and keen blue eyes. "Where's McFarlane? We were to meet him here. Didn't he come over with you?"

"We started together, but the horses got away, and he was obliged to go back after them. He also is likely to turn up soon."

"I am frightfully hungry," interrupted the girl. "Can't you hand me out a hunk of bread and meat? We've been riding since daylight."

Berrie suddenly appeared at the door. "Sure thing," she called out. "Slide down and come in."

Moore removed his hat and bowed. "Good morning, Miss McFarlane. I didn't know you were here. You know my daughter Siona?"

Berrie nodded coldly. "I've met her."

He indicated the other woman. "And Mrs. Belden, of course, you know."

Mrs. Belden, the fourth member of the party, a middle aged, rather flabby person, just being eased down from her horse, turned on Berrie with a battery of questions. "Good Lord! Berrie McFarlane, what are you doing over in this forsaken hole? Where's your dad? And where is Tony? If Cliff had known you was over here he'd have come too."

Berrie retained her self possession. "Come in and get some coffee, and we'll straighten things out."

Apparently Mrs. Belden did not know that Cliff and Berrie had quarreled, for she treated the girl with maternal familiarity. She was a good natured, well intentioned old sloven, but a most renowned tattler, and the girl feared her more than she feared any other woman in the valley. She had always avoided her, but she showed nothing of this dislike at the moment.

Wayland drew the younger woman's attention by saying, "It's plain that you, like myself, do not belong to these parts, Miss Moore."

"What makes you think so?" she brightly queried.

"Your costume is too appropriate. Haven't you noticed that the women who live out here carefully avoid convenient and artistic dress? Now, your outfit is precisely what they should wear and don't."

This amused her. "I know, but they all say they have to wear out their Sunday go to meeting clothes, whereas I can 'rig out proper.' I'm glad you like my 'rig.'"

At the moment he was bent on drawing the girl's attention from Berrie, but as she went on he came to like her. She said: "No, I don't belong here, but I come out every year during vacation with my father. I love this country. It's so big and wide and wild. Father has built a little bungalow down at the lower mill, and we enjoy every day of our stay."

"You're a Smith girl," he abruptly asserted.

"What makes you think so?"

"Oh, there's something about you Smith girls that gives you dead away."

"Gives us away? I like that!"

"My phrase was unfortunate. I like Smith girls," he hastened to say.

In five minutes they were on the friendliest terms—talking of mutual acquaintances—a fact which both puzzled and hurt Berea. Their laughter angered her, and whenever she glanced at them and detected Siona looking into Wayland's face with coquettish simper she was embittered. She was glad when Moore came in and interrupted the dialogue.

Norcross did not relax, though he considered the dangers of cross examination almost entirely passed. In this he was mistaken, for no sooner was the keen edge of Mrs. Belden's hunger dulled than her curiosity sharpened.

"Where did you say the supervisor was?" she repeated.

"The horses got away, and he had to go back after them," again responded Berrie, who found the scrutiny of the other girl deeply disconcerting.

"When do you expect him back?"

"Any minute now," she replied, and in this she was not deceiving them, although she did not intend to volunteer any information which might embarrass either Wayland or herself.

Norcross tried to create a diversion. "Isn't this a charming valley?"

Siona took up the cue. "Isn't it? It's romantic enough to be the backdrop in a Bret Harte play. I love it!"

Moore turned to Wayland. "I know a Norcross, a Michigan lumberman, vice president of the association. Is he by any chance a relative?"

"Only a father," retorted Wayland, with a smile. "But don't hold me responsible for anything he has done. We seldom agree."

Moore's manner changed abruptly. "Indeed! And what is the son of W. W. Norcross doing out here in the forest service?"

The change in her father's tone was not lost upon Siona, who ceased her banter and studied the young man with deeper interest, while Mrs. Belden, detecting some restraint in Berrie's tone, renewed her questioning. "Where did you camp last night?"

"Right here."

Berrie was aware that each moment of delay in explaining the situation looked like evasion and deepened the significance of her predicament, and yet she could not bring herself to the task of minutely accounting for her time during the last two days.

Belden came to her relief. "Well, well, we'll have to be moving on. We're going into camp at the mouth of the west fork," he said as he rose. "Tell Tony and the supervisor that we want to line out that timber at the earliest possible moment."

Siona, who was now distinctly coquetting with Wayland, held out her hand. "I hope you'll find time to come up and see us. I know we have other mutual friends if we had time to get at them."

His answer was humorous. "I am a soldier. I am on duty. I'm not at all sure that I shall have a moment's leave, but I will call if I can possibly do so."

They started off at last without having learned in detail anything of the intimate relationship into which the supervisor's daughter and young Norcross had been thrown, and Mrs. Belden was still so much in the dark that she called to Berrie: "I'm going to send word to Cliff that you are over here. He'll be crazy to come the minute he finds it out."

"Don't do that!" protested Berrie.

Wayland turned to Berrie. "That would be pleasant," he said smilingly.

But she did not return his smile. On the contrary, she remained very grave. "I wish that old talebearer had kept away. She's going to make trouble for us all. And that girl, isn't she a spectacle? I never could bear her."

"Why, what's wrong with her? She seems a very nice, sprightly person."

"She's a regular play actor. I don't like madeup people. Why does she go around with her sleeves rolled up that way and—and her dress open at the throat?"

"Oh, those are the affectations of the moment. She wants to look tough and boisterous. That's the fad with all the girls just now. It's only a harmless piece of foolishness."

She could not tell him how deeply she resented his ready tone of camaraderie with the other girl, but she was secretly suffering. It hurt her to think that he could forget his aches and be so free and easy with a stranger at a moment's notice. Under the influence of that girl's smile he seemed to have quite forgotten his exhaustion and his pain. It was wonderful how cheerful he had been while she was in sight.

In all this Berrie did him an injustice. He had been keenly conscious, during every moment of the time, not only of his bodily ills, but of Berrie, and he had kept a brave face in order that he might prevent further questioning on the part of a malicious girl. It was his only way of being heroic. Now that the crisis was passed he was quite as much of a wreck as ever.

CHAPTER X.

Further Perplexities.

PERCEIVING Wayland's returning weakness, Berea insisted on his lying down again while she set to work preparing dinner. "There is no telling when father will get here," she said. "And Tony will be hungry when he comes. Lie down and rest."

He obeyed her silently and, going to the bunk, at once fell asleep. How long he slept he could not tell, but he was awakened by the voice of the ranger, who was standing in the doorway and regarding Berrie with a round eyed stare.

He was a tall, awkward fellow of about thirty-five, plainly of the frontier type, but a man of intelligence. At the end of a brief explanation Berrie said, with an air of authority: "Now you'd better ride up the trail and bring our camp outfit down. We can't go back that way anyhow."

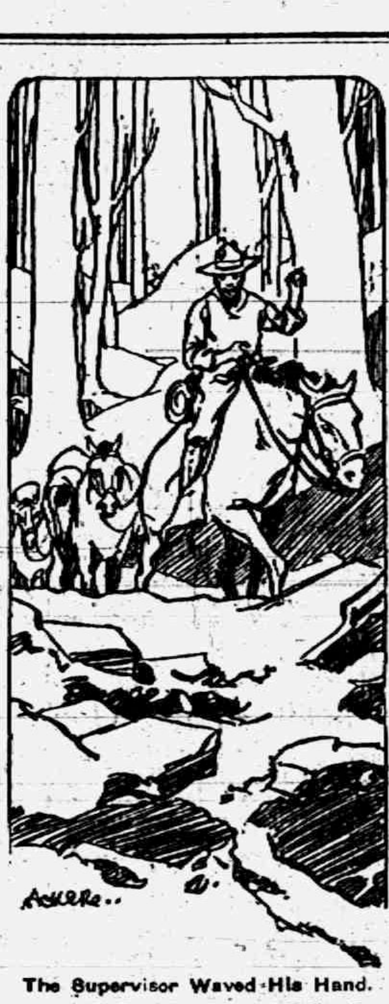
Wayland rose painfully, but resolutely. "Oh, no, I am not sick. I'm a little lame, that's all. I'll go along with you."

"No," said Berrie decisively. "You're not well enough for that. Get up your horses, Tony, and by that time I'll have some dinner ready."

"All right, Miss Berrie," replied the man and turned away.

Hardly had he crossed the bridge on his way to the pasture when Berrie cried out, "There comes daddy."

Wayland joined her at the door and stood beside her watching the supervisor as he came zigzagging down the steep hill to the east with all his horses trailing behind him roped together head to tail.



The Supervisor Waved His Hand.

"He's had to come round by Lost lake," she exclaimed. "He'll be tired out and absolutely starved. Wahoo!" she shouted in greeting, and the supervisor waved his hand.

There was something superb in the calm seat of the veteran as he slid down the slope. He kept his place in the saddle with the air of the rider to whom hunger, fatigue, windfalls and snowslides were all a part of the day's work, and when he reined in before the door and dropped from his horse he put his arm about his daughter's neck with quiet word: "I thought I'd find you here. How is everything?"

"All right, daddy. But what about you? Where have you been?"

"Clean back to Mill park. The blamed cayuses kept just ahead of me all the way."

"Poor old dad! And on top of that came the snow."

"Yes, and a whole hatful. I couldn't get back over the high pass. Had to go round by Lost lake, and, to cap all Old Baldy took a notion not to lead. Oh, I've had a peach of a time, but here I am. Have you seen Moore and his party?"

"Yes, they're in camp up the trail. He and Alec Belden and two women. Are you hungry?"

He turned a comical glance upon her. "Am I hungry? Sister, I am a wolf. Norcross, take my horses down to the pasture."

Reconciliations.

You know there are many things always mentioned together, such as "Jack and Gill," "The Lion and the Lamb," "Stars and Stripes," and so on. A pleasant little game has been based on this and plays itself quite comfortably in a quarter of an hour. Assuming that twenty guests are expected to be present, the hostess prepares twenty sheets of paper, on which the first half of such couplings are written, the guests being required to complete them and so effect a reconciliation.

The following list of twenty will illustrate the game, the last part of each sentence appearing only on the key, which the hostess will keep until the competition is closed to correct papers. A prize may be given the one having the most correct sentences:

1. Early to bed and	early to rise.
2. Beauty and	the beast.
3. Man and	wife.
4. The lion and	the unicorn.
5. Oxford and	Cambridge.
6. Darby and	Joan.
7. Roast pork and	apple sauce.
8. Go farther and	fare worse.
9. Hook and	eye.
10. Jack and	the beanstalk.
11. Antony and	Cleopatra.
12. Bruce and	the spider.
13. David and	Jonathan.
14. The horse and	his rider.

NOT A MATRIMONIAL BUREAU

Housewives' League of New York City Obliged to Announce Neutrality.

Well trained wives who can cook and keep house and who know more about sanitary conditions than "mother" ever dreamed of knowing are among the supplies that are being demanded of the National Housewives' league at its headquarters in West Forty-fifth street, New York city.

Two men called at the headquarters of the league within the last two weeks, and each of them wanted a wife. One of them was a widower with several children and no one to look out for them, and the other was one of the lonely young men of New York. He had no friends in the city, few acquaintances, and he felt that if he could only get a nice wife with domestic tastes, one who could manage the income of a rising young man, he would be happy.

Where can any one go to find a good, sensible wife if not to a place like the league? That was what the young man thought. New York has all the modern conveniences and more than enough modern amusements, but where can one go to find a heart and helpmeet? he asked.

That is what a good many young men—and young women, too—who make their homes in New York are asking, and the league would like to help them out, but that is where it has to draw the line. No matrimonial aspirants need apply, though the league appreciates their need.

"That men thinking of marrying should come to a place like the Housewives' league," said Mrs. Julian Heath, president of the league, "emphasizes the fact that one of the greatest needs of the present time is efficiency in the housewife. Women should be trained to spend the income of the family as the men are trained to produce it. Men are looking for real partners in the business of home making. Hitherto it has been a question of the husband supporting the wife and of the wife being supported. The majority of women are willing to do their share in maintaining, but they are not properly trained. This makes young men with moderate incomes hesitate before they even think of marriage.

"When the league started three years ago we were asked if we would do anything about the servant problem, and we said no. We intended to first train the mistress. Now we have come to the place where the mistress is on the way to obtain proper training, and we are extending our work, but not on the basis of 'mistress and maid,' but of 'employer and employee.' Statistics speak of the 'employment problem' and the 'domestic problem' as two separate and different subjects.

"When they are considered as one and the same thing then people will begin to think of hours and wages. I have very little use for the woman who goes to Albany to advocate the eight hour law for men and then comes home and works her own maid twenty-four hours a day."

Dolly Varden Fashions.

Dolly Varden styles, which have not been seen for many seasons, appear with these styles of former days and are considered as attractive as they ever were. In silks they are particularly charming and are becoming very popular. The reason given for the return of these old fashioned styles is the increased use of American made goods.

Obeying Orders.

"'See America first!'" didactically quoted the professor.

"I have already done so," replied J. Fuller Gloom. "I was born here."—Judge.

A Reproach.

"So Miss Banger played for you? She claims that she can make the piano speak."

"Well, I'll bet if it spoke it would say, 'Woman, you have played me false.'"—New York Press.

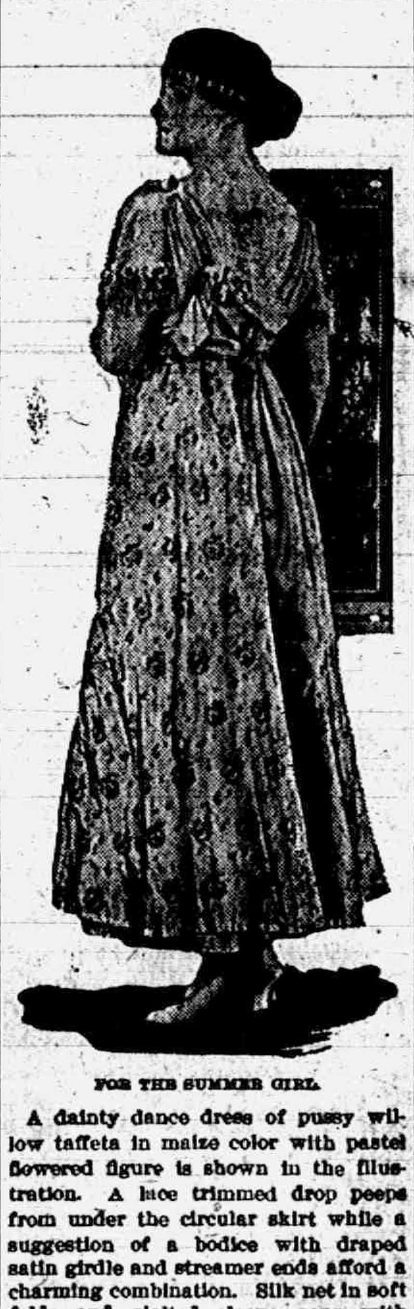
Timely Discipline.

"Did the fellow who set himself on fire smoking in the theater get badly burned?"

"No; smoking is forbidden there, so they immediately put him out."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

DAINTY DANCE DRESS.

Maize Colored, Flowered With Pastel Figure and Lace Trimmed.

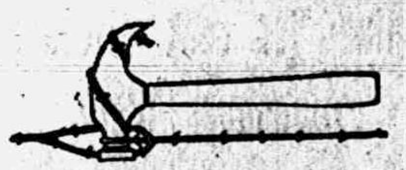


FOR THE SUMMER GIRL.

A dainty dance dress of pussy willow taffeta in maize color with pastel flowered figure is shown in the illustration. A lace trimmed drop peeps from under the circular skirt while a suggestion of a bodice with draped satin girdle and streamer ends afford a charming combination. Silk net in soft folds and plaited sleeve caps with dainty flowers supply all that is necessary to the bodice.

One More Use For the Hammer.

A hammer is a convenient tool for drawing two wires together. Make a loop on the end of one wire. Run the end of the other wire through the loop over the hammer head, and catch the end with the claw of the hammer. Use the hammer handle as a lever, turning in a clockwise direction. The second wire will draw through the loop and wind on the head of the hammer. When the wire is tight enough lift up on the hammer handle and make a loop in the wire.



Hen Manure Mixture.

Many persons propose to mix ashes with hen manure, but no material containing lime in the form in which it is contained in ashes should be mixed with moist manure, as the lime will cause the liberation of a considerable part of the nitrogen in the manure, and it will escape as ammonia gas. Ashes and dry hen manure may be mixed immediately before applying the manure, as the ammonia will mostly be absorbed and held by the soil.

The proper material to mix with manure is acid phosphate, as this serves to fix the ammonia, instead of liberating it, and also re-enforces the manure with phosphorus, which is the element most needed by most soils.

Hints For Housewives

Look For Dishonest Measures.

The north plaza of the city hall, New York, which was stacked high with all kinds of weights, must surely have caved in were it not for one thing. The weights were false. They were not as heavy as they looked. They were not honest weights.

That is the reason they were there, for it was weights and measures week, and Commissioner Joseph Hartigan of the mayor's bureau of weights and measures had placed all the dishonest baskets and pails and scoops and balances and other weighing paraphernalia which his inspectors had confiscated in public view that passersby might see and become wise.

One of the prize fakes was a five gallon oil can, so constructed that it contained but one quart of oil. It was said that the engineer who designed this can did not mean to be dishonest. He had a grudge against John D. Rockefeller and figured that he would not let any one use his oil, like the Irishman who bought a ticket and then walked, to get square with the railroad.

Another infernal machine was a large ice scale which gave only thirty-five pounds when it registered 100. When the iceman was arrested he said the ice had melted on the way up the dumbwaiter.

On one side of the exhibit was a pile of baskets, such as are used to mismeasure fruit and vegetables, while on the other a large stack of short weight paper containers gave mute evidence of the fortunes to be made in the ice cream business. A prominent confectioner accused of possessing these containers asserted that he only used them when selling ice cream and water ices to young ladies, as he could not bear to see them injure their complexions.

An interesting balance was one with a wire attached, connected through a hole in the counter with two weights weighing eighteen ounces below. By this device an ostensible five pounds of coffee became in reality only three pounds fourteen ounces.

While this exhibition was exposed to the elements, safely housed on the third floor of the Municipal building, in Commissioner Hartigan's office, was a display of correct and proper scales and measures of all sorts. At this office the commissioner is busy organizing what is known as the Consumers' league. Already 61,000 women have joined this organization, and by the end of three months the bureau expects the enrollment will be more than 200,000. This league, composed of housewives, will spread the propaganda of honest weights and measures by insisting on them when making their purchases.

Japanese Children.

Children have a good time in Japan. They are blessed by inheritance with a cheerful nature; they are dressed loosely, yet warmly; they are out of doors as much as possible, and inside their homes there is so little furniture they never stumble over it and are never warned against crawling up on the satin brocaded chairs or handling the bric-a-brac. The houses are always open to sun and air, even in cold weather. They are built dovetailed together, no nails being used, and are mounted on wooden pillars, so that when an earthquake occurs they will not tumble down, but merely shake and settle down again.

Steadfast Well Doing.

The great high road of human welfare lies along the old highway of steadfast well doing, and they who are the most persistent and work in the truest spirit will invariably be the most successful.—Samuel Smiles.

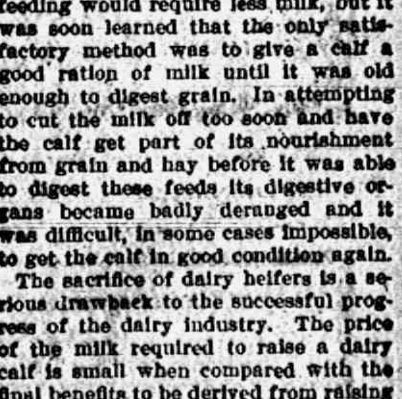
RAISING CALVES ON A MINIMUM OF MILK

[By Professor Wilber S. Fraser, University of Illinois.]

On many farms where the problem of raising calves on a small amount of milk arises the whole milk is sold, consequently no skimmilk is available. Because of this we tried a number of calves on whole milk only, feeding ten pounds per day until they were twenty-eight days old. From this time on the whole milk was gradually reduced and its place taken with warm water until the calf was fifty days old, when no more milk was fed. This made a total of 400 pounds of whole milk. Calves cut entirely off of milk at seven weeks of age have a difficult time in getting properly started on grain and hay. Those fed fifty pounds more milk, extending the time over ten days, thus feeding some diluted milk until the calf is sixty days old, or until it has consumed 450 pounds of whole milk, will do much better, in fact this is the least whole milk that that can be recommended for the successful raising of a dairy calf.

The first calves that we attempted to raise on a minimum amount of milk were given a small amount almost from the start, thinking that this manner of feeding would require less milk, but it was soon learned that the only satisfactory method was to give a calf a good ration of milk until it was old enough to digest grain. In attempting to cut the milk off too soon and have the calf get part of its nourishment from grain and hay before it was able to digest these feeds its digestive organs became badly deranged and it was difficult, in some cases impossible, to get the calf in good condition again.

The sacrifice of dairy heifers is a serious drawback to the successful progress of the dairy industry. The price of the milk required to raise a dairy calf is small when compared with the final benefits to be derived from raising the heifer calves from good producing cows.



No one would claim for the Holsteins that their milk excels in richness; but, on the other hand, no one can deny that, as a breed, they have no equals in the production of large amounts of milk of medium grade, so far as butter fat is concerned. It is by virtue of this ability to produce a great quantity of milk in a given time that the Holsteins have acquired all records, even that of butter production. The cow pictured is a Holstein noted for high milk production.

EGG CONTEST IDEA SPREADING.

It is surprising to see the rapidly growing interest in egg laying contests. Countless new ones of minor scope have sprung up all over the country in the last few months. Managers of international contests are already increasing facilities and booking entries for next year's competitions.

The boarder cow is slowly but surely being eliminated through the assistance of cow testing associations, but the enthusiasm of poultrymen to get rid of the boarder hen has made progress more rapidly. Whether cows, hens, crops or fences, the "unpaying guest" must go. And wide awake poultrymen have learned that egg laying contests help them to pick out the unprofitable hens.—American Agriculturist.

Fertilizer

It is a known fact that we have got to feed our soils the same as we do our animals in order for anything to thrive and produce the best results.

QUESTIONS

No. 1 Which kind is the best to buy?
You all know you want middlings to grow young pigs and corn to fat same.

No. 2 Who knows how much Nitrogen, Phosphoric Acid and Potash it takes to produce forty or fifty bushel of wheat pre acre?

No. 3 Who knows what proportion should they be applied to the soil.

ANSWERS

No. 1 Swift's Special Disolved Animal Bone Meal. If you will look in the State of Ohio's report you will notice they are the only company that manufactures such a brand. This particular brand of fertilizer is a balance ration for about 95 per cent. of our soils in this section and 75 per cent. of it is water solution.

No. 2 & 3 Call at our store for these answers.

It will cost you to begin with $32.00 a ton. Have cheaper brands if price is what you are looking for.

TO PREVENT FLIES BREEDING

New and Safe Method of Destroying the Larvae Discovered.

[Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

A safe and effective weapon against the typhoid or housefly has been found in powdered hellebore by scientists of the department of agriculture. Flies lay their eggs chiefly in stable manure. Powdered hellebore mixed with water and sprinkled over the manure will destroy the larvae which are hatched from the eggs. Since powdered hellebore is readily obtainable this puts in the hands of everyone a remedy for one of the pests that has been found dangerous as well as troublesome. Powdered hellebore, however, will not kill adult flies, which must be swatted or trapped.

It has long been known that flies breed in manure, but previous methods of destroying the larvae there by the use of strong chemicals have been open to the objection that the treatment under some conditions lessened the fertilizing value of the manure or actually injured vegetation. This is not true of powdered hellebore. Government experiments have shown that the hellebore is entirely decomposed in the course of the fermentation of the manure and that even in excessive quantities it does no harm except to the larvae it is intended to destroy. Chickens picking in manure treated with it suffer no ill effects.

One-half pound of powdered hellebore mixed with ten gallons of water is sufficient to kill the larvae in eight bushels or ten cubic feet of manure. The mixture should be sprinkled carefully over the pile, especial attention being paid to the outer edges. In most places hellebore is obtainable in 100 pound lots at a cost of 11 cents a pound. This makes the cost of the treatment a little less than seven-tenths of a cent per bushel of manure. A liberal estimate of the output of manure is two bushels a day per horse. The money involved is therefore trifling in comparison with the benefits to the individual and the community from the practical elimination of the disease spreading fly.

Although fresh manure is the favorite breeding spot, flies lay their eggs in other places as well, such as outhouses, refuse piles, etc. In these places, from which no manure is taken to spread on the fields, considerable saving may be effected through the substitution of borax for powdered hellebore. Applied at the rate of 0.62 pounds per 8 bushels of manure borax is as effective as powdered hellebore in killing the larvae, but costs less than half a cent for each bushel of manure treated. In larger quantities, however, or when the manure itself is spread at a greater rate than 15 tons to the acre, some damage to crops may result. Large quantities of manure are often used by market gardeners and others, and there is always danger of carelessness in applying the borax. The use of the more expensive but safer hellebore is therefore recommended for the treatment of manure. Borax is recommended for all other refuse in which flies may lay eggs.

Scientists who have been working for years to eliminate the fly are convinced that the use of one or the other of these simple measures is a public duty wherever manure and refuse exist. Sanitarians, however, strongly advise the removal of refuse heaps or other unnecessary rubbish or breeding places for flies. In breeding places which cannot be thus disposed of, such as manure or stables, the daily use of powdered hellebore will keep the flies from breeding in these favorite breeding grounds. The best results are obtainable in a community where every one cleans up his premises, traps or kills the flies and systematically treats the manure and other breeding places with powdered hellebore.

The fly is not only a nuisance to human beings and live stock, but spreads disease and filth and is a menace to public health which cannot be tolerated in the face of a demonstrated remedy.

SCHOOLS AS SOCIAL CENTERS

The Buildings Are Being More Generally Used by the Public.

Public schools are more and more being thrown open for more general use by the public than the mere instruction of children. In many cities they are becoming social centers and especially places where free public lectures are held. This movement has been a very extensive one in New York city and is spreading to other communities. Philadelphia has thrown open its free schools for public use, but according to the board of education, which recently issued a statement through its president, Henry R. Edmunds, this fact is not fully appreciated in the Quaker City. Some criticism having arisen over the use for these purposes of the William Penn high school, Mr. Edmunds sent out the following statement:

"The board of education not only has no objection to the use of public school auditoriums as social centers, but actually encourages a more general use of these halls."

The infrequency with which the school buildings are used in the evenings in Philadelphia is due, not to the attitude of the authorities, but to the lack of interest manifested by the public, according to Mr. Edmunds. He added:

"There is assuredly no reason why such an auditorium as the one in the William Penn High School For Girls should not be open to any respectable organization that applies to the board of education for its use. The only cost would be a fee of about $2 for the janitor's services. Of course the public school buildings are closed to sectarian or political meetings, and I believe everybody agrees that they should be, but to their use for neighborhood gatherings, free lectures and entertainments there never has been any objection. If the halls are not often used for purposes other than formal education it is certainly no fault of the board of education."

Not only public school auditoriums but the halls in Carnegie libraries are available, at virtually no expense, for public gatherings, Mr. Edmunds pointed out, and for the use of the latter, too, he said, there seldom were any applicants.

Mr. Edmunds' view was in agreement with that of William T. Tilden, chairman of the board of education's committee on property, who has taken a leading part in the movement toward bringing the home and school into closer relationship. "So far as it is feasible all public property should give the greatest possible benefit to the public," he said.

A Municipal Aid.

The City Parks association of Philadelphia has for many years performed a most useful function for that city. It has managed to combine and concentrate the efforts of a large number of civic organizations upon a certain definite line of endeavor. This was originally, as its name indicates, the creation of a comprehensive park system—the enlargement of existing breathing spaces, the creation of new ones and the linking of all into a well ordered system. While this great work is still in the making, the association has expanded its functions, and it has done yeoman service in keeping alive high ideals of city planning, teaching the people of Philadelphia the importance of the larger vision in dealing with problems of urban beautification and pointing out far ahead of their actual realization the great works which must be carried through if Philadelphia is to continue to be a city of homes, alive to the progress of the times, a beautiful as well as a comfortable place to live and work in.

A COMMON ERROR IN FEEDING POULTRY

One of the greatest errors made by American farmers is the overuse of feed of carbohydrate value, writes J. K. Morrison in the Country Gentleman. In order that the hen may economically use feed she must be given the proper amount of protein for the upkeep of her body, with a surplus for the making of eggs. As a rule, corn is the prevailing ration for fowls on the farm.

Carbohydrates may be bought more cheaply in corn than in any other [illegible]. Protein may be purchased more cheaply in cottonseed meal than in any other feed product.

F. C. Hare of the South Carolina station in a pamphlet on winter egg production in that state recommends this ration:

Cottonseed meal, 100 pounds; cornmeal, fifty pounds; ground oats, fifty pounds; wheat bran, fifty pounds; shorts, fifty pounds; ground lime rock, sixteen pounds; ground charcoal, twelve pounds; salt, two pounds.

The carbohydrate feeding value of cottonseed meal and beef scrap is almost the same, and unadulterated cottonseed meal contains within 4 per cent as much protein as beef scrap. Scrap costs about twice as much as meal. Cottonseed meal contains about three times as much protein as does bran, and protein purchased in bran costs about three and a half times as much as the protein that is purchased in cottonseed meal.

The Rose Comb White Leghorn is preferred to the single comb variety in sections where severe cold is common in winter. Its large, thick rose comb is not so easily affected by frost as are the single combs, therefore the possibility of a more uniform production of eggs in winter from the rose combs is assured. In every other way the rose comb is like its single comb sister in size, shape, color and ability to produce an abundance of eggs. The hen shown is a Rose Comb White Leghorn.

In our work with cottonseed meal in Missouri we have found that when the chief source of protein is cottonseed meal and there is no variety the pens that have beef scrap eat more of the feed and give better results. When a variety of feed is given and some bone meal is added there is not much difference in egg production or in the amount of mash that is consumed by the hens.

In one month a pen of hens at the Missouri station ate as much of the cottonseed meal ration as they did of the beef scrap ration, with the same nutritive value. A pint of grain was given each day to ten hens. A pen fed on mash containing wheat bran ate as much mash as they did grain. A cottonseed meal fed pen laid 115 eggs, a beef scrap pen laid 110.

At the Mississippi station in a pen fed a mash composed of sixty-seven pounds of cottonseed meal and twenty-three pounds of cornmeal, five hens laid 209 eggs in September, October, November and December. The check pen laid 184 eggs.

HIGHWAY POSTER NUISANCE.

An act in relation to the unlawful affixing of advertisements on trees and fences along public highways, drafted by the National Highways Protective society, has recently been passed in Rhode Island and signed by the governor. A similar bill has been passed by the legislature of New York state, receiving Governor Whitman's signature.

After Sept. 1 next it will be unlawful in these states for any person to print, or cause to be posted any business or commercial advertisement on trees, fences, buildings or other objects along any public highway or upon the property of another without written consent of the owner. The new law makes violation of its provisions punishable by a fine of from $5 to $25, or by imprisonment for ten days, or both.

FARM CO-OPERATION.

In Ohio in some of the wide awake counties farmers have united to retain, by law, officers whose business it is to spray all orchards every spring. This is wholly preventive. They spray when the trees are driest, and they never spray on a sunny, hot day with a liquid spray since it burns the plant to do so. This officer knows how and when to spray and which sprays are effective for each kind of insect. For instance, poisons which are effective for one sort of pest do not hurt stinging or boring or sucking insects. In this way a competent or expert man earns his salary and the farmer need not trouble his head with these details.

THE HESSIAN FLY.

Do Not Burn Wheat Stubble or Straw to Destroy It.

[Prepared by Kansas State Agricultural college.]

Don't burn your wheat stubble or straw stacks this summer for the purpose of destroying the Hessian fly. The burning of the stubble or wheat straw in the stacks not only fails to destroy the fly, but will lead to the destruction of organic matter and plant food.

The Hessian fly would not be eradicated by burning because the fly passes its resting stage in the summer not only in the straw and stubble above ground, but also in the crown of the plant, so low that it could not be destroyed by burning. The parasite which preys upon the Hessian fly passes the summer in the fly located in the straw and the stubble above the ground. If the wheatfields are burned the parasite preying on the fly will be killed.

There is no danger of increasing the injury from the Hessian fly by spreading straw as a top dressing upon the field. The top dressing of straw upon the field does not furnish winter protection to the fly. Wheat which has been infested with the jointworm and the greater wheat strawworm in large numbers should not be spread on the field. These insects make their presence known by the large number of white heads in the field. If there was a large number of white heads of wheat in your field do not spread straw on the field. This infested straw, however, may be used as a top dressing on corn ground if the straw be worked into the ground early in the spring.

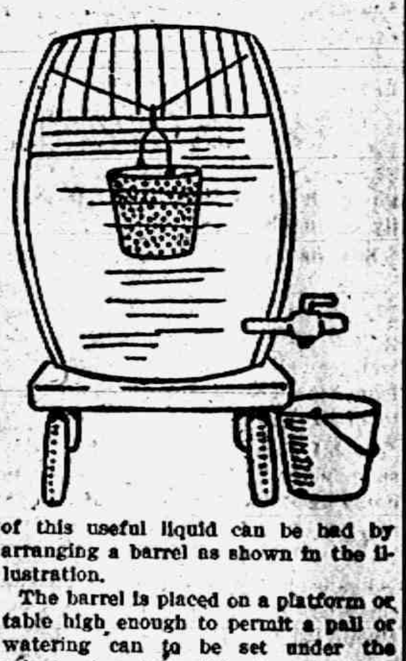
The best method of controlling the Hessian fly is to prevent the growth of volunteer wheat in summer and fall and to delay the seeding of the wheat until most of the flies have deposited their eggs. The best method of handling wheat ground is to disk the stubble as quickly as possible after harvest and to plow the ground deep after the volunteer wheat starts.

Liquid Manure.

Liquid manure is a stimulant and not a substitute for manure of a more solid character. It is taken up by straw or other bedding material.

Solid manure on heavy soils should be applied liberally in the autumn and turned under. Liquid manure is beneficial when applied while the plants are making growth or in early stages of flowering or fruiting. Flowering plants receive the greatest benefit from liquid manure before the buds show color, vegetables when about half grown, foliage plants when new growth has become well advanced and fruit trees when the fruit is half developed. Plants that are to receive treatment with liquid manure should first receive an application of pure water.

Liquid manure is prepared from the excrement of horses, cows, sheep, pigeons or chickens or from commercial fertilizers. The first two are generally used. For use in the garden a supply of this useful liquid can be had by arranging a barrel as shown in the illustration.



The barrel is placed on a platform or table high enough to permit a pail or watering can to be set under the spigot. A metal pail is pierced on the side and bottom, and the fertilizer placed in the pail, which is suspended in the barrel with rope or wire, and the barrel is then filled with water. A bag can be used in place of the pail and will permit of stirring somewhat by turning the bag and raising and lowering it until the water has extracted the fertilizer material, when it will be ready for use, first diluting the liquid with water until it is of the color of weak tea. Chicken and pigeon manure is very strong, and only a peck should be used to thirty-two gallons of water.

Always apply liquid manure directly to the roots of the plants, being careful not to wet the foliage or flowers. Pot plants should not be treated oftener than once a week

BUFFALO'S NEW CITY CHARTER

Commission Form of Government Fully Explained.

THE MAYOR HOLDS OVER.

Legislative Act Calls the Commission "the Council of the City of Buffalo." No Provision in the New Charter For the Initiative and the Recall.

By HAROLD J. BALLIETT, Former City Clerk of Buffalo.

Buffalo on Jan. 1, 1916, is to be governed by a commission of five men. Four commissioners are to be elected at the regular election next November. Mayor Louis P. Fuhrmann, the present chief executive of the city, holds over for two years and becomes mayor and head of the new commission. This makes the five members provided for under the law.

The act passed by the legislature calls the commission "the council of the city of Buffalo." It says the council shall consist of the mayor and four councilmen, whose terms of office shall be four years save that of the four councilmen first elected. The one receiving the least number of votes shall hold office for two years and the other three for four years. The salary of the mayor is to be $8,000 a year, and the salary of each of the councilmen will be $7,000 per year.

© by Pohle.

MAYOR LOUIS P. FUHRMANN OF BUFFALO

Three members of the council, according to the legislative act, constitute a quorum, and the affirmative vote of three members shall be necessary to adopt any motion, resolution or ordinance or to pass any measure unless a greater number is required by the provisions of the act.

Meetings of the council shall be public. Stated meetings shall be held at such times as the council shall prescribe by ordinance. Upon every vote of the council the ayes and noes shall be called and recorded. The mayor shall preside at the meetings. He shall have no power of veto. In his absence the council may choose a temporary chairman. Every resolution or ordinance passed by the council must be signed by the mayor or by two councilmen and must be properly recorded before it shall be of force. The council is vested with power to enact ordinances. All ordinances are to be published in the official paper daily for one week. The council shall appoint and may at pleasure remove a city clerk and fix the salary to be paid him. The city clerk may be also the secretary of the council.

The executive and administrative powers of the city are vested in the council, excepting the city court, the children's court and the civil service, railroad terminal and grade crossing commissions. The council's powers may at the council's discretion be exercised through the five following city departments: Department of public safety, department of finance and accounts, department of public affairs, department of public works and department of parks and buildings.

The mayor shall be the superintendent of the department of public safety, which shall include the subordinate departments of police, fire and health. It shall be the duty of the mayor to acquaint himself with the conduct of each of the other city departments and from time to time report thereon to the council.

The council shall, at its first regular meeting after election of its members, designate a councilman to head each department. Such designations may continue through the terms of office of such councilmen, but shall be changed whenever it appears to the council that the public service will be benefited thereby.

The council shall, at its first meeting or as soon as practicable thereafter on the nomination of the mayor, appoint the following officers: A corporation counsel, superintendent of education, assessor, or assessors, street commissioner, water commissioner, building commissioner, health commissioner, chief of fire department, chief of police, superintendent of markets, superintendent of poor, members of the board of education, city engineer, city treasurer and city auditor, and shall also appoint such other officers and deputies on the nomination of the councilman at the head of the department affected as shall be provided for by ordinance and in the judgment of the council necessary to the proper and efficient conduct of the affairs of the city.

Any officer or employee appointed by the council may by it be removed from office, except as provided by law, and his successor appointed by it at any time.

The council shall appoint the municipal civil service commissioners. They shall hold office for a term of four years unless removed by the council upon charges and after a hearing.

Any citizen can become a candidate for a nomination for councilman by circulating a petition and securing the signatures of 800 qualified voters. Voters can sign as many petitions as there are offices to be filled. For instance four councilmen are to be elected next fall. Any voter, if he desires, can sign the petitions of four candidates.

On the third Tuesday before the general election the primary election shall be held. The polls will be open from 6 a. m. to 9 p. m. Candidates will not run under any party emblem, but be designated by name only. The eight men receiving the largest number of votes each will be declared the nominees. At the general election the four men receiving the highest number of votes each will be the commissioners.

There is no provision in the new charter for the initiative and the recall. The referendum is provided for in a special section. The referendum, or special election, may be had upon any ordinance or franchise passed by the council with which the people are dissatisfied. If within thirty days after its passage a petition signed by at least [illegible] of the voters who voted for mayor at the last preceding election, is filed with the council, the election must be called within twenty days. An ordinance voted upon shall not go into effect unless a majority of the voters vote against its repeal.

No franchise or permission to occupy or use any of the streets, highways, bridges or public places of the city by a person, firm, corporation or association for the purpose of installing or extending a system of waterworks, gas, electric light or power, heating, telegraph, telephone, railway (whether street, surface, overhead or underground) or any public service utility that requires the occupation of any such highway or other public place, shall be valid until it has been granted by the council, and has been thereafter approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon at a general election, or at a special election to be ordered by the council. The cost of any such special election shall be borne by the person, firm, corporation or association seeking the franchise.

Woman's World

Queen of Montenegro Most Successful Mother-in-law in Europe.

QUEEN MILENA.

Queen Milena of Montenegro, though somewhat overshadowed by the aggressive personality of King Nicholas, enjoys a unique distinction, that of being mother-in-law to more royalty than any other woman in Europe.

"Sire, I have noticed that Montenegro has no exports," once remarked a distinguished foreign traveler to King Nicholas.

"Monsieur, you forget my daughters," wittily retorted the reigning monarch.

The retort was justified, for queer little Montenegro has supplied two monarchs and three other important royal personages with wives. One Montenegrin princess is the present queen of Italy, and another now would be queen of Servia but for her premature death, while three other daughters of Prince Nicholas are the Grand Duchess Militza of Russia, the Duchess Anastasia of Leuchtenberg and Princess Anna of Battenberg.

The number of brides that Montenegro has supplied to the courts of Europe is altogether disproportionate to the size and importance of the little country. Montenegro has an area of 8,500 square miles and a population of a quarter of a million. The capital, Cetinje, is a village with a population of 3,000. The princely palace in which so many distinguished royal brides were born and brought up is a modest structure, in which a moderately successful American tradesman would never condescend to dwell.

But in these modest surroundings the princesses of Montenegro grew up to be splendid specimens of womanhood. As children they enjoyed the greatest liberty and escaped the restraints of court etiquette, which are the curse of most royal boys and girls. In the severe winters which are experienced in the country of the black hills, as Montenegro is called in the Balkans, the princesses were encouraged to harden their constitutions by sleighing, running in snowshoes, skating and indulging in other cold weather sports and pastimes. At the warmer seasons of the year they made long excursions into the wooded and mountainous interior and paid frequent visits to the prince's villa on the shores of the Adriatic sea. By the time they were in their teens they could ride a bareback horse, drive a four-in-hand, hunt and shoot, swim and sail or row a boat to perfection.

While thus enjoying childhood to the full, the royal girls were educated by French and German tutors and governesses, who polished off the roughness which might otherwise have become apparent in their characters. Prince Nicholas allowed each of his daughters to run wild in Montenegro until sixteen years of age, after which the princesses were sent to Vienna and Paris to gain a knowledge of the western world, with its totally different manners and customs. After attaining her seventeenth birthday each princess spent six months of the year abroad and six months in Montenegro, and this plan proved to be an effective conclusion to an excellent scheme of education. The Montenegrin princesses developed from tomboy girls into women of unusual grace and beauty, of exceptional personal distinction and of remarkable talent in many directions.

The Case of L. L. Cantelou

The case of L. L. Cantelou, Clarendon, Texas, is similar to that of many others who have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says, "After trying a doctor for several months, and using different kinds of medicine for my wife who had been troubled with severe bowel complaint for several months, I bought a 25c bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. After using the second bottle she was entirely cured." For sale by all dealers. advt

Not So Strange After All

You may think it strange that so many people are cured of stomach trouble by Chamberlain's Tablets. You would not, however, if you should give them a trial. They strengthen and invigorate the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Mrs. Rosie Rish, Wabash, Ind., writes, "Nothing did me the least good until I began using Chamberlain's Tablets. It is decidedly the best medicine for stomach trouble I have ever used." Avoid Self-Consciousness.

To think about oneself all the while is to turn energy in on oneself continually that might much better go out in unselfish action. The self-conscious person needs to pour out this force of attention and thought, instead of concentrating it on self and wasting it in awkward embarrassment and hurt pride.—Great Thoughts.

MUSKEGON COUPLE ELOPES

Double Wedding at Crown Point, Ind., Surprises Their Friends.

MUSKEGON, MICH. — Word reached Muskegon of the double elopment and the wedding following at Crown Point, Ind., of two prominent society couples of this city—Edward E. Backstrom and Miss Pansie Paul, and Harry Bodine and Miss Mabel M. Barber.

Mr. Backstrom is a senior in the Chicago College of Dental Surgery.

Money for Ginseng Growers.

EATON RAPIDS, MICH. — The ginseng growers here who refused to sell their 1914 crop at the extremely low prices that prevailed last fall and winter "on account of the European war," have made a good thing by "holding on." At this time they have offers of $2 a pound more for their last season's harvest of ginseng roots than the buyers offered them then, and they have a large amount of the left-over product, in addition to the good harvest they will have again this season.

JEWELRY THIEF ROBS PAWNER OF $30,000

Police of Many Cities Asked to Look for Suspect.

DETROIT, MICH. — Police officers in many large cities are looking for Jack Perrin, who is wanted in Detroit for a large jewelry robbery.

Perlin is wanted for stealing jewelry valued at $5,000 from Louis R. Grosslight, jeweler and pawnbroker at 20 Monroe avenue. Perlin was there employed as a clerk. It is said Perlin stole jewelry that was placed in Grosslight's pawnshop as pledges for loans, and that if Grosslight is compelled to make good the pledges his loss will amount to from $10,000 to $20,000.

Perlin not only stole some of the missing jewelry given Grosslight as pledges once, but twice. In one instance, the police say, he took a pair of diamond earrings that Grosslight had loaned $300 on and took the diamonds from the setting and went to Grosslight and said a man came into the store during his absence and wanted to borow $150 on them.

SHAM BATTLES ARE NO LONGER MILITARY

Extended Maneuvers to Replace Old Short Range System.

LANSING, MICH. — Visitors to the coming encampment of the Michigan National guard at Grayling who expect to see a "sham battle" will have their trip for naught. Instead there will be "maneuvers."

The day of the sham battle has passed. Magnificent distances now used in actual warfare have chased the sham battle out of the training of a well regulated army.

"The sham battle, as it is popularly known," says Adjutant General Bersey, "is no more. Instead we have the maneuver, which is usually so intricate and scattered over so much territory that it is not interesting to the onlooker.

"Time was, subsequent to the civil war—from which dated most of the military movements in America for years—when two companies or bodies of men could be stood up within a couple of hundred yards of each other and ordered to fight it out. Since the modern rifle and other modern arms have been brought into play, that sort of a battle, from the standpoint of teaching the soldiers anything, is a joke."

WELLS-FARGO AGENT IS HELD

P. H. Pitts Is Charged With Embezzling $875.

CADILLAC, MICH. — P. H. Pitts, former Wells-Fargo agent here, was arrested on the charge of embezzling company funds totaling $875. Pitts denies the charge. It is reported that seven other Wells-Fargo agents in cities on the Ann Arbor railroad are short.

Several weeks ago George E. Mikesell of Detroit, former auditor of the Wells-Fargo offices on the Ann Arbor was arrested on embezzling charges and is in jail here awaiting trial in September.

KAISER'S MEN CUT GAP IN RUSS LINE

Drive Slavs Apart in Desperate Battle North of Lubartow.

MENACE ROAD TO PETROGRAD

One of Last Avenues of Escape for Czar's Men May Be Cut—Furious Battle Is Raging on the Bug River Near Vyskof—General Heitz Captures Serok.

HEADQUARTERS OF AUSTRIAN ARMY IN POLAND—The defeat of the Russians Sunday in the fighting on the line between Lubartow and Miechow resulted in driving the troops apart, leaving a large gap between Russian troops fighting north of Lubartow, who fled northeast across the Vieprz at Lessekowice, about twelve miles north of Lubartow, while those around Miechow fled northwest to reach the Vieprz by way of Baranow.

LONDON — Petrograd is full of wounded, the Daily Mail asserts, and the Russian casualties are unofficially estimated at 3,500,000 up to the middle of July, in killed, wounded and prisoners. The paper says, however, that this estimate seemed guesswork, as the military authorities themselves do not know the real totals.

BERLIN — Praga, the suburb of Warsaw on the eastern bank of Vistula, has been occupied by German troops, according to an official statement issued by the German army headquarters staff.

BERLIN — By blasting his way through the Russian defenses with terrific gunfire, General von Gallwitz, with 300,000 German troops, has arrived within less than ten miles of the important Warsaw-Petrograd railway, one of the two last avenues of escape for the Slavs in the Warsaw district.

A violent battle has been begun at the Bug River, south of Vyskof, where Von Gallwitz is attempting to force a crossing. The Russians are making a stand behind the fortified bridge head on the southern bank of the stream. The German batteries are covering actions both north and south of the river crossing, where pontoons are being thrown across the river.

General Heitz Moving South.

Thirteen miles to the southwest the army of General Heitz, after occupying Serock, is moving south along the highway to attempt a second crossing of the Bug just west of its junction with the Bradea River. The Russians apparently are not offering serious resistance, but are falling back on the river.

Meanwhile the Germans who crossed the Vistula south of Warsaw are pressing closer to the left flank of the Slavs in the Warsaw-Novo Georgievsk salient and the Warsaw-Siedlce railway, the last of the two railways by which the Slavs may make a successful retirement. The combined operations of the three armies are steadily tightening the ring around the Slav forces and press dispatches predict the capture of large bodies ofg the enemy.

POPE BENEDICT WILL ISSUE NEW PEACE PLEA

To Ask Neutral Aid in More Definite Message, Report.

LONDON, ENG.—The Daily Telegraph's Rome correspondent says:

"Private information enables me to say that the coming papal document will be more definite than the former. The pope will address himself specially to the neutral countries, invoking their co-operation.

"He is in consultation with all the members of the sacred college on this question, and telegrams and letters have been dispatched from the vatican to the papal nuncios and foreign cardinals. Certain monarchs have already replied to the recent papal letter and the replies will be published in the Osservatore Romano.

"A high ecclesiastical personage said that the invention of the pope now would not be premature, as anywhere the war is languishing and the German advance in Poland is inconclusive all of the belligerents are wearied, especially those who appear victorious, and thus the pope chose well the moment to utter his first word of peace."

KING CONSTANTINE

Greek Ruler Is For Unconditional Neutrality During War.

The Overseas News Agency has given out the following: "Newspapers of Athens say that King Constantine has determined personally to open the new session of parliament with a speech emphasizing that it is necessary for Greece to preserve unconditional neutrality during the war as the only guarantee of the country's welfare."

KAISER'S PEACE OFFER TO CZAR IS SPURNED

Petrograd Newspaper Tells of It on High Authority.

PETROGRAD — From absolutely trustworthy sources the Bourse Gazette learns that last week Emperor William, through the King of Denmark, offered Russians terms of peace. The reply of the czar to the Danish monarch's letter was the categorical declaration that at the present time there could be no question of peace negotiations.

These statements are by no means improbable.

Having failed to carry out her original program of crushing France in the first few months of the war Germany has now altered her general plan and is straining every nerve to eliminate Russia from the number of her antagonists in order to be able to concentrate all her energies against the allies in the west when they at last are in a position to cause her serious inconvenience.

Germany has hoped, by the momentum of her assault on both flanks of the Polish salient to cut off and utterly destroy the Russian armies occupying it and thus reduce Russia to impotence.

No doubt her calculations were largely based on the idea that the Russians would cling desperately to the Warsaw and Vistula fortresses and thus allow themselves to be caught in a trap.

Last week it must have been clear to the Germans that their plot was frustrated. Thanks to the timely decision of the Russian chief of command Warsaw was evacuated promptly and with thoroughness. The Germans will find that the Polish capital is an embarassing luxury.

GENERAL B. F. TRACY DEAD

Decedent Was Secretary of the Navy Under President Harrison.

NEW YORK—General Benjamin F. Tracey, who was President Harrison's secretary of the navy, died of paralysis here, in his eighty-fifth year, after a period of unconsciousness lasting nine days.

Three years ago General Tracy sustained a shock of paralysis but rallied from it after a few weeks and was able to resume his law practice. He was badly shaken up in an automobile accident last Decoration day, but from this, too, he speedily recovered.

KRUPP STRIKE IS AVERTED

Demands of Men Granted; Munitions Plant Working Night and Day.

GENEVA — Advices from Essen say that all the demands of the employes of the Krupp works have been granted and that a serious strike has thus been averted. The German military authorities brought pressure on the Krupp administration to this end.

Work continues on the production of war munitions night and day in three shifts.

Italian Submarine Sunk by Austrians.

PARIS — The Italian submarine Nereide is reported to have been sunk in an encounter with an Austrian submarine off the island of Pelagosa, in the Adriatic Sea, according to a special dispatch from Rome.

INCREASED FARE IS DENIED

DETROIT — Unless some new evidence is produced the Pere Marquette will continue to be operated under the 2 cent passenger fare law, and the plea of the trustees of some of the road's bond holders for a higher rate will be denied by the circuit court of appeals.

An opinion, stating this, and offering the complainants in the application for an injunction to restrain the state authorities and receivers for the road from operating it at the 2 cent passenger rate the right to file an amendment of the original application, was filed in the local United States District court.

MEXICAN CRISIS IS BELIEVED ON

Secretary Lansing Calls McAdoo for Conference.

REHABILITATION PLAN TALKED

Constitutionalists Have Control of Water Supply of Mexico City and Territory—Carranza Starts Trains Running Out of Capital—Villa and Scott Confer.

NEW YORK — A conference which is believed to have had an important bearing on pending negotiations to secure permanent peace in Mexico, was held here by Secretary of State Lansing and Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, although its nature was not revealed. It also was believed that questions arising from the recent Pan-American financial conference were discussed. Before leaving for Washington Mr. Lansing declined to make any statement. Mr. McAdoo was summoned here from Maine to meet Mr. Lansing.

MEXICO CITY — It is officially announced that the constitutionalists have occupied the mammoth hydraulic power plant of the Mexican light and power company on the Necaxa in the state of Puebla which supplies Mexico City, Toluca, Pachuca and other points. The occupation will [illegible] to the Necaxa employes.

The Carancistas have started train service out of Mexico City over several lines for short distances. They say they intend to extend the traffic as repairs and military occupation continues.

Scott In Conference With Villa.

EL PASO — General Villa and General Hugh L. Scott, chief of staff of the United States army, are holding a conference on Mexican affairs.

Villa is said by those who should know to be convinced of the utter collapse of his effort to become dictator of Mexico and is said to be willing to accept any measure of peace that will recognize him as a patriot and enable him to retire and save his face. While talking of his future and still importing ammunition, the coming of Gen. Scott is said to have been brought about upon a suggestion from Villa himself, who hinted through Geo. C. Carothers that he would quit if the United States would help him to turn loose.

Gen. Scott laid before Gen. Villa the plans of the United States for Mexican pacification to ascertain Villa's views. It is said the United States plans to eliminate Villa, Zapata, Obregon and Carranza from presidential possibilities, make peace plans and have the four of them through delegates agree upon some man considered strong enough to take up the task of pacifying the country.

Villa Willing to Be Eliminated.

Villa is said to be willing even to retire to the United States where he is reputed to have enough wealth stored to make him independent for the rest of his life, and, it is said, he will insist that Carranza, Zapata and Obregon do the same thing for the time being, leaving Mexico to the restorative influences of whoever is selected by the peace conference, which will be held if the plans of the United States do not fail. The peace conference would be composed of delegates representing all the Mexican factions. These delegates would nominally select a man for provisional president, but since he must be agreeable to the United States, President Wilson would virtually exercise veto power over the convention according to what is learned here.

Financing Mexico Serious Problem.

WASHINGTON — Financing the new government which the United States in conjunction with the South American republics hopes to establish in Mexico has developed into one of the most serious elements of the problem of restoring and maintaining order south of the Rio Grande. President Wilson himself, has been informed that the new government of Mexico will be put to the necessity of negotiating an enormous loan and that funds will not be forthcoming unless the United States gives positive assurances that it will go to any extreme to uphold the new administration in Mexico City.

Germany Apologizes to Norway.

LONDON — A Reuter dispatch from Christiania says: "Germany has informed Norway that the sinking of the Norwegian steamer Minerva in May was due to unfortunate circumstances which led the commander of the submarine to believe the vessel was British. Germany has expressed deep regret and a willingness to pay damages."

Vote Against Woman Suffrage.

MONTGOMERY, ALA. — By a margin of one vote the house committee on privileges and elections voted to report adversely the bill submitting an amendment granting woman suffrage in Alabama. The vote stood 6 to 5 against a favorable report.

BELGIAN FAMILIES REUNITED

More Than 100 War Refugees Find Michigan Homes.

DETROIT, MICH. — After being parted for one year, more than fifty Belgian families of Detroit and vicinity were reunited when 106 Belgian refugees, eighty of them small children, arrived in Detroit in care of the Rev. Henry Syoen who went to Belgium and gathered them together. Whole families of children were brought over from war ridden Belgium by Father Syoen and handed safely into the care of parents.

The refugees were taken to waiting automobiles and driven to a church, where they were served with supper and given presents by Belgian friends before being taken to their homes.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound and imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free

The Dignity of Labor

A Story Showing Its Change In Half a Century

By JOHN Y. LARNED

During the past half century a great change has come over what we call the dignity of labor—not that labor is a more honorable calling than formerly, but it is so regarded. In America we took originally our ideas concerning trade and labor from England, where neither was then regarded as a fit occupation for a gentleman. Fifty years ago one might not in America sell goods at retail and maintain a first class social position. The daughters of gentlemen and ladies could not earn money without being taboo by persons of their own set.

Today our merchants and social princes are retailers. The daughters of well to do persons prefer to work rather than wait for husbands, and many a young man with a taste for mechanics prefers to make his start in the machine shop rather than in the counting room.

Nevertheless snobbery has not died out. It will never die, filling its ranks mostly from the get-rich-quick element. Modern high social life is a combination of refined persons and snobs. For the snobs nothing is quite good enough. Refined men think little of taking off their coats and doing a bit of carpenter work about their homes. Their wives are every day coming more and more to dispense with hired help.

One August day a young man knocked at the door of Mrs. Bradbury, who lived in a small town called Glendale, situated in a beautiful valley, and said to her:

"I am looking for a place to spend a month in which to regain health impaired from overwork. I have been told that if I can get yo[illegible] in I will be very pleasantly situated."

The lady looked the young man over and consented to take him to board and treat him, if he so wished, as a member of her family. He gave his name as Charles Treat, but concerning his antecedents or his occupation said nothing. The accepting of Mr. Treat as a member of the family meant more to him than would at first appear. Glendale society was more than usually pleasant, and Mrs. Bradbury, whose ancestors had been its leaders in former times, though she was now poor, retained her membership. Many good men and women had of late years been admitted to social companionship, but the snob had not been kept out. Nevertheless Glendale social life was sufficiently progressive to take persons for their intrinsic worth.

For the first week of his sojourn in Glendale Charles Treat divided his day between sitting on Mrs. Bradbury's porch and taking walks in the country round about. Then Mrs. Bradbury, finding that he was growing impatient to get back to work, suggested that he would be better satisfied to remain if he had some companionship and offered to introduce him to the young men and young women of the place. Treat consented and became a member of the younger social circle of Glendale.

There were tennis courts there, in which those devoted to outdoor sports gathered, and Treat found the game both attractive and of advantage to his health. He was well liked, though not what is called popular. Popular young men and women in society are usually ephemeral. Unless they have sterling qualities they are liable to drop out of the esteem in which they are held, taking a back seat. Among the more refined young men and women Treat was considered an equal; among those whose parents had recently got rich he found little favor. They required some information as to what was his occupation, and he did not seem inclined to gratify their curiosity.

Treat took more especially to tennis than to the other methods of recreation. He played a good game, though at the time, his health having been impaired by overwork, he did not play a strong one. It was noticed that he was dreamy—that is, he was liable to be thinking of something else than what he was doing. On several occasions while at tennis, struck by a sudden thought while a ball was to be sent back, he would let it go by without seeing it. This was not acceptable to his partner when he had one and gained him the name of "woolgatherer." One of the young men who noticed this idiosyncrasy declared that Treat was either mad or a genius, adding that geniuses were part lunatic and, after all, there was not much difference between the two. But the others would not agree to this.

In these days wealth counts for so much those possessing it naturally become social leaders. Among the young ladies of Glendale was Miss Martha Broadnax, whose father had made a great deal of money in manufacturing bones into fertilizing material. Miss Broadnax, being able to entertain more lavishly than any of the young women in Glendale, naturally fell into the position of leader of the younger set. About the time that Mrs. Bradbury introduced Charles Treat this young woman had begun to assume the right to pass upon any person who was received within the circle. Not having been consulted as to Treat's admission, she was not especially gracious to him. When asked for a reason for not approving of him she said that no one knew anything about him. He might be a plumber; he might be a "counter jumper;" he might be a carpenter. Since Miss Broadnax's father had made his money out of the bones of rotting animals the strictures involved in her denunciation of these occupations did not come with good grace.

A certain Miss MacKnight, whose father had been a judge on the bench, on hearing of Miss Broadnax's remarks said that the world had improved in its estimate of persons in separating those of refinement from their occupations; that it was possible for a plumber, a "counter jumper" or a carpenter to be a refined man and it was possible for a gentleman to engage in the manufacture of fertilizing material.

This bit of repartee was appreciated by those of the old school who were not especially pleased with Miss Broadnax's assumption of the right to turn down persons on account of their occupations. However, Miss Broadnax from her own standpoint won a signal victory.

One day an automobile drew up in haste in front of Mrs. Bradbury's house. Mr. Treat got out, hustled into the car and was carried away. It so happened that Miss Broadnax was passing Mrs. Bradbury's at the time in her limousine and, seeing the departure of Mr. Treat, took it into her head that he had been carried away by a plain clothes policeman. Resolving to make sure of the matter, she ordered her chauffeur to follow.

Twenty miles from Glendale the auto containing Treat drew up at a large factory. The young man alighted and entered one of the buildings. Miss Broadnax drove up to the office and, introducing herself as a daughter of Peter Broadnax, the great manufacturer of fertilizing material, asked to be shown through the works. Her application was granted with alacrity, and during her inspection she caught sight of Charles Treat in a pair of overalls bending over a machine.

"Greasy mechanic!" she exclaimed to herself. "I knew there was something the matter with him. If he isn't a criminal he's a common laborer, and that's not much better." So Miss Broadnax was driven back to Glendale and the next day gave out that whatever the others of the social circle did in the premises she would no longer countenance Mr. Treat.

There was a time when her statement that she had discovered that a member of the social circle of Glendale worked in overalls in a factory would have been sufficient to eject him. In the twentieth century there is a broader view of such matters. Mr. Treat was not turned down by his associates, but was treated by different ones in different ways. He returned to them in a few days without mentioning where he had been and soon noticed that something had happened. Some of his former associates scarcely noticed him, some treated him as usual, and he noticed that Miss MacKnight was unusually cordial.

No one felt obliged to tell Mr. Treat he had been tracked to a factory and had been seen in overalls, and since he was ignorant of this fact some time was required for him to realize that he was among certain persons persona non grata. Naturally Miss MacKnight's cordial treatment of him drew him to her, he supposing that he was attractive to her. The young lady, unwilling that he should mistake the cause [illegible] favor she showed him, finally [illegible] him the story of Miss Broadnax following him to the factory, which explained the coolness shown him by certain members of the social circle.

Treat held his ground in Glendale till the last of August, when he departed, and a few days later every one of his associates there received an invitation to inspect a new cannon he had invented at the Duckworth Arms company on an early day in September, the day after Labor day. It was the Duckworth Arms company's factory where Mr. Treat had been seen in overalls.

Naturally the announcement that Treat was an inventor and had perfected—as be had done his own workmanship—a new cannon created quite a stir in the Glendale social circle. There were girls in that circle who were looking out to marry an establishment and would be only too glad to marry a man in overalls if he were a successful inventor made rich by his inventions. As to the young men, they had long passed beyond the narrow ideas of their forefathers, and there was not one of them who would not gladly have stepped into the shoes of a man who was capable of even trying to invent a gun.

The invitation was generally accepted, the only girl declining being Miss Broadnax, she not having the face to put in an appearance. They were received by Treat in a private room in which he had worked out his gun scheme, and before taking them to view his gun he made them a little address, in which he gave a brief account of his struggles as an inventor, assuring them that had he not been educated as a mechanic he could not have succeeded, since a practical knowledge of mechanics was involved in his work.

He then led them into a foundry building in which the gun was set up. There he explained to them that at the breaking out of the European war he had been engaged in inventing a new cannon and had been endeavoring to interest the United States government in it, but had failed. Since then he had induced the war department to furnish the means to construct the gun which they saw before them. He then gave them a demonstration of its workings.

Treat's gun has lately been proved successful and a large order given for its manufacture. It is said that he is engaged to marry Miss MacKnight.

Instinct Versus Reason.

There has been current in England of recent years a reaction against reason, an avowed worship of instinct and tradition and even prejudice. The doctrines of this reaction are in themselves fascinating, and they have been preached by fascinating writers. The way of instinct and old habit is so full of ease, so facile and strong and untroubled! Look at the faces of men who are wrapped up in some natural and instinctive purpose. Look at a dog chasing his prey, a lover pursuing his beloved, a band of vigorous men advancing to battle, a crowd of friends drinking and laughing. That shows us, say the writers aforesaid, what life can be and what it ought to be. "Let us not think and question," they say. "Let us be healthy and direct, not fret against the main current of instinctive feeling and tradition."

In matters of art such a habit of mind may be valuable. In matters of truth or of conduct it is, I believe, as disastrous as it is alluring.—Gilbert

NOTICE! FARMERS!

Millers of the County Urge Farmers not to Thresh Wheat

TO THE FARMERS IN THIS VICINITY

Tecumseh Mich.
Aug. 11, 1915

Owing to the unfavorable weather conditions has caused an excessive amount of moisture in the wheat and we find the new crop of wheat so very damp that it is impossible for us to handle and strongly urge farmers to stop threshing and give your grain a chance to dry out in the straw, if once threshed it will be impossible to market your grain and it will spoil in a bin. Do not be led to believe that you can spread it out on a floor and dry by shoveling for it is impossible and can only be dried by a special grain drying equipment which means a large and expensive investment. We would suggest that you leave your grain in the straw until such time as the weather has conditioned same fit for threshing. When you do thresh be very particular to throw out all grown bundles this way you will save a good percentage of marketable grain. If all threshed together it no doubt will mean the rejection of your entire crop.

C. J. LEWIS, Tipton,

The above letter signed by seven of our Lenawee Millers speaks for itself They urge the farmers to leave their wheat in the straw and thresh until more settled weather thus giving it a chance to dry out. Many farmers have already threshed and as a result wet wheat is being brought to market which can[illegible] for flour.

Wet wheat will heat and sprout in the bins unless properly dried out Those who have will stand a great loss, If farmers will leave their wheat in the fields in well rounded shocks, covered with a cap bundle until the weather becomes more settled and the wheat has had a chance to dry ou, they will probably save from 75 to 90 per cent of their crop.

Just Once.

It was Charley's first game of golf. His patient friend had taken him sadly around the eighteen holes and watched him hack the ball into small bits and cut up the green as though it had been plowed by shrapnel. After the game Charley and his patient friend were talking to a few of the golfers on the clubhouse veranda.

"That was a beautiful shot you made this afternoon, Charley," said his patient friend.

Charley brightened up and flushed happily, while the young woman looked at him admiringly. "Which one?" he asked eagerly.

"Why," said the patient friend, "the time you hit the ball."—Chicago Tribune.

CHANGES IN MOTOR CAR LAWS.

The secretary of state has compiled in pamphlet form, the new motor vehicle law, which takes effect in January.

The most important change is in the method of taxation. Under the new law all cars will be taxed as follows:

Gasoline and steam power trucks, 15c a horsepower and 15c a hundredweight.

The weight is to be given by the manufacturers, with the car fully equipped.

The provision with reference to chauffeurs remain the same Chauffeur must be 18 years of age and wear badges furnished by the secretary of state, conspicuously.

Under the present law rates are reduced August 1; hereafter they will not be reduced until September 1.

The provision with regard to nonresidents grants them a period of at least 90 days upon a license of another state or province if the state or province from whence they come extend the same privilege.

An automobile may be equipped with a single light in front, or two if desired, but the electric lights in front must be equipped with dimmers It will be the duty of the driver of a car so equipped to dim his light when approaching another vehicle.

The right of civil action in case of accidents is changed in that the owner shall not be liable after January 1 unless his machine is being driven by his express or implied consent.

WM J OSBORN

Wm. J. Osborn who was born in Franklin township, this county in 1848 and lived in that community until 1895, died at his home in Jackson county Wednesday, Aug. 4th. As the result of a fall upon an icy pavement in Ann Arbor three years ago last Christmas, his health was seriously impaired; indeed his final illness then began. The funeral services were held at his late home on Saturday, Aug. 4th and the interment was in Brookside cemetery, Tecumseh under Masonic auspices.

Surviving him are the widow, and oldest son Ashbal, who will remain on the farm; Duane, a well known building contractor of Ann Arbor; Mrs. Rowena Lawrence of Sacramento, Calif.; Garfield of Spokane, Wash. and Misses Hazel and Mildred of Cleveland, Ohio.

Fertilizer

It is a known fact that we have got to feed our soils the same as we do our animals in order for anything to thrive and produce the best results.

QUESTIONS

No. 1 Which kind is the best to buy? You all know you want middlings to grow young pigs and corn to fat same.

No. 2 Who knows how much Nitrogen, Phosphoric Acid and Potash it takes to produce forty or fifty bushel of wheat pre acre?

No. 3 Who knows what proportion should they be applied to the soil.

ANSWERS

No. 1 Swift's Special Disolved Animal Bone Meal. If you will look in the State of Ohio's report you will notice they are the only company that manufactures such a brand. This particular brand of fertilizer is a balance ration for about 95 per cent. of our soils in this section and 75 per cent. of it is water solution.

No. 2 & 3 Call at our store for these answers.

It will cost you to begin with $32.00 a ton. Have cheaper brands if price is what you are looking for.

MATHISON—BABCOCK

Married in Livingston, Montana Thursday July 29, Miss Dora Babcock and John Mathison of Valentine, Montana.

Some five or six years ago Miss Babcock in company Miss Mattie Wilson of Tecumseh left for the western country to make their fortune, and landed in Arizona where they each took up a claim of 320 acres.

They stayed [illegible] until they made good. About six months ago Miss Babcock was home for a while with her sister, Mrs. Fred O'dell and family but the call of the West drew her back with the above result.

Her many friends here will extend congratulations and best wishes for her future.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER

Mrs. Dale Hodges and the Misses Lydia Babcock and Florence Aten entertained at the home of Mrs. Hodges on Monday evening, honoring Miss Josephine Orr whose approaching marriage will be consummated this month. 500 furnished the amusement of the evening, Miss Orr winning the prize.

A two course supper was then served covers being laid for 16. Golden Glow in a bushel basket was the center decoration of the table. Dainty ribbons lead from the basket to each guest which when drawn, held a little missive with a rhymn about the bride-to-be, causing much merriment in the reading. The flowers being removed from the basket disclosed many useful and ornamental gifts for Josephine. The evening was pronounced one of the best ever by the merry company.

BARGAIN DAY

Wednesday morning was cloudy and threatening and later a drizzling rain set in making it unpleasant for those who wished to come to town. At night a steady [illegible] impossible for the band concert or the vaudeville amusements to be given. Despite the rain however it was astonishing the number of people who came in during the evening.

Butterfly Garden Party

Given by the Ladies of the Baptist Church on Mr. R. S. Moore's Lawn, Tecumseh

TUESDAY EVENING,
AUGUST 10th.

Another of the charming garden parties given by the ladies of the Baptist church was held Tuesday evening on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Moore on West Chicago street. The lawn was enclosed with canvas and it with the garden back of the home was a veritable midsummer night dream of beauty.

American flags were used on the inside of the canvas, and electric lights were everywhere to be seen. The spacious porch made a fine stage for the program and was decorated with hanging baskets of flowers with hundreds of butterflies fluttering in the flowers and in the breeze huge stands of flowers were placed on the stage making it a bower of beauty.

The garden was a scene from fairy land, small tables with snow white napery with great bowls of dainty flowers for centerpiece, butterfly girls for attendants made the sandwiches and coffee, the ice cream and cake most delectable.

The program was as follows:

PART ONE

Rigoletto,......(Verdi)
Mrs. Hodges, Mrs. Wood
Questa o Quella, (Verdi, from Rigoletto)
Mr. Fred Dickinson
Sunshine and Butterflies....(Bunning)
Mrs Albert Reason
Quarrel Scene from "A School for Scandal", (Sheridan)......Miss Mingay
To You; Contentment,....Miss Lambie

PART TWO

Dreams of Long Ago........(Caruso)
Mr. O. C. Krone
An Irish Slumber Song....(Newton)
Mrs. Reason
The Call,......(Andrews)
Mrs. L. M. Kimble
The Telltale......(Anon)
Miss Mingay
Down in the Forest......(Ronald)
Miss Lambie

and was heartily encored each one responding not only once but twice in several instances.

The piano duet by Mesdames Wood and Hodges was given in their usual delightful manner. Fred Dickinson says he can talk English best yet, but he did nobly with his Questa a Quella. The sweet lullaby songs given by Mrs. A. Reason were most beautifully rendered as were the numbers given by Miss Lambie and Miss Mingay was certainly at her best in readings.

A garden party now without Mr. Krone would surely be missing some fine entertainment. His "Sweet Dreams of Long Ago" with his encores were all that could be desired, Mrs. Kimble was exceptionally good and one felt like responding to "The Call". She also gave a sweet little song in response as an encore.

Dangerous Nitroglycerin.

Nitroglycerin is a fearfully dangerous explosive and at a temperature of only 100 degrees—that is, very little more than the warmth of the human body—it begins to decompose.

Tons of nitroglycerin are turned out every day, for it is the explosive from which guncotton is made. But all the mixing vats are artificially cooled by coils of cold water pipes.

The cleaner nitroglycerin is made the less the danger. Consequently it undergoes any number of washings before it is fit for use. In the earlier days of its manufacture nitroglycerin waste water was allowed to run away through open drains, or into streams. It was not realized that this waste constituted a source of danger until, one day, a flash of lightning, striking ground near a factory, which was soaked with this compound, caused a fearful explosion. A cavity twenty feet deep was blown in the earth, and the factory itself, although fully 200 yards away, was practically demolished.—London Answers.

Destroying Guns.

It may be necessary to destroy guns to prevent them falling into the hands of the enemy, or to make captured guns useless. If a small amount of dynamite or other explosive is available, of course this can be done very effectively. If not, the breech of the gun is closed and the hinge joints smashed as much as possible with a handspike or pick. If there is time a few rifle shots fired at the vital points of the gun effectively jam the mechanism so as to make it useless. With rifles, the butts are broken off and the barrels destroyed as much as possible. To do this the rifles are well heated over a fire and smashed up with heavy hammers. Ammunition is destroyed by placing it in a deep pit and setting it on fire. Telegraph wires are cut up into small pieces and the poles cut down and broken up. — London Express.

Let Them Hunt For It.

A minister in a local church known for his absent mindedness by the members of his own family, but not to his congregation, saved himself from complete exposure at a recent service by his quick wit.

He had studied his sermon carefully, but had neglected to make any notations of the number of the chapter and verse from which the text was taken. In the pulpit he announced the text and then stopped short while the congregation waited to hear from what place in the Bible it was taken.

As he noticed absence of notes to this fact he quickly announced, "I'm going to give you a week to find from what chapter and verse this phrase was taken." So was exposure averted.—Columbus Dispatch.

Titles of Victor Emmanuel.

The author of "Rejected Addresses" preserved the name of a certain Mr. Pole, as the longest imaginable, in the well known lines:

Bless every man possessed of aught to give,
Long may Long Wellesley Tynley Long Pole live.

but Mr. Pole's name was as nothing to the titles of the king of Italy, many of which are derived from the older kingdom of Sardinia. Where his titles end it might be difficult to say, but they begin, king of Italy, Sardinia, France, Spain, England, Jerusalem, Greece, Alexandria and Hamburg, ruler of the midway sea, master of the deep, and king of the earth.—Christian Science Monitor.

The Word Bible.

The word Bible is derived from the Latin name Biblia, which was treated as a singular, although it comes from the Greek neuter plural meaning "little books." This Greek diminutive was derived from byblus, or papyrus, the famous material on which ancient books were written. The title "Bible" was first used about the middle of the second Christian century in the so called second epistle of Clement, xiv, 2.

AGRICULTURE AND WAR.

Ruin of Soil In Devastated Regions Will Take Years to Repair.

The earth itself—the soil over which contending armies struggle—is suffering an injury which can be calculated in terms of several hundred million dollars. The poets who say that the earth sickens with bloodshed are more right than they know.

We have been told how much the war costs in lives, military tools, breakdown of commerce and industry, destruction of ships, factories, railroads, bridges and homes. An appalling total it makes. But an item of prime importance has been left out. Earth outraged presents her bill to mankind.

"It will take two to five years for the soil of the devastated area to recover from its injuries. Some of the ill effects of war on European land will last half a century," says O. S. Morgan, professor of agriculture at Columbia university.

The area devastated may be computed in many thousands of square miles. There is included the finest, most productive soil in the world.

Let us take up a newspaper item of some months ago stating that 1,000,000 soldiers worked for three weeks in Galicia, digging trenches. The top layer of crop growing soil, which is about a foot deep, was dug out first. On top of this was placed a mass of clay, stone, gravel, hardpan and other worthless stuff from the bottom of the trenches. The good, productive soil was buried deep under worthless material. Thousands of acres of fertile ground in Galicia were ruined.

"If it took 1,000,000 soldiers three weeks to dig those trenches," says Professor Morgan, "it will take 1,000,000 peasants at least a week and a half to fill them up when the war is over. The earth will have to be put back the same way it was taken out, poor stuff first and good stuff on top. We know how long it takes dirt removed from a well to grow anything, even weeds—that is, two or three years. The trenches refilled will not be restored to their original condition in less than five years, and furthermore the soil of Galicia will show through its grain fields the scars of the war trenches for fifty years."

The eastern battle line is 600 miles, the western 300 miles—900 miles together—but both hostile forces have their own lines, which thus total a mileage of 1,800. Allowing for gaps, but adding parallel or secondary lines and cross trenches, the European soil is gashed with more than 3,000 miles of deep and wide ditches. The soil is disturbed for at least twice their width. The ditches will have to be filled, if only to eliminate an obstacle to agriculture.

This estimate does not include the extensive trenching outside the theater of war in preparation for eventualities.

Care of the Baby In Summer

Weaning and Supplementary Feeding.

[Prepared by the children's bureau, United States department of labor.]

Many a mother looks forward with dread to the weaning period as one fraught with trouble to herself and more or less disturbance for the baby, but this need not be so.

One of the difficulties of weaning is the baby's objection to the rubber nipple, but if he has been given his drinking water by means of a nursing bottle throughout his life, he will already have learned how to use it.

Another and the principal trouble with weaning is to find food that suits the baby, and on which he thrives, which may safely be offered to him in the place of breast milk. Much of this trouble may be avoided if the weaning is done so gradually that the baby learns to take cows' milk while he is still getting breast milk to keep his digestive processes in good order.

Some of the rules for successful weaning are these: First, never wean a young baby until every means for keeping up the breast milk has been tried; second, do not wean the baby in the heat of summer, and, third, do not wean the baby because you think your milk disagrees with him. The trouble is almost certainly not with the quality of your milk, but because you do not have enough of it.

The way to wean the baby comfortably is to begin at the eighth or ninth month to give him one bottle feeding a day in place of one breast feeding. A little later another bottle is added, and so on until at the end of the year the breast is taken away altogether. These bottle feedings should consist of clean fresh cows' milk, diluted and sweetened. It is necessary, however, to remember that a baby who has been breast fed all his life cannot immediately digest cows' milk, as a bottle fed infant has learned to do. Accordingly a very weak mixture should be used to begin with. For example, for a baby of nine months of age the milk should be that intended for a bottle fed baby of four or five months. The strength of the food should be gradually increased, if the baby shows no signs of disturbance, until the full strength feeding is reached.

When a baby is weaned at the end of the first year he may be taught to drink directly from a cup and to be fed with a spoon.

It sometimes happens that the mother thinks her milk does not agree with the baby because he cries a good deal or is not gaining in weight. Under such circumstances, often with the advice and encouragement of her neighbors, the young mother weans her baby, even though he may be only a few weeks old. This is almost always a mistake. The trouble is not that the mother's milk is poor in quality, but because there is not enough of it. Instead of weaning the baby the mother should do all in her power to save it and to increase it for the baby's sake by eating more nourishing foods, such as eggs, meat, milk, fresh vegetables and good bread and butter, by taking plenty of fluid, water or milk, and by taking more rest and plenty of out of door exercise. Above all, she should stop worrying. Nothing more seriously interferes with successful nursing than worry and anxiety on the mother's part, and as far as possible a nursing mother should be relieved of the causes of mental disturbance, not only for herself, but even more for the sake of the baby.

At the same time, the baby will require some additional food. He should be given one or two prepared feedings in a nursing bottle each day until the mother's milk has increased sufficiently for his needs. The same rules govern "supplementary" feeding, as it is called, as those which apply to artificial feeding, except that a much weaker milk mixture must be used for a baby who has had nothing but breast milk from birth than for a bottle fed baby of the same age.

The mother should nurse the baby at least four times a day in order to keep the breast in good order and to induce a greater milk supply.

If the mother can have the help and advice of a good doctor at this time she should seek it, or take her baby to an infant welfare station. The country mother who cannot readily go to a doctor should have some good book to help her. The children's bureau of the United States department of labor, Washington, will send a pamphlet called "Infant Care," containing simple directions for the care of the baby, to any one who asks for it. This publication also contains many references to standard books on the subject.

Farm and Garden

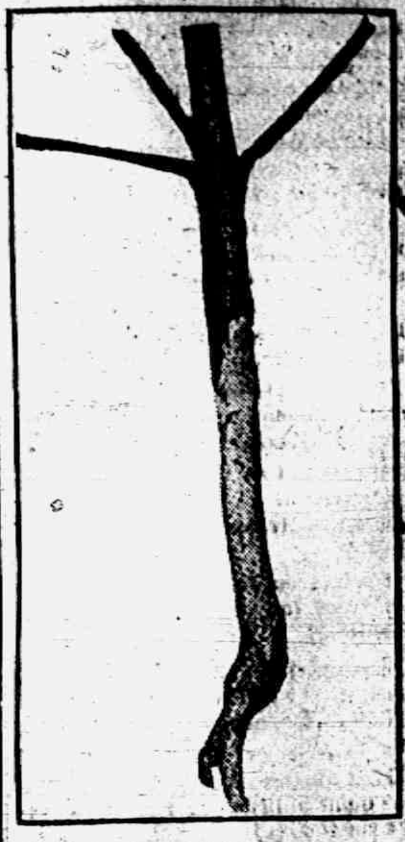
PINE MICE, ORCHARD PESTS.

They Are True Rodents and Live Upon Seeds, Roots and Leaves.

[Prepared by the United States department of agriculture.]

Pine mice occur over the greater part of eastern United States from the Hudson river valley to eastern Kansas and Nebraska and from the great lakes to the gulf of Mexico. Inhabitants chiefly of forest regions, they are unknown on the open plains. Ordinarily they live in the woods, but are partial also to old pastures or lands not frequently cultivated. From woods, hedges and fence rows they spread into gardens, lawns and cultivated fields through their own underground tunnels or those of the garden mole. The tunnels made by pine mice can be distinguished from those made by moles only by their smaller diameter and the frequent holes that open to the surface.

While the mole feeds almost wholly upon insects and earthworms and seldom eats vegetable substances, pine mice are true rodents and live upon seeds, roots and leaves. Their harmful activities include the destruction of potatoes, sweet potatoes, ginseng roots, bulbs in lawns, shrubbery and trees. They destroy many fruit trees in upland orchards and nurseries. The mischief they do is not usually discovered until later, when harvest reveals the rifled potato hills or when leaves of plants or trees suddenly wither. In many instances the injury is wrongly attributed to moles, whose tunnels invade the place or extend from hill to hill of potatoes. The mole is seeking earthworms or white grubs that feed upon the tubers, but mice that follow in the runs eat the potatoes themselves.



SMALL PINE TREE DESTROYED BY MICE.

Depredations by pine mice can be found only after digging about the tree and exposing the trunk below the surface. The roots of small trees are often entirely eaten off by pine mice, and pine trees as well as deciduous forest trees, when young, are frequently killed by these animals.

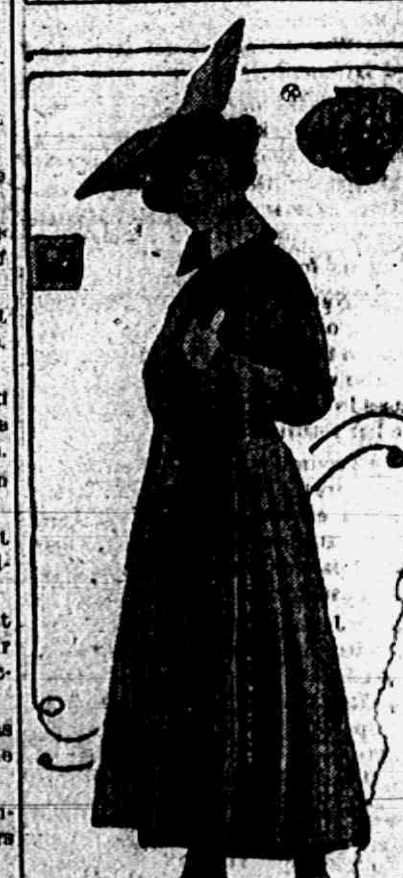
For destroying pine mice sweet potatoes as a bait have been found effective. They keep well in contact with soil except when there is danger of freezing, and are readily eaten by the mice. The baits should be prepared as follows:

Cut sweet potatoes into pieces about as large as good sized grapes. Place them in a metal pan or tub and wet them with water. Drain off the water and with a tin pepper box slowly sift over them powdered strychnine (alkaloid preferred), stirring constantly so that the poison is evenly distributed. An ounce of strychnine should poison a bushel of the cut bait.

The bait, whether of grain or pieces of potato, may be dropped into the pine mouse tunnels through the natural openings or through holes made with a piece of broom handle or other stick. Bird life will not be endangered by these baits.

REDINGOTE COAT.

The Garment of Louis Philippe's Reign Is Again Revived.



ADVANCED AUTUMN MODEL.

Coat of covert in redingote fashion, with deep plaits to give additional fullness. These plaits are not stitched, but held in place at the waist line by a snugly fitting belt of the material. The deep cuffs are trimmed with a row of tan bone buttons and over the flaring collar is worn a separate collar of white linen.

FARMERS' AUTOS WILL BE GUARDED AT 1915 MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

"THOUSANDS may drive their autos to the State Fair in September and rest assured that their cars will be properly parked and guarded by officers whom we will have stationed in an inclosure at the grounds," declared General Manager G. W. Dickinson of the State Fair today.

"No charge for admission of automobiles to the grounds will be collected, but car owners who desire to have the protection which the inclosure and the officers will provide will be charged a small fee. We will issue checks for the cars, and no one will be allowed to enter the inclosure where the cars are parked unless he has a check.

"Farmers who drive their cars to the Fair may leave their parcels in their autos, as the officers will be present at all times to guard not only the machines, but whatever is left in them.

"Thousands of Michigan farmers are auto owners, and we want them to feel perfectly free to come to Detroit in their cars.

"We will offer prizes of $15, $10 and $5 each to the three automobile parties which come the longest distance to the Fair. Auto owners who wish to be considered for this prize are requested to set their speedometers upon leaving their homes and make reports to the State Fair management upon arrival in Detroit regarding the distance traveled. The prize winners will be announced on the last day of the Fair."

THE Paterson aviators will present a realistic aeroplane battle in the clouds at the State Fair, which will be held at Detroit Sept. 6 to 15. Bomb throwing, near collisions while soaring through the clouds, thrilling drives straight toward the earth and maneuvers similar to those being staged over European battlefields by German and Austrian aviators, as well as bird men representing the allies, are included on the program.

The Paterson aviators recently gave a demonstration of their aeroplane battle near Trenton, and newspaper men, photographers and movie operators declared the thrilling maneuvers of the bird men to be far superior to the usual flights of aviators.

Heralded by salvos of exploding bombshells, the 100 horsepower aeroplane piloted by Aviator Williams buzzed past away overhead at over seventy miles an hour to open the exhibition. At once Aviator Boshek in a sixty horsepower biplane arose to repel the attack. It was with difficulty that he eluded the invading aviator, who tried repeatedly to get directly above to bomb him. As it was the terrific disturbances in the air caused by the explosions all about the machine made it flutter helplessly like a leaf in the wind. Several times Boshek was apparently doomed, but with consummate skill he succeeded in righting himself, to the intense relief of the spectators. As he was unable to slip past the other machine to assail it from above, he commenced a revolver attack.

In retaliation Williams swooped over toward his elusive opponent, but could not reach him. "There they smash! I'll catch them before they fall anyhow," ejaculated one of the crowd of camera men as he hastily leveled his camera. Moving picture cranks spun around. Batteries of graflexes and kodaks snapped. The two aeroplanes but a few yards apart were rushing together at express speed. A crash seemed inevitable, but the machines safely passed one another.

After the battle W. R. Whipple, a moving picture camera operator from New York, expressed a wish for "closer front and side views of the machine in action." Williams obligingly complied and went up again. At a few hundred feet he attained a speed of seventy miles an hour. Without warning he dived straight at the crowd, which retreated precipitately. Two or three veteran newspaper men stuck beside Whipple, who gamely kept on cranking the movie camera. The aeroplane came directly at them 120 miles an hour on the dive until it was only six or eight feet from the ground and hardly that far away, then glided just over their heads at hurricane speed.

Altogether the Paterson aviators will present six special features at the Michigan State Fair, including an aeroplane dance, aviators' school, aeroplane race, flag or patriotic program and delivery of mail under special authority of the United States government.

MILKING TEST FOR DAIRY COWS TO BE CONDUCTED AT STATE FAIR

A FOUR day milking test for dairy cows, to be conducted during the State Fair at Detroit in September, is attracting considerable attention among farmers. Last year there were double the number of entries made in 1913, and it is expected the competition will be very keen this fall. The details of the test will be in charge of the dairy department of the Michigan Agricultural college.

The test will begin Sept. 7 at 6 a. m. and will continue through Friday, Sept. 10. Entries may be made up to noon, Sept. 6, on which date at 6 p. m. all cows must be in the demonstration barn.

Prizes will be awarded for economic production based upon the cost of feed and the value of the milk and butter fat produced.

Rules For Feeding.

The first milking will be at 6 a. m. on Sept. 7. Each cow may be fed such feed as the owner desires, but the feeding must begin at 6 p. m. Sept. 6, and from that time until the close of the test the same kinds and amounts of food must be given daily. Each cow must be fed not less that twenty pounds of dry matter in her daily ration.

First prize in the test is $40, second $30, third $20 and fourth $10. If there are ten or more cows entered a fifth prize of $10 will be added.

A special prize of $100 will be given by A. E. Stevenson of Port Huron if the winner in this test is a Shorthorn cow and $25 to the owner of any Shorthorn cow that wins a place in the test.

Home Builders' Exposition at Fair.

One of the big educational and industrial features of the State Fair, which will be held at Detroit Sept. 6 to 15, will be the Home Builders and Buyers' exposition. This exhibit, which will occupy the second floor of the Automobile building, will consist of ready cut houses and building material of all kinds.

PRIZES ARE OFFERED FOR BEST POTATOES

Farmers in Otsego County Are Greatly Interested.

Fifty dollars per bushel—that is the price an Otsego county farmer can get for his tubers if he wins prizes which have been offered by three associations.

The Michigan State Fair will give $20 to the exhibitor displaying the best bushel of early potatoes, as well as late tubers, and in addition the Northeastern Michigan development bureau has added an extra $20 if that best bushel is grown in northeastern Michigan. To make the contest a bigger affair in Otsego county, the Gaylord State Savings bank has added $10 to the awards already offered, making the total prize, if paid on a bushel of Otsego potatoes, $50.

The State Fair will be held Sept. 6-15, and farmers are certain in the northeastern section of the state that they will have a prize winning bushel of potatoes ready by that time. While Otsego tuber growers are especially interested in this event, farmers throughout the state are planning to enter.

Otsego county potatoes have been prize winners at various state fairs and the improvement association in that district has taken an active interest in the matter, assisting the farmers as much as possible. This fall the association will supervise the entering of exhibits for the Otsego farmers, and efforts have been made to have every resident in the county raise a few bushels of potatoes that the $50 prize may be obtained by an Otsego county farmer.

TIME TRIED EVERYWHERE WORTH TESTED

The Twenty Year Test

"Some twenty years ago I used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," writes Geo. W. Brock, publisher of the Enterprise, Aberdeen, Md. "I discovered that it was a quick and safe cure for diarrhoea. Since then no one can sell me anything said to be 'just as good.' During all these years I have used it and recommended it many times, and it has never disappointed anyone." For sale by all dealers. advt

IF MOTHERS ONLY KNEW

Mother Gray's Sweet Powders for children relieve feverishness, headache, bad stomach, teething disorders, move and regulate the bowels and destroy worms. They break up colds in 24 hours. Used by mothers for 28 years. All druggists, 25c. Sample FREE. Address, A. S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y. adv

The Case of L. L. Cantelou

The case of L. L. Cantelou, Clarendon, Texas, is similar to that of many others who have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says, "After trying a doctor for several months, and using different kinds of medicine for my wife who had been troubled with severe bowel complaint for several months, I bought a 25c bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. After using the second bottle she was entirely cured." For sale by all dealers. advt

Not So Strange After All

You may think it strange that so many people are cured of stomach trouble by Chamberlain's Tablets. You would not, however, if you should give them a trial. They strengthen and invigorate the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Mrs. Rosie Rish, Wabash, Ind., writes, "Nothing did me the least good until I began using Chamberlain's Tablets. It is decidedly the best medicine for stomach trouble I have ever used." For sale by all dealers. advt

Avoid Self-Consciousness.

To think about oneself all the while is to turn energy in on oneself continually that might much better go out in unselfish action. The self-conscious person needs to pour out this force of attention and thought, instead of concentrating it on self and wasting it in awkward embarrassment and hurt pride.—Great Thoughts.

NEWS OF THE STATE

Shiawasseetown Landmark Burned.

CORUNNA, MICH. — The burning of the Shiawasseetown plant of the Consumers' Power company removes the last landmark in what was at the time the most flourishing village in Shiawassee county and the home of the state capitol for three days. The plant was built in 1865 as a grist mill.

Business men made an effort to have the state capitol located there and succeeded. It was at Shiawasseetown three days, after being removed from Detroit. Later it was decided to locate it at Lansing, then a wilderness.

Built First G. O. P. Stage.

JACKSON, MICH. — Enoch Hemans, the only surviving member of the men who constructed the speakers' platform for the "Under the Oaks" convention in 1854 in Jackson, has just celebrated his eighty-third birthday.

Mr. Hemans is remarkably active and attends to his own business affairs. His only living descendant is Mrs. H. C. Hall of Hudson, Mich.

Trains Collide Near St. Joe.

ST. JOSEPH, MICH. — A Pere Marquette passenger and freight train collided head on at Sawyer, fifteen miles south of here.

C. T. Beebe of Grand Rapids, head brakeman on the freight, was injured and may die. John Jameson, fireman on the passenger, was seriously injured. Women passengers were in panic and three were hurt by being trampled upon.

New York's Volunteer Firemen.

Before the paid fire department system was installed in New York there were among the volunteers some of the most powerful politicians in the city. Richard Croker belonged to the "Big Six," of which William M. Tweed was the organizer and foreman. Success in fire fighting opened upon a career in politics. No body of men had more social affairs than the volunteer firemen. There were parades of fire companies, chowder parties, picnics, annual balls, water throwing contests and at times pitched battles between the rival organizations. So intense was the political feeling at times that it was related that when Chief of Engineers James Gulick was removed from office for political reasons men who received the news when they were fighting a fire quit their work and could only be induced to return when they were deceived into believing that the rumor was false.

The legislature passed the law creating the paid fire department on March 30, 1865.—New York Times.

Shooting Civilians.

According to the laws of war, any civilian who is found with arms in his possession is liable to be shot without [illegible]. Although this seems a very severe rule it is absolutely necessary for the safeguarding of the whole civilian population.

The rules of war say that no men will be recognized as combatants unless they wear a distinguishing badge, which can be easily recognized. If it were not for this any number of men could at any time band themselves together and say they were belligerents. If this were allowed the invading troops would safeguard themselves against surprises by killing every man in villages through which they passed.

This particular rule is so stringent that even a noncombatant who took up arms to defend his wife against some drunken soldier would be liable to be shot.—London Opinion.

FOUL PLAY IS FEARED IN MISSING BOY CASE

Bloodhounds Fail in Search of Lowell White.

Escanaba, Mich., Aug. 13.—The unfaltering search of one hundred men for 36 hours in the forests surrounding Osier, 30 miles north of this city, for Lowell White, four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester White, of Rapid River, has failed to solve the mystery of the lost boy.

Bloodhounds trailed the lad through the woods all night Tuesday, but at daybreak Wednesday lost the scent.

The father of the boy was visiting at the home of his brother when the boy was lost, and the lad's mother did not know of her son's disappearance until she read of it in the newspapers. She is prostrated with grief.

The forest in which the lad is lost extends 30 miles. Four men waded the Rapid river, which is very shallow for 12 miles. Fresh bear tracks were found within a mile of where the lad was last seen.

A shadow of suspicion is gradually settling over a farmhand and an investigation may result.

It has been almost definitely decided by those in charge of the search that the child has either been eaten by bears or has been the victim of foul play.

One hundred and fifty men are now searching the woods. Fresh bloodhounds are being rushed to the scene.

Reminiscence of a Star.

My first experience with professionals was at the Empire theater. The dressing rooms there were all on the right side of the stage, with the exception of one in a remote corner, which was given me. I had been told that in a regular company the actors were notified at the half hour, the quarter hour and the overture; but, as it happened, there was no overture on that occasion. I didn't want to go on without being called and seem to be an amateur, and they forgot all about me until I was missing from the scene and I was sent for in what might be mildly termed a hurry. It was a very hot afternoon in May, and I was sitting "made up" with my hat on and a negligee instead of a dress. Distractedly throwing on a skirt and seizing a feather boa and a jacket I dashed for the stage and entered through the lake, much to the amusement of the audience and the consternation of the manager, who told me what he thought of me, and I was ill for a week with mortification and decided to abandon forever a profession fraught with such perils.—Margaret Anglin in American Magazine.

The First Patent on Matches.

Before 1833, when wooden matches with phosphorus were made in Vienna, people were dependent upon flint and steel to secure a light. The first patent for a phosphorus match in the United States was taken out in 1836 by A. D. Phillips of Springfield, Mass. For many years people refused to use them, but by 1845 the ill smelling and clumsy old tinder boxes were generally discarded and are preserved, like snuffboxes, as curiosities.

Rainbow Currency.

The most striking paper currency in the world is the 100 ruble note of Russia, which is barred from top to bottom with all the colors of the rainbow, blended as when a sun ray passes through a prism. In the center in bold relief is a finely executed vignette in black. The remainder of the engraving on the note is in dark and light brown ink.

VATICAN OPTIMISTIC ON PEACE PROSPECT

Initiative Said to Have Come from Germany.

Rome, Aug. 13.—It is apparent that a much more optimistic feeling over the prospects for peace, prevails at the Vatican. Two weeks ago the situation appeared hopeless, but now it is whispered unofficially that the pope has hopes that some arrangement whereby the world war may be ended by Christmas if possible.

The initiative upon which the new optimism is founded appears to have come from Germany, which unvanquished and still powerful enough indefinitely to continue the war, finds herself in a situation where she can hold out the olive branch without being considered a suppliant.

Peace terms already hinted of do not contemplate that Germany will reap any territorial advantage or increase her power—the basis will be the safeguarding of all her liberties and equal terms with all other nations.

No details are forthcoming and it may be some time before any definite stage is reached.

COUPLE IMITATE THE MOVIES

Carried Away by Film Elopements They Try Real Thing.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug., 13.—Because she considered a regular marriage with many guests commonplace after seeing the romantic affairs shown on the screen in motion picture theaters, Agnes J. Allman, of Huntington, Ind., insisted on an elopement when Robert A. Jackson, of that city, proposed to her several weeks ago. The pair came to Kalamazoo and were married at the county clerk's office. Probate Judge Samuel H. Van Horn performed the ceremony. Both insisted that the marriage be kept secret.

"You know that is the way they do in the movies," said the young bride.

Plan to Bond St. Clair for Roads.

Port Huron, Mich., Aug. 13.—At a conference of a committee of the board of supervisors and the county road commissioners it was decided to submit at the coming fall election a proposition to bond the county for $500,000 for the construction of good roads. A plan is being outlined for the construction of 158 miles of gravel roads and 40 miles of state trunk line highway roads.

Movie Writer Is Missing.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Aug. 13.—The police have been asked to search for Mrs. Ella Hooper, a writer of movies, who left this city in June for California to be gone a month, after which she was to go to Egypt on a contract for one of the leading moving picture producing concerns in the west to write a series of photo plays.

Highwayman Keeps Dime.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Aug. 13.—A friendly holdup man poked a weapon into the face of Charles Williams. Williams had 20 cents and the highwayman after satisfying himself that this was the total of Williams' fortune returned a dime for car fare.

WILSON AT HELM IN MEXICAN ROW

President Approves Note of Pan-American Congress.

CONFERS ON MOVES OF WAR

Carranza Publishes New Manifesto Denouncing "A, B, C" Session, in Which Aid Pledges Defense of National Autonomy—Villa Truce Offer Denied by His Agents.

The president conferred at length with Secretary Lansing. It was announced then he had approved the appeal for peace prepared by the Latin-American conference in New York yesterday; that it had been signed by the Secretary of State and the representatives of the Latin republics and that it would be sent to the Mexican leaders as soon as the state department prepared it for transmission.

The president conferred also with Secretary of the Navy Daniels, regarding the disposition of the three battleships, Louisiana, New Hampshire and Conecticut, ordered to report in "Southern waters." Afterward it was announced the orders to the battleships will not be changed.

Another Batallion to Border.

General Funston, in command of the border, reported he had sent another battalion of infantry to the Brownsville, Tex., district. An appeal was received from Governor Ferguson of Texas for more troops in the lower Rio Grande valley.

The Carranza agency here gave out a communication from the Argentine government to Carranza, announcing it had been agreed, before the Pan-American conference began, that "no action or design" which might mean interference in the internal affairs of Mexico was contemplated.

Carranza Denounces U. S.

Carranza, through his agency, authorized the publication of a scathing arraignment of the conference, the American government and financial interests on both sides of the border, written by General Heriberto Jara, one of the Constitutionalist leaders.

The state department said Villa had made it known he was willing to agree to an armistice for the consideration of a plan for the peaceable settlement of Mexico's affairs. Villa's agency here denied this.

Carranza issued a statement that foreigners were in no danger in any of the territory controlled by his forces.

DR. PEARSON BEQUESTS FAIL

Great Fortune Largely Invested in Mexico Is Wiped Out.

Pittsfield, Mass., Aug. 13.—Trustees of the House of Mercy hospital of Pittsfield have been notified by counsel for the estate of the late Dr. Frederick S. Pearson of Great Barrington, who was lost on the Lusitania, that the estate consists largely of investments in Mexico and that these have been so depreciated in consequence of existing disturbances that the property will under the most favorable conditions be insufficient to provide the trust fund of $4,000,000 which Dr. Pearson directed should be set aside for his family before any other legacies were paid so that all the gifts to institutions and individuals will inevitably fail.

The legacy to the House of Mercy was $50,000. The will also provided for a gift of $500,000 to Tufts College and $50,000 to each of the Lowell, Mass., and Manchester, N. H., Y. M. C. A.'s and $50,000 to a general hospital in Lowell.

FLYERS BOMBARD TURK FORT

Destroyer Also Fires at Stronghold Near Smyrna.

Paris, Aug. 13.—A dispatch to the Havas News agency from Athens says it has been learned from Mytilene that British aeroplanes bombarded Zagagik, near Smyrna, destroying the barracks, the telephone offices and eight houses. A destroyer which followed the aeroplanes, also bombarded the city, in which there were said to be a large number of victims. The governor of Smyrna, fearing an attack, sent 3,000 men to re-enforce the coast defense troops, the dispatch adds.

PIN SCRATCH FATAL TO TWO

Entire Family Affected by Accident At First Thought Trivial.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Aug. 13.—Two persons of St. Louis, Mich., have died from the effects of a tiny pin scratch and two more are near death. Last Friday, Gustus F. Jones, 28, died from infection following the scratch of a pin. Tuesday, his father, A. J. Jones died under similar circumstances. Another son is complaining of pains in his hand and the mother, Mrs. Jones, is ill in bed.

Only Gusstus was injured by the pin, but physicians believe they became infected through his wound.

SPAWN FROM INLAND LAKES

Federal Government Will Also Try to Propagate Sturgeon.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 13.—State Game Warden William R. Oates says that white fish spawn for the federal government will be taken from the inland lakes of Michigan this fall.

Heretofore most of the spawn has been taken from the Detroit river. According to Warden Oates the federal government will also try to propagate sturgeon. In Michigan the sturgeon is protected by law, and Oates says that in Black lake, Alpena county, [illegible]

LUKOW IS CAPTURED BY TEUTONIC ALLIES

Germans Move Toward Petrograd; Zembrowa Occupied.

London, Aug. 13.—The victorious Austro-German forces continuing their advance toward Petrograd have occupied Lukow, according to an official announcement of the Berlin war office. Zembrowa also has been occupied. Lukow is situated forty miles northeast of the fortress of Ivangorod. Zembrowa lies about eighteen miles southeast of Lomza.

South of the Niemen troops belonging to the army of General Von Eichorn repulsed with sanguinary losses an attack begun by the Russians in the Dvina section.

South of the Narew, since Aug. 8, 4,950 prisoners have been captured.

The army of Field Marshal von Mackensen, having broken down strongly fortified Russian positions after sharp fighting, the Muscovites began a retreat along the entire front between the Bug and the Parasew, the statement adds.

FEAR BANKER WILL SUICIDE

J. R. Bean, Sullivan, Ill., Had Ambition to Own 1,000 Acres Land.

Decatur, Ill., Aug. 13.—Fear that he would end his life caused a close guard to be put about J. R. Bean, the Sullivan, Ill., neighborhood banker, who was arrested in St. Louis Monday after claims aggregating $60,000 had been filed against him in Sullivan by creditors. He suffered a complete nervous collapse and physicians refused anyone admittance to the home. Upon their arrival in Sullivan, Tuesday evening, Bean broke down completely in the sheriff's office and a physician had to be called to quiet him. Sheriff Funston believes that if he had not accidentally encountered Bean in St. Louis on Market street Tuesday, that he would have committed suicide by drowning.

Bean says that he can pay all the notes off by the sale of the land. He attributes his financial difficulties to an ambition to own 1,000 acres of land. A recent inventory of the holdings of the Bean family showed that Bean held 695 acres, his son, Walter, 115 acres, and Mrs. Bean 127 acres.

TELLER IS HELD FOR THEFT

Cedar Rapids Man Arrested After Confession, Which He Repudiated.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Aug. 13.—Leo Perrin, former paying teller of the Cedar Rapids National bank, who confessed to robbing the bank of $26,000, later repudiating the confession, was placed under arrest today.

Perrin held firmly to his story, however. He insisted that the $10,000 which bank officials recovered was obtained through a man. James Cagney of Chicago, a former Cedar Rapids resident, was the man who loaned him the money, Perrin said.

Chicago police have been asked to look for Cagney and Detective Cameron of the Cedar Rapids police has gone to help him.

225,000 Armenians Flee.

Lausanne, Switzerland (via Paris), Aug. 13.—According to a dispatch received by the Lausanne Gazette from Tiflis, under date of Aug. 60, 225,000 Armenians have abandoned their country with the retreating Russian army and are taking refuge in Transcaucasia.

Relatives Deny "Wood Nymph."

La Crosse, Wis., Aug. 13.—Heavy damage claims are threatened against the sheriff who arrested a young girl in this county on suspicion of being the widely published "wood nymph." The girl's relatives declare they will bring suit. Her name is withheld.

Chicago Woman Drowns.

San Diego, Cal., Aug. 13.—Washed ashore by the surf, the body of Mrs. Charles E. Jenks, aged about 50, was found on Coronado beach. The woman is said to have come to San Diego about ten months ago, presumably from Chicago.

TEUTONIC PLANS AROUSE BALKANS

Germans Would Violate Neutrality of Bulgaria.

TURKEY CRYING FOR SUCCOR

Entente Invaders Threaten Constantinople From Dardanelles—Invasion of Serbia and Bulgaria Will Bring Greece and Roumania Into the War On Side of Entente.

London, Aug. 13.—There now seems more lielihood than ever before that the Balkan states now bristling with armed troops, will throw themselves into the war. From the various Balkan capitals comes word that the situation is hourly becoming more menacing while from Germany and Turkey comes the news that the Austro-German alliance fearful of Turkey's fate in the Dardanelles is about to hurl an army of reinforcements across Serbia and Bulgaria to the relief of the sultan.

Such action, if taken, may and probably will induce Roumania to rush to the aid of Serbia, aligning herself at last on the side of the entente powers. A passage cut by the Germans through the northeast corner of Serbia would isolate Roumania from the west, a situation which Roumania's statesmen, leaning in favor toward the entente powers as they do, are naturally not in favor of.

From Rome it is learned on supposedly good authority that the Roumanian ministry has in fact already determined to go to Serbia's aid if Germany attempts to force a passage through that country to Bulgaria and Turkey. In the absence of thoroughly definite news respecting the situation, however, it is impossible to tell what may be expected of Roumania, although it is conceded in event the most pessimistic quarters that she is more likely to join with the entente powers than with the triple alliance, now represented by Germany, Austria and Turkey.

Germans Insist on Reaching Turkey.

In Germany the voice of the most insistent patriots has been raised in favor of instant action against Serbia and the opening of a road to the succor of Turkey. This propaganda is being led by Count Reventlow in the Tages Zeitung, who says that the time for quibbling has ceased and nothing will suffice now but the invasion of Serbia.

Meanwhile Serbia and the entente powers are doing everything in their power to renew the Balkan league, securing its sympathies to the entente powers, and thus erecting a strong barrier between Germany and Austria from Turkey.

In Constantinople notices have been given out from the mosques that Germany is about to send an army to the Dardanelles. Hope there is running to an estatic height. It is even hinted by the newspapers that the campaign against Egypt may be expected to take shape soon. It is known that Germany and Austria have massed a considerable force of men at Orsuwi in Hungary, the natural point from which to direct an invasion of Serbia. The presence of troops here is reported to have drawn strong Roumanian forces to the frontier, while the Serbians on their side of the line are making preparations for a fierce resistance to any attempt at invasion.

Bulgaria of Paramount Importance.

While Bulgaria has heretofore shown predeliction in favor of Germany and Turkey, the entente diplomats are now more confident that their offers of integrity to that country have met with approval. Bulgaria, of course, is the one most important if not the most important factor in the equation because of her geographical position, standing as she does a neutral barrier to any endeavor by the Germans to send reinforcements to Turkey.

Athens dispatches apear to indicate that Bulgaria is likely to join the entente powers. The attitude of Greece is favorable to the enemies of Germany. It is said that the American embassy at Constantinople is advising American women and children to leave the country.

Determined to Invade Serbia.

A Sofia dispatch says that the Austrian and German ministers to Bulgaria called on Premier Radoslavoff Monday to make counter proposals to those believed to have been offered by the entente representatives. It is reported that they told the premier then that Germany and Austria had definitely determined to invade Serbia and open a road to Turkey.

Congress May Meet in October.

Chicago, Aug. 13.—Congress may be convened as early as October, according to Senator James Hamilton Lewis, who has returned to his home from Washington. Desire on the part of the administration and the political leaders to clear the desks of legislative work before the national convention of next year is the reason ascribed by the Illinois senator.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound and imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Children's Summer Colds

It is wrong to neglect a cold at any time because it weakens the system and lays the sufferer open to attack from other diseases. Wet feet, sudden changes in temperature and sleeping uncovered at night cause many children's colds in summer. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound gives sure and prompt relief. Sold everywhere in Tecumseh. advt

Constipation Causes Most Ill.

Accumulated waste in your thirty feet of bowels causes absorption of poisons, tends to produce fevers, upsets digestion. You belch gas, feel stuffy, irritable, almost cranky. It isn't you—its your condition. Eliminate this poisonous waste by taking one or two Dr. King's New Life Pills tonight. Enjoy a full, free bowel movement in the morning—you feel so grateful. Get an original bottle, containing 36 pills, from your Druggist to-day for 25c. adv

Arden Drama Company

A dramatic company organized and sent out by Elias Day of the Lyceum Arts Conservatory of Chicago. President Alonzo E. Wilson says they are fully equal to Maude Adams' company, barring Miss Adams herself; an exceptional group of people exceptionally well prepared and a wonderful program afternoon and night of the third day of the Chautauqua.

TECUMSEH CHAUTAUQUA, SEPTEMBER 5—10

BOOTH LOWREY.

Booth Lowrey, who knows all the good stories that the south has coined and who is said to speak with the power of Sam Jones and the happiness of Bob Taylor. A philosopher whose thought is highly illustrated and made most entertaining by a remarkable gift of humor. He has been returned more times than any other southern speaker to scores of towns in his native land. A great and interesting attraction.

Night of the first day of the Chautauqua.

IRENE MARGARET CULLISON.

Miss Irene Margaret Cullison, graduate of the Chicago Training School For Playground Workers, district manager for the American Institute of Child Life, on the administrative board of which such men as David Starr Jordan, G. Stanley Hall and Ben Lindsey are serving, is a celebrated story teller and playground leader of much experience and great success. She is also the author of a story book for children published by the American Institute of Child Life, entitled "Mother Goose Finger Plays." Under her direction fourteen young women, all of whom are graduate playground experts, will direct organized play for the benefit of the children and their friends in more than 200 communities this summer.

The Fate of the Oneida.

One of the most extraordinary catastrophies that have befallen vessels of the United States destroyed the sloop of war Oneida in 1869. She was bound homeward with a jolly ship's company eager to see wives and sweethearts and native land once more, when not far out of port she was struck by the British steamer Bombay coming in. The stem of the Bombay cut off the stern of the Oneida. The ship was sinking rapidly, and guns of distress were immediately fired, but the Bombay steamed on her way and left the vessel to her doom. She went down, and all but one or two of her crew were drowned. The captain of the Bombay gave no other reason for his conduct than that he had Lady Eyre, the wife of a distinguished British satrap, on board and did not wish to disturb her nerves with scenes of shipwreck. He was mobbed when he reached Yokohama, dismissed from the service, socially tabooed from that time on and died in disgrace a year or two later.

The Obstacles to Evil.

In the constitution of our nature a limit has been fixed to the triumph of evil. Falsity in theory is everywhere confronted by the facts which present themselves to every man's observation. A lie has no power to change the ordinances of God. Every day discloses its utter worthlessness until it fades away from our recollection and is numbered among the things that were. The indissoluble connection which our Creator has established between vice and misery tends also continually to arrest the progress of evil and to render odious whatever would render evil attractive.—Francis Wayland.

104 YEARS AGO

Does any one know where Pomfret is? We have in the office a day book of the year 1811. The front part has been utilized as a Scrap book but there are a number of pages with the entries in good condition the ink holding its color well.

The prices are all in Shillings and pence, and it is quite interesting to note some of them, especially as in most every entry there was either gin or rum. The store was a general one as groceries and dry goods have equal attention. March 19 1811 Dr. Thos. Hubbard is charged with 10c postage paid on a letter.

It would interest any one to call in, and look over the book as it is in wonderful condition for its age 104 years.

WM. PILLSBURY

Wm. Pillsbury was born June 5th 1865 in Hemlock, Livingston Co N. Y. and departed this life at his home in Benton Harbor, August 1, 1915 aged 50 years 1 month 20 days after a lingering illness of two years.

He was the oldest and only son of James H. and Nellie Pillsbury having three sisters Mrs. Ida McEvoy, Mrs Millie Holmes and Mrs. Ola Long. He came to Michigan with his parents when but 7 years of age settling on a farm in Livingston where he lived twelve years moving from there to Locust, Pitsford township where he spent most of his boyhood years and where he lost both father and mother.

October 29 1892 he was married to Miss Effie Howard to this union were born two daughters Nellie and Venita Later they moved to Tecumseh where they lived till about a year ago, when they moved to Benton Harbor.

He was an honest upright citizen, beloved by his friends and all who knew him giving deeds of kindness and kind words to all. His every thought was how to make his home happy. He often said he would like to get better, but it was Gods will. He was a member of the Masonic order and the Modern Woodmen. His wife, two daughters, a son-in-law and two sisters with a large circle of friends mourn him.

Circles.

Circles are things in which people move and reason.

Those who move in circles imagine that they make the world go round, and those who reason in circles are positive of it. However, a wheel is really the only thing that can move in a circle and get anywhere.

Society has circles, especially under its eyes. Those who move in social circles move because they are so uneasy they cannot keep still.

Marital jars and connubial pugilism influence the belief that the family circle might frequently be termed a ring with equal appropriateness.

The girl who has many graceful curves generally has a large circle of admirers.—Life.

A Prose Poem on Mackerel.

I can't overemphasize the beauty of these fish. You must see them for yourself to grasp the reason for my enthusiasm.

Examine them. Look at the shape of them.

Look at that fine, solid nose, that beautiful firm back, that powerful two blade propeller shaped tail.

Study the stripes and dots.

No two were ever seen alike. The variations are simply infinite. The flesh is fit for the gods!

What a thing of beauty a mackerel is!—New York Globe.

A Warm Invitation.

The supreme court of Illinois in Aniger versus the people of Illinois, 84 Ill., 486, held that the following was not a challenge to fight a duel, but seemed rather to invite one:

"Sir—It appears that a nife is your feverite of settling fuses and if so bea the case you can consider that it will sute me you are a Cowerd and dareent to except of my offer. I want the same chanse of sharpenin' mi nife you can set the day and I will be on hand • • • come uplike a man chuse your man an I will chuse mine this thing must be settled iam not a cowerd."—Chicago Tribune.

CITIZENS OF TECUMSEH

Last year you seemed so well pleased with the Chautauqua program that sixty men signed their names to a contract which would guarantee a chautauqua for 1915. The program for [illegible] entirely new. I have word from some of the places where the same program has been given this year and the reports are very favorable. So we are assured that we will have a good thing.

Now I want to explain how you can help the guarentors who have made possible this years chautauqua. If you buy a season ticket, which for adults is $1.50 and for youths between 8 and 15 is $1.00. The money all goes to the Tecumseh committee. If you buy single admission tickets, three-fourths go to the company furnishing the program. Besides if you were to go to every session it would cost you $4.00 by the single admission rate, whereas by buying a season ticket you secure the 12 lectures and entertainments for $1.50. Will you all take this matter to heart and purchase your season ticket early thereby relieving the anxiety of those in charge.

Tickets can be had at both banks and nearly all the business men have taken some to dispose of. Please do not wait to be asked to purchase your tickets but purchase them this week.

The Date is September 5—10.

The Chautauqua will be held in a large tent and at the same place as last year.

W. B. HARTZOG,
Manager.

UNDERWOOD—EXELBY REUNION

The Underwood—Exelby reunion was held Saturday, August 14, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Will Osterhout with about a hundred in attendance.

A large canvas tent was raised on the lawn where a bountiful picnic dinner was served. Later a fine program of music, recitations and speeches was given.

Guests were present from Ann Arbor, Detroit, Britton, Deerfield, Columbus Grove and other towns. The day was a most delightful one and the renewing of old friendships and the remembrance of the days of long ago was enjoyed by everyone present.

ENTERTAINED

Mrs. Howard Bredow very pleasantly entertained a party of friends at her home on West Chicago St. Friday afternoon. 500 furnished the amusement of the hour, prizes being awarded to Mrs. F. S. Turner and Mrs. Emily Hall.

Those who were present to enjoy her hospitality were Mesdames, R. S. Moore, Harry Moore, Floyd Elliott, Emily Hall, F. S. Anderson, C H Williamson, F S. Turner, H. S. Wilson, F. G. Lewis, P. B. Hardy and Miss Ethel Garlinghouse. The out of town guests were Miss Gussie Turner of Flint and Mrs. Frank Osborn and daughter Margaret of Columbus Ohio, Dainty refreshments were served at the close of the games followed by social visiting.

As the guests departed they voted Mrs Bredow a fine entertainer and the afternoon a delightful one.

MAPES FAMILY REUNION

The 18th reunion of the Mapes family was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs N. A. Bailey Wednesday August 11 with 54 members in attendance.

At noon a splendid dinner was served, after which a business meeting was held with Arthur Mapes presiding in the absence of the President. The following officers were elected for the coming year,

Pres.,—A P. Hardy, Tipton
Vice Pres.,—A. Mapes, Madison
Sec., and Treas.,—Mrs. A Bailey Adrian,

A short program was then given.

Music—Luena Mapes
Rec.,—Corinne Mapes
Song,—Mrs. Sarah Turner
Rec.,—Leola Hardy
Music—Mrs. A. Mapes
Rec.,—E. Mapes

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Emery extended an invitation for next year which was unanimously accepted. After a social hour ice cream and cake were served after which the guests began taking leave. Guests were present from Devils Lake, Woodstock, Rome, Tipton, Madison, Jasper, Adrian, North Adrian. All join in the hope that they may meet another year.

UNFORTUNATE ACCIDENT

Mrs. Robert Quackenbush went to Raisin Friday morning to visit her daughter Mrs. Floyd Powell. About 9 o'clock Mrs. Powell suggested that they drive to the home of her uncle Will Grey a mile and a half distant to visit with the grandmother who keeps house for her son.

As they neared the house they heard groans from the bed room, where they found Mrs. Grey on the bed with a broken hip. She had her mornings work done up and was combing her hair when she fell with the above result. She was alone at the time of the accident and but for their timely coming would have been alone until noon when her son would come for his dinner.

Doctors were summoned at once, but were unable to set the break, but made her as comfortable as possible. The accident was most unfortunate as Mrs. Grey is well along in the eighties and has not the vitality to withstand the shock as she would have if younger.

The Secret of a Good Figure often lies in the brassiere. Hundreds of thousands of women wear the Bien-Jolie Brassiere for the reason that they regard it as necessary as a corset. It supports the bust and back and gives the figure the youthful outline fashion decrees.

BIEN JOLIE BRASSIERES are the daintiest, most serviceable garments imaginable. Only the best of materials are used—for instance, "Walohn", a flexible boning of great durability—absolutely rustless—permitting laundering without removal.

They come in all styles, and your local Dry Goods dealer will show them to you on request. If he does not carry them, he can easily get them for you by writing to us. Send for an illustrated booklet showing styles that are in high favor.

THE FORESTER'S DAUGHTER

A ROMANCE OF THE BEAR TOOTH RANGE

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1914, by Hamlin Garland

She hastened to interpose. "Let me do that, daddy, Mr. Norcross is badly used up. You see, we started down here late yesterday afternoon. It was raining and horribly muddy, and I took the wrong trail. The darkness caught us, and we didn't reach the station till nearly midnight."

Wayland acknowledged his weakness. "I guess I made a mistake, supervisor; I'm not fitted for this strenuous life."

McFarlane was quick to understand. "I didn't intend to pitchfork you into the forest life quite so suddenly," he said. "Don't give up yet awhile. You'll harden to it."

"Here comes Tony," said Berrie. "He'll look after the ponies."

Nevertheless Wayland went out, believing that Berrie wished to be alone with her father for a short time.

As he took his seat McFarlane said: "You stayed in camp till yesterday afternoon, did you?"

"Yes, we were expecting you every moment."

He saw nothing in this to remark upon. "Did it snow at the lake?"

"Yes, a little; it mostly rained."

"It stormed up on the divide like a January blizzard. When did Moore and his party arrive?"

"About 10 o'clock this morning."

"I'll ride right up and see them. What about the outfit? That's at the lake, I reckon?"

"Yes, I was just sending Tony after it. But, father, if you go up to Moore's camp don't say too much about what has happened. Don't tell them just when you took the back trail and just how long Wayland and I were in camp."

"Why not?"

She reddened with confusion. "Because— You know what an old gossip Mrs. Belden is. I don't want her to know. She's an awful talker, and our being together up there all that time will give her a chance."

A light broke in on the supervisor's brain. In the midst of his preoccupation as a forester he suddenly became the father. His eyes narrowed and his face darkened. "That's so. The old rip could make a whole lot of capital out of your being left in camp that way. At the same time I don't believe in dodging. The worst thing we could do would be to try to blind the trail. Was Tony here last night when you came?"

"No; he was down the valley after his mail."

His face darkened again. "That's another piece of bad luck too. How much does the old woman know at present?"

"Nothing at all."

"Didn't she cross examine you?"

"Sure she did, but Wayland side tracked her. Of course it only delays things. She'll know all about it sooner or later. She's great at putting two and two together. Two and two with her always make five."

McFarlane mused. "Cliff will be plumb crazy if she gets his ear first."

"I don't care anything about Cliff, daddy. I don't care what he thinks or does if he will only let Wayland alone."

"See here, daughter, you do seem to be terribly interested in this tourist."

"He's the finest man I ever knew, father."

He looked at her with tender, trusting glance. "He isn't your kind, daughter. He's a nice clean boy, but he's different. He don't belong in our world. He's only just stopping here. Don't forget that."

"I'm not forgetting that, daddy. I know he's different. That's why I like him." After a pause she added: "Nobody could have been nicer all through these days than he has been. He was like a brother."

McFarlane fixed a keen glance upon her. "Has he said anything to you? Did you come to an understanding?"

Her eyes fell. "Not the way you mean, daddy, but I think he—likes me. But do you know who he is? He's the son of W. W. Norcross, that big Michigan lumberman."

McFarlane started. "How do you know that?"

"Mr. Moore asked him if he was any relation to W. W. Norcross, and he said, 'Yes, a son.' You should have seen how that Moore girl changed her tune the moment he admitted that. She'd been very free with him up to that time. But when she found out he was a rich man's son she became as quiet and innocent as a kitten. I hate her! She's a deceitful snip!"

"Well, now, daughter, that being the case, it's all the more certain that he don't belong to our world, and you mustn't fix your mind on keeping him here."

"A girl can't help fixing her mind, daddy."

"Or changing it." He smiled a little. "You used to like Cliff. You liked him well enough to promise to marry him."

"I know I did. But I despise him now."

"Poor Cliff! But the thing we've got to guard against is old lady Belden's tongue. She and that Belden gang have it in for me, and all that has kept them from open war has been Cliff's relationship to you. They'll take a keen delight in making the worst of all this camping business." McFarlane was now very grave. "I wish your mother was here this minute. I guess we had better cut out this timber cruise and go right back."

"No, you mustn't do that. That would only make more talk. Go on with your plans. I'll stay here with you. It won't take you but a couple of days to do the work, and Wayland needs the rest."

"But suppose Cliff hears of this business between you and Norcross and comes galloping over the ridge?"

"Well, let him. He has no claim on me."

He rose uneasily. "It's all mighty risky business, and it's my fault. I should never have permitted you to start on this trip."

"Don't you worry about me, daddy. I'll pull through somehow. Anybody that knows me will understand how little there is in—in old lady Belden's gab. I've had a beautiful trip, and I won't let her nor anybody else spoil it for me."

Wayland was down on the bridge leaning over the rail listening to the song of the water.

McFarlane approached gravely, but when he spoke it was in his usual soft monotone. "Mr. Norcross," he began, with candid inflection, "I am very sorry to say it, but I wish you and my daughter had never started on this trip."

"I know what you mean, supervisor, and I feel as you do about it. Of course none of us foresaw any such complication as this, but now that we are snarled up in it we'll have to make the best of it. No one of us is to blame. It was all accidental."

The youth's frank words and his sympathetic voice disarmed McFarlane completely. Even the slight resentment he felt melted away. "It's no use saying 'if,'" he remarked at length. "What we've got to meet is Seth Belden's report—Berrie has cut loose from Cliff, and he's red headed already. When he drops on to this story, when he learns that I had to chase back after the horses and that you and Berrie were alone together for three days, he'll have a fine club to swing, and he'll swing it, and Alec will help him. They're all waiting a chance to get me, and they're mean enough to get me through my girl."

"What can I do?" asked Wayland.

McFarlane pondered. "I'll try to head off Marm Belden and I'll have a talk with Moore. He's a pretty reasonable chap."

"But you forget there's another tale bearer. Moore's daughter is with them."

"That's so. I'd forgotten her. Good Lord, we are in for it! There's no use trying to cover anything up."

Here was the place for Norcross to speak up and say, "Never mind, I'm going to ask Berrie to be my wife." But he couldn't do it. Something rose in his throat which prevented speech. A strange repugnance, a kind of sullen resentment at being forced into a declaration kept him silent, and McFarlane, disappointed, wondering and hurt, kept silence also.

Norcross was the first to speak. "Of course those who know your daughter will not listen for an instant to the story of an unclean old thing like Mrs. Belden."

"I'm not so sure about that," replied the father gloomily. "People always listen to such stories, and a girl always gets the worst of a situation like this. Berrie's been brought up to take care of herself, and she's kept clear of criticism so far, but with Cliff on edge and this old rip snooping around"— His mind suddenly changed. "Your being the son of a rich man won't help any. Why didn't you tell me who you were?"

"I didn't think it necessary. What difference does it make? I have nothing to do with my father's business. His notions of forest speculation are not mine."

"It would have made a difference with me, and it might have made a difference with Berrie. She mightn't have been so free with you at the start if she'd known who you were. You looked sick and kind of lonesome, and that worked on her sympathy."

"I was sick and I was lonesome, and she has been very sweet and lovely to me, and it breaks my heart to think that her kindness and your friendship should bring all this trouble and suspicion upon her. Let's go up to the Moore camp and have it out with them. I'll make any statement you think best."

"I reckon the less said about it the better," responded the older man. "I'm going up to the camp, but not to talk about my daughter."

"How can you help it? They'll force the topic."

"If they do I'll force them to let it alone," retorted McFarlane, but he went away disappointed and sorrowful.

When the supervisor returned from the camp something in his manner revealed the fact that the situation had not improved.

"They forced me into a corner," he said peevishly. "I lied out of one night, but they know that you were here last night. Of course they were respectful enough so long as I had an eye on them, but their tongues are wagging now."

As bedtime drew near Settle took a blanket and went to the corral, and Berrie insisted that her father and Wayland occupy the bunk.

Norcross protested, but the supervisor said: "Let her alone. She's better able to sleep on the floor than either of us."

This was perfectly true; but, in spite of his bruised and aching body, the youth would gladly have taken her place beside the stove. It seemed pitifully unjust that she should have this physical hardship in addition to her uneasiness of mind.

Berea suffered a restless night, the most painful and broken she had known in all her life. She acknowledged that Siona Moore was prettier and that she stood more nearly on Wayland's plane than herself, but the realization of this fact did not bring surrender. She was not of that temper. All her life she had been called upon to combat the elements, to hold her own amid rude men and inconsiderate women, and she had no intention of yielding her place to a pert coquette, no matter what the gossips might say.

"She shall not have her way with Wayland," she decided. "I know what she wants—she wants him at her side tomorrow. But I will not have it so. She is trying to get him away from me."

The more she dwelt on this the hotter her jealous fever burned. The floor on which she lay was full of knots. She could not lose herself in sleep, tired as she was. The planks no longer turned their soft spots to her flesh, and she rolled from side to side in torment.

Her plan of action was simple. "I shall go home tomorrow and take Wayland with me. I will not have him going with that girl; that's settled."

The hard trip of the day before had seemingly done him no permanent injury. On the contrary, a few hours' rest had almost restored him to his normal self. "Tomorrow he will be able to ride again." And this thought reconciled her to her hard bed. She did not look beyond the long, delicious day which they must spend in returning to the Springs.

She fell asleep at last and was awakened only by her father tinkering about the stove.

CHAPTER XI.

The Camp on the Pass.

As soon as she was alone with her father Berrie said, "I'm going home today, dad."

"Going home! What for?"

"I've had enough of it."

He glanced at her bed on the floor. "I can't say I blame you any."

"Oh, I don't mind sleeping on the floor," she replied. "But I want to get back. I don't want to meet those women. Another thing, you'd better use Mr. Norcross at the Springs instead of leaving him here with Tony."

"Why so?"

"Well, he isn't quite well enough to run the risk. It's a long way from here to a doctor."

"He 'pears to be on deck this morning. Besides, I haven't anything in the office to offer him."

"Then send him up to Meeker. Landon needs help, and he's a better forester than Tony anyway."

"I don't know but you're right. Landon is almost as good a hustler as Tony and a much better forester. I thought of sending Norcross up there at first, but he told me that Frank and his gang had it in for him. Of course he's only nominally in the service, but I want him to begin right."

Berrie went further. "I want him to ride back with me today."

He looked at her with grave inquiry. "Do you think that a wise thing to do? Won't that make more talk?"

"We'll start early and ride straight through."

"You'll have to go by Lost lake, and that means a long, hard hike. Can he stand it?"

"If I find we can't make it I'll pull into a ranch. But I'm sure we can."

When Wayland came in the supervisor inquired, "Do you feel able to ride back over the hill today?"

"Entirely so. It isn't the riding that uses me up, it is the walking, and, besides, as a candidate for promotion I must obey orders—especially orders to march."

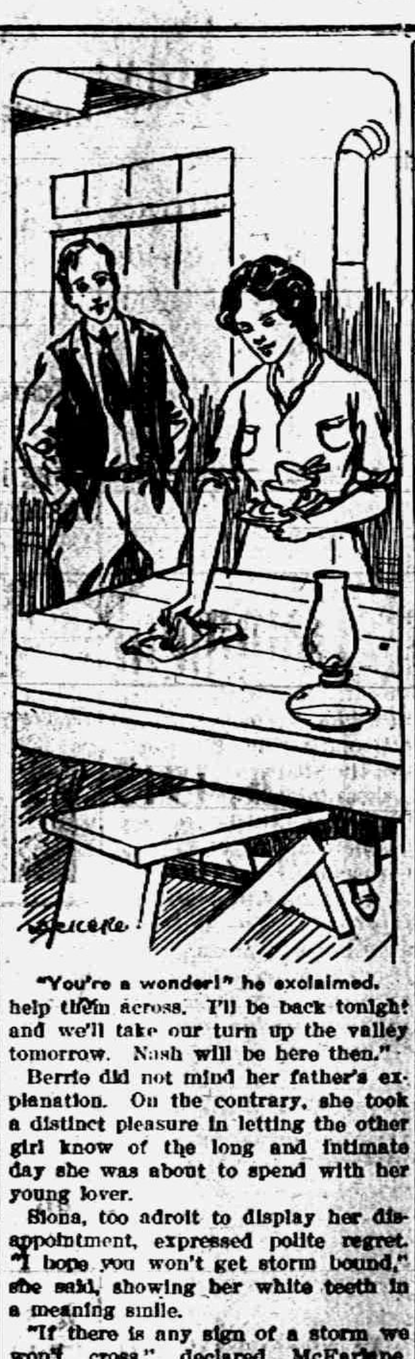
They breakfasted hurriedly and while McFarlane and Tony were bringing in the horses Wayland and Berrie set the cabin to rights. Working thus side by side, she recovered her dominion over him and at the same time regained her own cheerful self confidence.

"You're a wonder!" he exclaimed as he watched her deft adjustment of the dishes and furniture. "You're ambidextrous."

"I have to be to hold my job," she laughingly replied. "A feller must play all the parts when he's up here."

It was still early morning as they mounted and set off up the trail, but Moore's camp was astir, and as McFarlane turned in—much against Berrie's will—the lumberman and his daughter both came out to meet them. "Come in and have some breakfast," said Siona, with cordial inclusiveness, while her eyes met Wayland's glance with mocking glee.

"Thank you," said McFarlane, "we can't stop. I'm going to set my daughter over the divide. She has had enough camping, and Norcross is pretty well battered up, so I'm going to help them across. I'll be back tonight and we'll take our turn up the valley tomorrow. Nash will be here then."



"You're a wonder!" he exclaimed.

Berrie did not mind her father's explanation. On the contrary, she took a distinct pleasure in letting the other girl know of the long and intimate day she was about to spend with her young lover.

Siona, too adroit to display her disappointment, expressed polite regret. "I hope you won't get storm bound," she said, showing her white teeth in a meaning smile.

"If there is any sign of a storm we won't cross," declared McFarlane. "We're going round by the lower pass, anyhow. If I'm not here by dark you may know I've stayed to set 'em down at the mill."

There was charm in Siona's alert poise and in the neatness of her camp dress. Her dainty tent, with its stools and rugs, made the wilderness seem but a park. She reminded Norcross of the troops of tourists of the Tyrol, and her tent was of a kind to harmonize with the tea houses on the path to the summit of the Matterhorn. Then, too something triumphantly feminine shone in her bright eyes and glowed in softly rounded cheeks. Her hand was little and pointed, not fitted like Berrie's for tightening a cinch or wielding an ax, and as he said "Goodby" he added, "I hope I shall see you again soon," and at the moment he meant it.

Fourth row—1 tr. into center space of first group, * 5 ch., 1 d.c. under the top of the treble just made, 1 tr. into same space, and continue making these treble with picot at top until there are six all in the same space, 1 d.c. under the chain between the groups, 1 tr. into center space of next group, and repeat from * all along.

Useful Crochet Edging.—Abbreviations: ch., chain; d. c., double crochet; tr., treble. This narrow crochet edging is useful for trimming lingerie of all kinds, and is illustrated actual width. Materials: White crochet cotton No. 40 and a No. 6 steel hook. Begin with 10 chain and join into a ring with a slip-stitch.

First row—11 d. c. into ring, 4 ch., turn.

Second row—Miss one double crochet, 1 d. c. in next, 4 ch., miss one double crochet, 1 d. c. in next; repeat from * three times, 4 ch., turn.

Third row—* 1 d. c. in next hole of four chain, 4 ch., 1 d. c. in same hole, 4 ch.; repeat from * twice, 1 d. c. in next hole, 8 ch., 1 d. c. in next, 1 ch., turn.

Fifth row—Miss one double crochet, 1 d. c. in next, * 4 ch., miss one double crochet, 1 d. c. in next; repeat from * three times, 4 ch., turn.

Repeat the third, fourth and fifth rows once, and at the end of the eighth row only make 2 ch., to turn.

Ninth row—Like the third after the two chain to turn previous row are worked; work a double crochet into the second loop of previous fan on same side, then work 1 ch., and proceed as usual for third row. Work the fourth and fifth rows as usual, then to continue length of lace work from third to fifth row, joining each fan at beginning of third row as described.

Border—Join the thread on to the first loop of a fan and work 3 ch. (for one treble); * 5 ch., miss a loop, 1 tr. in next, 5 ch., miss a loop, 1 tr. in next (on next fan), and repeat from * along the length of lace.

Second row—5 d. c. in loop of five chain, 1 d. c., in treble, 7 d. c. in loop of six chain, 1 d. c. in treble, and repeat.

Roumania.

The population of Roumania is about 6,000,000 and is composed of four distinct divisions or departments—the Moldavian and Oltenic, who are tall, fine men, many being exceedingly handsome, and who are principally mountaineers, and the Valachie and the Dobridge, who are mostly of Turkish origin. The population also includes 200,000 gypsies. There are believed to be about 4,000,000 Roumanians outside the Roumanian kingdom.

Exposition Coins.

The San Francisco mint has struck 25,000 "exposition coins," which, although offered for sale at double their value, are rapidly finding their way into the hands of collectors. They range from fifty dollar gold pieces down to half dollars. The fifty dollar gold piece—the first coin of that denomination ever authorized by congress—bears on the obverse side the head of a laborer and on the reverse side two dolphins.

Russia's New Port.

An important railroad is being built northward from Petrograd to a point on the Arctic ocean near the Norwegian frontier, about 500 miles west of Archangel, on a portion of the arctic coast line reached by the end of the gulf stream, which makes the climate at that point much milder than at Archangel. A port will be created there that should never become icebound, as Archangel is in winter.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Diet For Diabetics.

Dr. Arnold Lorand of Carlsbad, a famous specialist in diabetes and author of a book on the subject, says that the following foods may be eaten by persons suffering from a tendency to diabetes: Milk, rice, eggs, green vegetables in large quantities, especially spinach; white fleshed fish, cakes made of buckwheat from which the cellulose has been removed, macaroni, spaghetti, butter, small quantities of rye and graham bread, potatoes (fried or in the form of salad), oyster plant, cauliflower, salads, apples cooked or raw, strawberries, cranberries, huckleberries, oranges and most fruits.

The same authority forbids the following: Sugar, meat, meat soups, lentils, peas and beans (except the string beans), most of the cereals, white bread, candy, beer and other alcoholic drinks.

If some sweetening be desired in coffee and tea saccharin may be used, but it should be remembered that this is more than 600 times as sweet as sugar, so a very minute quantity of it is enough.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Best Antiseptic Ointment.

Drs. Robert A. Keilty and Jesse E. Packer of Philadelphia have been making a careful analysis of the antiseptic qualities of the various substances used for keeping wounds clean.

The antiseptic for general use that they find gives the best results and that they recommend in the Journal of the American Medical Association is made as follows:

Thymol and tricresol, of each 10 per cent in a base composed of, castor oil, 70 parts; white wax, 20 parts, and spermaceti, 10 parts.

The recipe as given can be put up by any druggist and is inexpensive.

His Old Schoolmate Put a Crimp In His Peppery Temper.

The magnate looked up impatiently from his work.

"I guess you don't remember me, Hank," faltered the caller.

The money king frowned as he heard the old name by which none had dared to address him for years.

"You an' me useter go swimmin' together in the ol' town," went on the rustic. "We was boys together an' in purty much the same circumstances. Your dad an' my dad"—

"Yes, yes," interrupted the Croesus impatiently.

"Well, you got a job in the bank, an' I got a job in the grocery store. That made all the diffrunce."

"This is all very—er—interesting, but get to the point. I seem to remember your face, but"—

"Yes, Hank, you got a better start an' left the ol' village, but I kep' a-pluggin' along in the grocery store. It was purty hard to make both ends meet, an' "—

"Well, well! I see—same old story. You want money, I suppose, and"—

"You always was a smart one, Hank. When you left the village you owed $78.03 on a grocery bill. Here's where you come acrost, you darned old skinflint!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A LAUGH IS A TONIC.

It Aids Digestion and Tends to Good Health and Long Life.

There are people who take life too seriously. They allow their souls to be eaten up with cares and anxieties. Many worries are useless and help nothing. Bits of humor are lost on these persons. They wonder how any one can be so thoughtless about the realities of life.

In all the animal creation laughter is given to man alone, given him, like all other faculties, to make the best of. Laughter, it is true, is not for all times and occasions, but it has its place and is necessary to our well being. A laugh is a cure for many ills. It aids digestion and so tends to good health. It prolongs life. Laughter often settles a disagreement and prevents real troubles. Hard working business and professional men sometimes forget to laugh. The strain of work grips them hard, and they get old before their time.

The ability to see the humorous side of an accident, a mistake or a folly, is a great aid in making life more endurable. Laughter overdone, like all virtues carried to excess, is a vice or a folly. Cultivate your sense of humor. Better to laugh too often than not to laugh often enough.

Who laughs knows no defeat.

—Milwaukee Journal.

BREAKING INTO PRINT.

One Writer's First Little Check and the Way He Spent It.

Richard Harding Davis, says the London Strand Magazine, is one of those fortunate men whose short stories can always command a thousand dollars and over. How he "broke into print" is an interesting little history.

"It was while at Lehigh university," he says, "that I earned my first sum for writing. It was a description of a cane rush at the university, and I sent it to a local paper. It was published, and a few days later I received a check for the large sum of $1.15. I have received larger checks since then, but the biggest of them never gave me the thrill that that one did.

"Just as soon as I cashed that check I sallied out to buy 'something' with it—I had no idea what—and in my search I found two very nice looking candlesticks which, I think, were about the price of the story I had sold. I bought them. They were made of brass and seemed very solid and handsome. One I sent to my mother, and the other I kept for myself. They are still in existence, I believe, a shining witness to the first fracture I made in my youthful endeavor to 'break into print.'"

Fright and White Hair.

The popular belief that the hair of persons laboring under great mental grief or terror changes color seems to be unfounded. Under certain conditions of bodily health the coloring matter of the hair ceases to be supplied, and the hair may consequently become gray or white in a very short time. In these cases, however, it is only the growing hair that has no color, the hair as it gradually rises from the root is gray, while that which is outside the cuticle retains its original color. No well authenticated case of sudden change in the color of the hair is mentioned in the "Transactions of the Royal Society," extending over 200 years, whereas if any such circumstance had occurred it is almost certain it would have been recorded. The case of Marie Antoinette, which is most frequently cited, does not rest upon evidence sufficiently strong to warrant belief.—Philadelphia Press.

Leaning Tower In England.

The famous leaning tower of Pisa has a rival in the Temple tower of Bristol, in England. It is a square tower of early Gothic architecture. All its parts still preserve their normal relative positions without cracks or fissures. The tower, which is about 115 feet high, is five feet out of perpendicular at the summit. There are no records to show whether the inclination was part of the architect's design or whether it is the result of an earthquake or of slow changes in the inclination of the soil. For many years there has been no change in the slope of the tower.

Do You Worry?

The good worrier is a poor worker. Men who worry never arrive anywhere. They go by fits and starts. Some time you started a bank account, but you didn't keep it up. You had so many things on your mind. You were worried about this and about that. You hadn't the time to give to piling up money in the bank. Cut that habit of worrying out. Pitch in and work. Bank every dollar you possibly can. Get it into the bank at once. Keep at it and the time will come when you will have no cause to worry.

An account with this bank will aid you in many ways besides the money you will receive in interest.

Your account—large or small—will be appreciated at

Gents Furnishings and Shoes

J. R. NYLAND

About the neatest business place on the street is that conducted by John R Nyland, This spring he put up a steel ceiling and this fall is putting in steam heat. The whole interior shines with new paint and varnish and is very inviting

John was brought up in the shoe business, his father Henry Nyland being a shoe manufacturer and salesman. The latter began to [illegible] sell shoes here in 1857 and in 1862 moved into the store which John now occupies. Nineteen years ago the elder Nyland sold the business to the Karner Bros., but John was not at home in any other business so ten years ago put a new stock in the same building and started in business for himself. He carries a large line of everything in foot wear and pushes particularly the Emerson shoe for men, the Sherwood Shoe Co. and J. & K. shoes for ladies and the Bubb shoes for children, which are most dependable merchandise as J. R. makes that his slogan.

JOHN R. NYLAND

J. R. is now village president, on his second term and like many of our business men a great lodge man. In the business he finds Mrs. Nyland no small help and as ever when the two work together the business is bound to be successful.

J J BELCHER

John J. Belcher and his estimable wife came from Leslie to Tecumseh in 1899 and he opened a shoe store in which business he has been ever since being most ably assisted by Mrs Belcher Since coming on our business street Mr Belcher has moved his stock three times which is said to be as good as a fire To prevent any further conflagration he purchased the building he now occupies which was formerly the Tecumseh State Savings Bank building.

His happy manner and friendliness drew him trade from the first until now he certainly has a splendid business. He is featuring the Walkover goods strongly and has an excellent shoe mender established at the store now.

J. J. BELCHER

"Babies fitted without getting mad."

Mr, Belcher is a strong Republican, being on the county committee at present. His work for the party was recognized at Leslie as under Harrison's administration he was appointed postmaster at that city and a short time ago his brother George who is just as ardent a Democrat was appointed postmaster in the same place,

Our Mr. Belcher claims to give all his attention to the shoe business but Mrs. Belcher assures us that he spends some time with his high bred fowls and shoulders more of the business upon her which she does not consider in the bargain they made so many years ago.

Mr Belcher is president of the Commerce club and assuredly the old town has been waking up since he took the office.

J. M. JONES & SON

For more than 30 years James Jones has been the village tailor as was his father David Jones before him. When the former's son Wade became large enough to work he too was connected with the establishment but he was too restless to be statisfied with just sewing all day. He had to add some thing which would take him up on his feet so to the tailoring establishment he added three years ago a line of gents' furnishing goods. The business increased so rapidly that a larger store became necessary. They moved last August into their present quarters. The large front room makes an excellent show room for their stock [illegible] a man or boy can completely equip himself with the exception of shoes. The back room gives more room for the tailoring department where nine workmen and women are busy nearly all the time.

The Stadium line of ready made clothing is carried in the stock so you can have either Tecumseh made tailoring or that from abroad. They have also a complete line of hats and caps and have a much larger supply of furnishing goods that in the former location. This is tastily displayed in cabinets and silent salesmen and you are waited upon by Allen McNiel most efficiently.

McCANN & BOWEN

It was on April 15, 1893, that James and Thomas McCann opened their retail clothing store on the four corners with a new stock of goods Strangers to nearly everyone in the village they soon made friends and the business was a success from the start as they took for their motto "the one price policy" and made good by it. When they first started, the post office was in the rear room of the building, but in a few years was moved to the first store east. The partition was removed, giving them the whole store and now they find it necessary to use a room above 20 ft square as a store room for extra stock. The large stock of clothing is displayed in cabinets along the west side and on crowded tables the full length of the store while the entire east side is taken up with other men's furnishings.

Some seven years ago one of our Tecumseh boys Percy Bowen by name began clerking for them and liked the business so well that February 19, 1914, he bought out James McCann and since the firm name has been McCann & Bowen. For the whole 22 years the firm has sold principally the Clothcraft line which has never failed to give satisfaction and another feature which has pleased is their custom tailoring, their made to measure suits. You can also find any thing in traveling bags and suit cases at McCann & Bowen's.

HEESEN & HEESEN

Floyd G. Lester J. Heesen purchased the Alva Spayde clothing stock in February, 1906, and opened as a new firm in the Masonic Block known as Heesen & Heesen. They put in the M. Wile & Co. "clothes of quality," and Ed Hemerstein & Co's. "Fit Form clothes" and suits "tailored to measure" also a complete line of gents furnishings and work clothes. F. G. Heesen has held the office of village clerk for two years and also is chief of the fire department Both men are always willing to accommodate their friends in any way and ready to help to the best of their ability in any movement for the benefit of the town, county, church and lodge.

Frank Pratt is taking a few weeks trip to the Panama Exposition. Miss Esther accompanied him. They will visit in Canada and various points in the States and on their return trip will visit Esthers father and family in Prosser, Wash., where she will remain for an extended visit, A neice from Blissfield went with them and will remain in San Francisco for several months with a sister.

IODIDE OF NITROGEN.

An Explosive So Deadly That to Make It Is Suicide.

Explosives are solids which under certain conditions suddenly change into heated gas occupying many times the original space of the solids.

Ordinary gunpowder when fired turns into gas, of which the volume is 4,000 times as great as that of the powder. No wonder the bullet in front of it leaves the muzzle of the rifle in a hurry.

Today there are scores, even hundreds, of different sorts of explosives known to science. Some, such as lyddite, require a very considerable shock to explode them. Others, such as nitroglycerin, are fearfully dangerous to handle, for a few extra degrees of warmth or a very slight jar is sufficient to turn them instantly into gas.

Of the latter type there is nothing quite so unstable as iodide of nitrogen. It has to be made in alcohol. When allowed to dry it appears as a brown powder, and so unstable is this powder that a touch with a feather will set it off. The experiment has been tried of leaving a few grains upon a table mixed with a few grains of sugar. The first bluebottle that flew on the table and began to crawl among the grains caused an explosion.

The mere jarring of the air by a loud shout or a heavy footstep is sufficient to detonate iodide of nitrogen, and it need hardly be added that no one in his senses would attempt to make this terrible stuff. To do so in any quantity would be equivalent to committing suicide.—Pearson's Weekly.

BRINGING UP CHILDREN.

There Are Some Curious Customs In This Queer World.

There has been much discussion over the proper bringing up of children, but ideas continue to differ. And the farther you get away from home the stranger the ideas seem.

The Filipino father cries out with proud delight as his three-year-old girl baby takes her puff at her first cigar.

Among the Seri Indians of the gulf of California the father is the last one expected to have any influence on the children. The mother rules the younger members of the family, and when she must enforce her authority by physical force she calls, not on the father, but on one of her brothers or some other male adult of her family. The father must never chastise his children.

A Navajo father administers punishment to his children very much as any other father does, but the Navajo boy has a means of protection denied to white boys. He has only to catch a rat by his own unaided efforts. From the moment he has accomplished this feat, no matter how young he may be, his father may not lay hands on him.

The children of the Point Barrow Eskimos have special training in politeness to foreigners. In conversing with strangers who make mistakes in the native dalect children must carefully note those mistakes and repeat them, even to imitating the wrong pronunciation of words. To speak correctly in such a case is likely to bring punishment from the parent of the child.—New York Sun.

Retold For Choir Singers.

One of the wealthy members of a fashionable church in Boston approached her pastor with the complaint that she was greatly disturbed by one of her neighbors.

"It's positively unbearable," said she. "That man in the pew in front of us destroys all my devotional and pious feelings when he attempts to sing. Couldn't you ask him to change his pew?"

The good pastor was sorely perplexed. After a few moments' reflection he said:

"Well, I naturally would feel a little delicacy on that score, more especially as I would have to give a reason. But I will tell you what I might do." Here the pastor's face became illuminated with a happy thought. "I might ask him to join the choir."—Harper's Magazine.

POULTRY EXHIBITORS TO BE AWARDED $2,000.

Liberal Cash Prizes Are Offered by Michigan State Fair.

Over $2,000 in cash prizes will be distributed to exhibitors in the poultry department at the State Fair, to be held at Detroit Sept. 6 to 15. In addition, $50 will be presented the county association making the best and largest exhibits and $25 to the association ranking second.

General Manager G. W. Dickinson says there seems to have been a general awakening among city residents as to the benefits to be derived from the raising of poultry, and a large number of the entries to be made this fall will be of birds owned in cities.

"The fascination of poultry raising for both city and country dwellers has been on the increase for several years," says General Manager Dickinson, "and our poultry department exhibition has grown in proportion to the added interest that is being taken in this industry.

"The city man finds that a flock of chickens helps him cut down the cost of living, and the high prices being paid for eggs and fowls make poultry raising profitable for the farmer."

TWENTY EVENTS ON THE STATE FAIR RACE PROGRAM.

Purses Total Over $14,000—Michigan Horses Will Be Entered.

The State Fair races, which will open on Labor day and continue for five days, will attract all the speedy trotters and pacers in the stables of Michigan drivers and owners, according to reports which are being received daily by G. W. Dickinson, general manager of the State Fair.

The races will be held under the auspices of the short ship circuit instead of the grand circuit, this decision having been reached in an effort to encourage the Michigan horsemen to compete in the Detroit events.

"The Fair is for Michigan people, and we want the Michigan horsemen well represented at our races," said Mr. Dickinson today. "While the time made may not be as fast as in the past, the events should be just as closely contested, and the money will go to the Michigan drivers. The races will be held on the half mile track, thus assuring the spectators of a better opportunity of viewing the trotters and pacers from start to finish."

Frigga.

Frigga, from whom Friday is derived, was either a god or a goddess, according to time and country. As a man he was a great hunter and warrior, always represented with a drawn sword in one hand and a bow in the other. In the Scandinavian countries Frigga was called the "Venus of the North," and the sixth day of the week was consecrated to her worship.—London Mail.

A Shade of Doubt.

The young author, reading a fake animal story to the attentive editor, said:

"Whereupon the woodchuck laughed softly to himself."

WALL PAPERS AND LIGHT.

New Money May Be Wasted by Selecting the Wrong Colors.

"Talk about handing out free gas ranges or renting them out at a nominal rental," said a man in the employ of a gas company; "there is another item that encourages gas consumption, and that is wall papers.

"If I were running the business I would hand out free wall papers. But I would do the choosing. Rich deep greens and browns—they are the colors that bring up your bills and our profits."

How many people realize that a big percentage of their gas money may be sunk into their walls and wasted? It may be only a matter of color of your wall paper whether you light one or three burners.

White walls, of course, absorb the least light, only 30 per cent, but nearly everybody wants some color to meet the eye. A chrome yellow absorbs only 38 per cent. Paper of an orange shade robs you only of 50 per cent of your light.

It is when you get into the reds and greens and browns that the light begins to dim. A dark green wall paper, so restful to the eye, absorbs 82 per cent of the light. And paper of a deep chocolate leaves only 4 per cent of the light rays for use. Its power of absorption is 96 per cent.—New York Sun.

NATURE AS A DESIGNER.

If You Need a Model of Equilibrium Study the Kangaroo.

There was a certain college professor of machine design who was as original in his views as he was able in his subject. One of his pet theories was the interrelation between nature and correct design.

"Boys," he would say, "there has been only one designer who never made a mistake, and the more we study his work the better machines we will build. When you put legs under a machine think of a horse or a cow, and get them as far apart as you can. Don't get too much overhang at either end.

"And, speaking of a counterbalance, study the kangaroo. There is no prettier example of equilibrium in all positions. The further over he leans the more his tail comes into action off the ground. And again, in speaking of general design, wherever possible, try to work for elasticity as against rigidity. You find very little of the rigid in nature, and little trees often survive a gale by bending, where big ones are blown down."

All of which was undoubtedly very true, and made more of an impression on his hearers than some of the more complicated mathematical demonstrations that followed.—John H. Van Deventer in Engineering Magazine.

LAYING THE CLOTH.

Table Covers at One Time Were Arranged in Puffs and Folds.

In the twelfth century tablecloths were very large and were always laid on the table double. For a long time they were called "doublers" for that reason. The cloth was first placed so as to touch the floor on the side at which the guests sat; then all that remained was folded so that it just covered the table.

Charles V. had sixty-seven tablecloths, which were from [illegible] to twenty yards long and two yards wide. He had one cloth thirty-two yards long, which had the arms of France embroidered on it in silk. All these were fringed.

In the sixteenth century "doublers" were replaced by two tablecloths, one of which was small and was laid just as we lay ours today. The other, which was put on over it, was large and of beautifully figured linen. It was skillfully folded in such a way that, as one chronicler tells it, "it resembled a winding river, gently ruffled by a little breeze, for among very many little folds were here and there great bubbles."

It must have required much art and care to make dishes, plates, saltcellars, sauce dishes and glasses stand steadily in the midst of this undulating sea and among those "bubbles" and puffy folds. However, the fashion had only a short existence, and toward the latter part of the century a single cloth laid flat and touching the floor on all sides of the table came into general use.

LOST IN A GLACIER.

Fate of a Prospector Who Slipped Into a Crevasse In Alaska.

"In the winter of 1898-9," said Robert O. Losey, "I was one of a party of prospectors in Alaska. We were crossing the Rampart mountains, in central Alaska, on the way to Quail creek, from which locality had come reports of a great gold find. A member of another party near us, in going over the mountains, had broken through a crust of sand and gone down into the crevasse of a glacier.

"He had gone down a distance of thirty-eight or forty feet, where he had lodged. We could [illegible] him, but we heard him and we talked with him. We tried to reach him with a rope and finally tied a pick to the end of the rope, hoping to bring him out. He asked us to quit pulling on the rope; that we were making his position worse. He finally pleaded with us, his voice growing fainter and fainter, to go away and leave him.

"He evidently was freezing, not, as we have heard, a painful death, and he did not want to be bothered. He gave us his name; said he was fifty-four years old and told us to notify his folks at some town in Missouri. We stayed there until we could hear his voice no longer.

"He certainly made a record of being the coolest man, and then he froze to death."—Indianapolis News.

Turning the Tables.

"Turning the tables" in the sense of bringing a countercharge against an accuser has a classic origin. In the days of Augustus Imperator a regular craze seized the men of Rome to compete with one another for the possession of the costliest specimens of a certain description of table made for the most part of Mauritanian wood inlaid with ivory—"mensarum insania," or table mania, as Pliny called it. They were sold at most extravagant prices. When the men accused the ladies of sumptuary extravagance the latter naturally retorted by reference to the money squandered by their lords on these tables and so "turned the tables on them" by throwing them metaphorically in their teeth.

A Remarkable Suicide.

One of the most remarkable cases of suicide was that of the king of Falaba, on the west coast of Africa.

The king was attacked by a Mohammedan force, and, finding resistance impossible, he assembled his family and principal officers and after addressing them and intimating his determination never to accept Mohammedanism and inviting those who did not agree with him to go away, he applied a light to a large quantity of gunpowder collected for the purpose and blew into atoms the palace and all who were in it.

Vanity.

"That man says he wants his picture to look perfectly natural," said the photographer's assistant.

"Make it as handsome as possible," replied the proprietor.

"But he insists that he doesn't want the picture to flatter him."

"He won't think it flatters him. He'll think that at last somebody has managed to catch the way he really looks."—Chicago News.

Girl With a Conscience.

Two little girls walking through a field were afraid of a cow. Said one of them, "Let's go right on and act as if we were not afraid at all." "But wouldn't that be deceiving the cow?" the other little girl expostulated.—Christian Herald.

Rubbing It In.

Proud Dad—I suppose in the course of time baby will be married, even as we were. Mamma—Yes, I suppose she'll throw herself away on some man.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Point.

"A joke's a joke, but did you ever make anybody laugh by pulling a chair from under him?"

"At least it upsets his gravity."—Baltimore American.

Hard Luck.

"People can talk of their troubles," said Mrs. Wagleigh, "but I think Mrs. Jones has the hardest luck of any one. She is absolutely deprived by nature of enjoying a woman's greatest pleasure. She's a deaf mute and can't talk. She can only use her hands. Now, if that isn't awful tell me what is!"

Mr. Wagleigh looked up from his evening paper. "I met her husband this afternoon," he said, "and he was tickled to pieces. His wife cut her fingers with the bread knife yesterday, and now she can't talk at all."—New York Telegram.

Sign For a Dog.

"I've bought a bulldog," said Parspiff to his friend Lessup, "and I want a motto to put over his kennel. Can you think of one?"

"Why not use a dentist's sign, 'Teeth Inserted Here'?" suggested Lessup.—Kansas City Star.

Unforeseen.

"Really, doctor, the medicine you prescribed for me is splendid. I think I shall be all right in a few days."

"Well, well! Who would have thought it!"—Fliegende Blaetter.

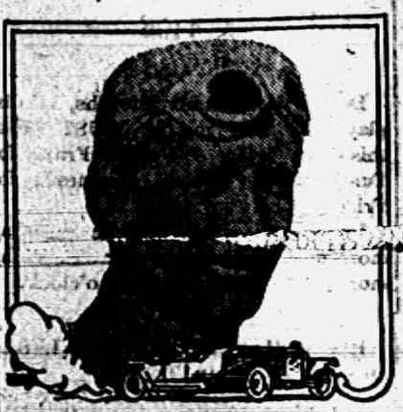
STATE'S CHIEF EXECUTIVE AND REPRESENTATIVE IN CONGRESS TO GIVE ADDRESSES AT STATE FAIR

CONGRESSMAN PATRICK H. KELLEY.

GOVERNOR WOODBRIDGE N. FERRIS.

GENERAL MANAGER G. W. DICKINSON of the State Fair announces that Friday, Sept. 10, will be Michigan day at the State Fair, and Governor Woodbridge N. Ferris and Congressman Patrick H. Kelley of Lansing will be the principal speakers. Both are greatly interested in the work which the State Fair is accomplishing.

NOTED DRIVERS WHO WILL PILOT CARS AT STATE FAIR AUTO RACES



"WILD BILL" ENDICOTT.

LOUIS DISBROW.

NOTED drivers from all over the country will be contestants in the automobile races to be held during the State Fair at Detroit, Sept. 6 to 15.

Cash prizes totaling several thousand dollars will be offered, and it is expected that many records will be broken.

The record for fifty miles on a one mile circular dirt track was made at Detroit by Disbrow in a Simplex, and the race course is noted throughout the country.

Only a few weeks ago "Wild Bill" Endicott was expected to shatter the track record for 100 miles and had covered fifty miles in forty-three minutes, more than two minutes under the record for that distance, when his car crashed through a fence. Endicott, who will be among the drivers of space eating vehicles during the State Fair, asserts that he confidently expects to break several records at Detroit.

The International Motor Contest association, rules of which organization will govern the speed contests at Detroit in September, was organized in May and numbers among its members officers of practically all state fairs in the United States.

"BETTER BABIES FOR MICHIGAN," FAIR'S SLOGAN

Mrs. G. G. Caron to Be Superintendent of Department.

BEAUTY NOT ALONE COUNTS.

Michigan Women Actively Connected With Children's Welfare Movements Will Advise Mothers—Contests For Babies From Towns and Cities.

"Better Babies For Michigan" is the State Fair's slogan.

General Manager G. W. Dickinson of the State Fair announces that Mrs. George G. Caron of Detroit, president of the Detroit board of the Michigan Children's Home society, will be superintendent of the Better Babies' contest to be conducted during the Fair. Hundreds of entries from all sections of Michigan will be made in the contest. Dr. Mary Thompson Stevens of Detroit will be judge at the Better Babies' contest.

"While thousands of dollars have been expended in the improvement of live stock by the federal and state governments, it has been only within the last three years that the United States has given instruction to mothers in the care and training of their boys and girls through the federal children's bureau," said Mrs. Caron today. "We aim to supplement this instruction at the State Fair this fall, as we did a year ago, and a child welfare exhibit will be on display. In addition, we will teach the mothers how to care for their children, and there will be a health contest for babies from one to three years of age.

Mere Beauty Doesn't Count.

"The Better Babies' contest is a popular yet scientific movement to insure better babies and a better race. Prizes will be awarded, but mere beauty does not count. Physical and mental development only is to be considered. The Better Babies' contest will teach parents how to improve the physical condition of their childen and arouse interest in the conservation of child life.

"All entries will close at 6 p. m., Sept. 4. Examinations will begin Sept. 8 and continue until Saturday, Sept. 11, at 5 p. m.

"There will be classes for babies from rural districts and towns of less than 1,000 population, for babies from cities and towns of over 1,000 and less than 10,000 population and for babies from cities of over 10,000 population. In addition there will be contests for triplets under two years of age and twins under two years of age. The cash prizes will total nearly $200."

CORN RAISING CONTEST FEATURES STATE FAIR.

Farmers in twenty Michigan counties will compete this year for prizes totaling $300, offered by the People's State bank, the First and Old Detroit National bank and the Union Trust company, all of Detroit, in a corn raising contest.

The corn is to be exhibited at the Michigan State Fair at Detroit, Sept. 6-15, and awards will be made by the State Fair judges. First prize for the best bushel of corn raised in each one of the counties will be $10, while the second prize will be $5.

In appropriating money for the prizes the three financial institutions hope to cause greater interest among Michigan farmers in corn raising.

The twenty counties eligible to share in the competition are Wayne, Macomb, Oakland, St. Clair, Sanilac, Huron, Tuscola, Genesee, Livingston, Washtenaw, Monroe, Gratiot, Lenawee, Hillsdale, Jackson, Ingram, Shiawassee, Clinton, Eaton and Saginaw.

Cherry Wood.

Cherry is the wood most used as a backing for the metal plates from which illustrations are printed in magazines and periodicals. It is chosen above all others because it holds its shape, does not warp or twist, works smoothly and does not split.

Not to Be Thought Of.

Certainly some might be foolish enough to call Athens, Thermopylae and Marathon the most famous Greece spots in history, but it would be dangerous.—Judge.

PAIGE
The Standard of Value and Quality

Yes—It Is True

The new price of the seven-passenger Paige Fairfield "Six-46" is $1295. The Paige factory and Paige Dealers have been deluged with inquiries since rumors of this—the most sensational announcement of the year—got abroad.

The car, the demand for which has kept the Paige plant running night and day since last February and has necessitated the doubling of the Paige plant and Paige production, is now presented to the American people, even more beautiful, even more sumptuous, even more extraordinary Value and Quality—for $100 less than the price at which it won unchallenged Six Supremacy.

All Sixes—in the moderate-price field—have cut prices to compete with the Paige.

We will not take issue with those other Sixes. We want you to see them, to examine them carefully, to ascertain how far the cutting has gone.

Paige Quality is Still There

More than that, Paige Quality in the "Six-46" has been tremendously increased—for a price $100 lower. You can see it at a glance—in the even smarter and more luxurious appearance of the car—in the new Pantasote Top (which replaces the Mohair); in the sumptuous glaze hand-buffed French leather of the upholstery; in the exquisite painting and lasting lustre of the body with its Richelieu blue and red trimming. These are obvious improvements. In the big, vital essentials, the new Paige "Six-46" is just as evidently incomparable in Quality with any car in the world—regardless of price.

This is the promise we made last January. And the unanimous popular verdict has made the realization possible.

Again Paige Quality is Supreme.

Also—the new Paige Hollywood Model, Light "Six-36", an exquisite new, five-passenger "Six", every inch a Paige—$1095.

EX-MAYOR DRIVES GOAT TEAM

Joseph F. Sullivan Visits Camp of Crippled Children.

PORT HURON, MICH. — Ever since the crippled children of the Van Leuven-Browne school, of Detroit, pitched their tents in Lakeside park they have beome a part and parcel of Port Huron, and the visit is one which will always be memorable to these little unfortunates.

Perhaps the most honored guest was Joseph F. Sullivan, of Memphis, Tenn. Young Sullivan, himself a cripple, is the youngest ex-mayor in the world, having been chief executive of Imboden, Ark., for some time. He is at present a member of the editorial force of the Commercial Field, published in Memphis, Tenn., and is the founder of the United Workers for Cripples. One of the novelties of the camp which Mr. Sullican brought with him is a trained team of goats and small wagon with which he drives about the streets of Memphis.

SAVES BOY; ESCAPES FAME

Girl Takes Injured Lad From Water and Disappears.

FAIR HAVEN, MICH. — Considerable excitement was felt at the resort this week when it was reported that Harold Volkening, of 12 Oregon avenue, Detroit, had been drowned.

It later developed that through the aid of a girl whose identity is not known he was saved. The lad misjudged the depth of the water and dove against the bottom. When the girl went to his aid she tore off his coat and bandaged the wound in his head before starting to shore with him. He was unconscious for some time.

Dr. Holm has been offered the superintendency of the branch laboratory to be opened soon at Houghton, but he may not accept. Internal friction in the health department caused Holm's demotion.

CRISIS IS NEAR IN THE BALKANS

Shelling of Belgrade Arouses Bulgaria, Roumania and Greece.

FEAR DRIVE THROUGH REGION

Sofia and Bucharest Are Greatly Excited—Allies May Be Given Support—Russian Troops Are Falling Back—Sortie at Kovno Fails—Retreat in South.

BERLIN — The Russian village of Slavatycze, less than twenty-four miles south of Brest Litovsk, has been captured by General Mackensen's troops. The army of Prince Leopold of Bavaria, pressing the Russians from the west, has occupied Losyce and Miedzyrzec.

PARIS — A Havas dispatch from Nish, dated Sunday, says that Aug. 13 the Serbians with a few shells stopped the enemy from working on defenses in front of the village of Dobra on the Danube. On the same day Serbian artillery before Velicocelo, near Belgrade, engaged in a duel with a hostile battery stationed at the village of Starchevo and at the twelfth shot reduced to silence the enemy's guns, which had fired sixty shells.

ROME — The massing of Austro-German troops along the Serbian frontier and the bombardment of Belgrade, coming at a critical time in the Balkan negotiations, may throw the balance in favor of the allies and bring Bulgaria, Roumania and Greece into the war.

Dispatches from Bucharest and Sofia said the greatest alarm has been caused there by news that the Austrians have resumed the offensive on the Serbian frontier, preliminary to an Austro-German drive through the Balkans to the relief of Turkey. Both Roumanian and Bulgarian diplomats here fear such a move threatens the national existence of their countries and were watching developments near Belgrade with the greatest anxiety.

Fate of Balkans in Balance.

Both the Grecian and Serbian parliaments met yesterday. The decisions they are to make, possibly within the next fortnight, probably will settle the fate of the Balkan states and will have a tremendous influence upon the outcome of the Roumanian crown council at Bucharest Sunday was another incident of the greatest importance in the Balkan situation.

Three elements entering into the situation are counted upon by the representatives of the allies here to force the Balkan states into quick accord, possibly within a fortnight. They are: Certainty that the present lack of Turkish ammunition makes this a most favorable time for intervention; the fact that the allies have landed reenforcements and have registered fresh successes at the Dardanelles which might cause the balkans to lose their opportunity to share the fruits of victory should the allies reach Constantinople without them; and finally, the concentration of Austro-Germans against Serbia.

This last factor, the newest in the Balkan situation, is of the utmost importance.

Russ Troops Falling Back.

BERLIN — VIA LONDON — German troops on the nortnern end of the Russian battle front have driven the Russians from Kubisko in a northeasterly direction, taking 3,354 prisoners, according to an official report. A Russian sortie from Kovno fortress was repulsed, the Germans capturing 1,000 men.

Between the Narew and Bug rivers the Teutons took more than 4,500 prisoners. In the region of Losyce and Medzyrec the Germans broke through the Russian positions. General von Woyhsch's army alone captured 4,000 Russians up to Aug. 14. On the southern end of the battle line the Russians again began to retreat.

EBERSOLE, SR., HANGS SELF

Former Dunkard Minister, Macklin Murder Suspect, Is Suicide.

SOUTH BEND, IND. — Silas N. Ebersole, former Dunkard minister, held for the murder of fifteen year old Hazel Macklin in August, 1914, committed suicide by hanging himself in the county jail.

Newton Ebersole, 20 years old, who was arrested with his father Thursday, and held in the Goshen, Ind., jail, was released after the authorities had been threatened with habeas corpus proceedings. The police admit that the son knew nothing of the crime, until after its commission, if at all.

Italians Treble Artillery Forces.

LONDON — Telegraphing from Berne, the Morning Post's correspondent says: "Italy has more than trebled the number of her artillery regiments and her new quick-firing guns of the Deport model, which fire forty shots a minute. This gun is said to excel the older models for use on rough ground."

MICHIGAN DRYS WILL CAMPAIGN WITH RUSH

Two Monster Rallies In October Will Start Things.

LANSING, MICH. — Two great big monster mass meetings of temperance workers in October are bing planned by the Michigan Anti-Saloon league, one for Lansing and one probably at Marquette.

The Lansing gathering will be the one the league figured on last spring but postponed until fall. Unless present plans fail, it will be the largest and most enthusiastic meeting of temperance workers that Michigan has ever seen. From 1,000 to 1,500 visitors are expected, representing the actual working force of the league in every county in Michigan.

Prizes will be offered for the counties having the largest representation and a big parade is contemplated. Next Monday the executive officers of the league will meet in Lansing to select the date for these meetings.

With the two big meetings the league expects really to begin its campaign for state-wide prohibition. Congressman Richard Pearson Hobson, of Alabama, the congressional leader of the temperance cause, is expected to address the Lansing meeting. Daniel Morgan Smith, of Chicago, attorney for the Model License league and one of the leading "dry" speakers of the United States, will make an address, while three or four lesser lights will complete the list of speakers.

BOY KILLED WHILE HUNTING

Accidental Discharge of Companion's Gun Blows Head Off.

HILLSDALE, MICH. — Harold Omo, aged 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Omo, who live three miles and a half southeast of Montgomery, on the Camden-Reading road, was killed when a companion, Roy Haines, accidentally discharged a shotgun, blowing Omo's head off.

Haines and Harold and Don Omo had been shooting rabbits. Haines is the son of Ezra Haines and is nearly prostrated.

ACCUSES MOTHER OF RIVAL

Mrs. Lanaway Says They Plotted to Steal Mr. L.'s Affections.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — In a suit begun in the county circuit court Mrs. Grace R. Lanaway asks damages of $5,000 from Ella M. Lynch and her mother, Etheline Lynch, for alleged alienation of her husband's affections.

She charges that Miss Lynch was aided by her mother in various artifices to win the affection of the plaintiff's husband, William H. Laraway.

DA GAMA'S HOPE HIGH ON MEXICO

Brazilian Ambassador Thinks A, B, C Note Strong One.

GIVES MEXICANS BIG CHANCE

Pan-American Envoy Does Not See How Leaders of Southern Republic Can Get Away From Position Document Puts Them In—Hopes for Favorable Answer.

NEW YORK — Hopeful expectations of the note to the factional leaders of Mexico were made by D. Da Gama, the Brazilian ambassador to this country whose name stands first among the South American diplomats signed to the note. Senor Da Gama spent a day in Long Branch while waiting to go to Washington to meet J. M. Cardoza, the Brazilian minister who for the last year has been representing the United States in Mexico City.

In answer to questions by telephone Ambassador Da Gama expressed the opinion the note, as drawn up in Spanish by one of the informal diplomatic committees and approved by them all, made a fair and generous offer of mediation. His hopes for a bloodless settlement of Mexico's troubles, are not unqualified. When asked as to whether he personally had any assurances that the note would be welcomed, he replied in the negative.

Has Great Hopes.

"I think we ought to begin getting replies within a few days," he declered, "but I know nothing for certain. Don't you think that the note as it stands gives the Mexicans every possible opportunity to find a way to peace? I do and I repeat that I have great hopes that we will receive encouraging returns very soon."

When asked if he did not think that the fact that diplomats of Latin American republics were co-operating with the United States would go far toward lessening the traditional antipathy to itself in Mexico by the United States, Senor Da Gama replied, "Indeed, I do. I don't see how the Mexicans can take objection to the form of this note now, do you?"

Another Regiment for Brownsville.

EL PASO, MEX. — A regiment of infantry was moved from Texas City, to the lower Rio Grande border near Brownsville, and a battery of howitzers was started from Ft. Sill, Oklahoma, for the same locality, according to advices received here by Gen. Hugh L. Scott, chief of staff of the army. According to the advices received by Gen. Scott, the troops will b able to meet all existing situotions. The Mexican officers assert that they will be able to control their men and deny connection with the trouble between Mexican bandits and American troops and civil officers.

Villa to Send Plea Over Mexico.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Acceptances of the Pan-American plan for restoring peace and government in Mexico are expected by officials here in a few days from General Villa, General Angeles, and other leaders in northern Mexico.

It became known that under direction of General Villa and his lieutenants, copies of the peace appeal from the United States and the Latin-American diplomats, had been printed at Juarez and Chihuahua for distribution throughout every section of Mexico that can be reached. The plan is to circulate the appeal through the press, by mail, and by courier, and to post it in public places in the principal towns.

So far no word has come as to how General Carranza received the appeal.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound and imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

U. S. ANSWER TO AUSTRIA IS STRONG

Refuses Request to Stop Exportation of Arms.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—hTe American reply to the recent Austrian note protesting against the sale of munitions of war to the allies while Germany and Austria are cut off from such shipment by the British naval forces is made public. It expresses appreciation of the Austrian admission that such sales by the United States are in conformity with international law, but refuses emphatically to accede to the request that America should go beyond the law and refuse such sale to the allies because Austria is unable to buy.

The note explains in detail that not only would the Austrian request mean extension of the law, but practically would put any neutral nation in the position of a judge of belligerents to determine the progress of the war and regulate its actions thereby. Such a precedent, is is explained, would cause untold confusion.

Further the United States explains that by refusing to sell munitions to any buyer it would establish a precedent whereby in the event of the United States becoming engaged in war it would be unable to purchase supplies elsewhere. Such a situation, it points out, would mean that every nation would be required to maintain arsenals and factories for munitions sufficient to supply itself in event of any hostile attack, and would ultimately mean the establishment of militarism throughout the world, each nation arming against all others.

The note cites the Austrian and German action at the time of the Boer war when they sold munitions to England when the Boers were unable to receive such supplies, just as the Teutonic allies are now unable to receive them.

THE COLLINS REUNION

The first annual reunion of the Collins family was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Collins, Macon, Thursday, August 12. The Collins family is one of the pioneer families of Lenawee county. James Collins the immediate ancestor of those present at the reunion, having moved here from Barnegat, New Jersey in the year 1830.

Michigan was then a territory, great dense forests instead of smiling farms, narrow winding trails instead of well kept highways, Indians instead of white men, were the things that greeted the pioneer. Courageous, large-visioned and heroic were those first settlers, who came into the wild and almost unknown frontier wilderness to make homes for themselves and their families. The family of James Collins was one that would have gladdened the heart of ex-president, for it consisted of five clean manly boys and five sweet minded girls, nearly all of whom are married and settled in Macon and adjacent towns. One hundred ten of these decendents met Thursday, August 12, to renew and to make stronger the existing bond of relationship and to enjoy a bountiful picnic dinner which was served upon the lawn.

After ample justice had been done to a menu so varied and so sumptious as to more than satisfy the most fastidious, Mr. Everett Collins as toastmaster, announced the following program:

Recitation—Erma Osborne, Macon
Recitation—Geraldine Kuder, Macon
Reminiscences—Dr. D. H. Wood, Coldwater
Greetings from Barnegat—Miss Gertrude Collins, Saline
Poem—The Collins Reunion Miss Mildred Burns, Monroe
Recitation — Genevieve Camburn, Macon
Recitation—Irene Betser, Milan
Address—Dr. William C. Burns, Monroe

At the close of his address Dr. Burns read a letter from Mr. and Mrs. Summer Collins of Kensington Maryland, expressing their interest in the occasion and their regret that they were unable to be present. In lieu of their presence however, they sent a verified copy of the original and official coat of arms belonging to the early English ancestors of the Collins family. Pleasure and appreciation were expressed as the beautiful coat of arms was shown. In 1643 some of these English ancestors moved to America and settled in Salem, Mass. They were men of courage, character and occupied many prominent places during the Colonial and Revolutionary days.

A brief business meeting was held and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year.

President—Guernesy Collins, Ann Arbor
Vice President—Miss Mildred Burns Monroe
Sec'y and Treas.—Mrs. Persis Hatch Macon

Auxiliary Executive Committee
Miss Gertrnde Collins, Saline
Gabriel Mills, Macon
Everett Collins, Macon

A standing vote of thanks was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Charles Collins for their generous hospitality, also to the ladies who served the bountiful dinner and to Miss Mildred Burns, Everett and Ellsworth Collins, who originated and carried the reunion to a success.

After this automobiles and carriages filled with happy families, began slipping homeward, but in the heart of each person there was a new vision of the finer things of the heart and a new appreciation of the place and worth of Kinship and love.

THE COLLINS REUNION

By MILDRED M. BURNS

Reunions are the fashion now,
And so its time that we,
The Collins clan, should make our bow,
Look at our family tree.

We come from old and sturdy stock
From broad Atlantic shore,
Our records sound as granite rock;
What need we ask for more?

When our ancestral father, John,
Embarked across the sea,
He little dreamed there'd follow on
Such a posterity.

His farthest sight never discerned
Sea-captains stern and brave,
Who fighting, met the death they spurned,
Beneath the ocean wave.

Bold minute-men among them too,
Of revolution fame;
Others helped the English crew
Quebec's heights to attain.

Where the tides of Barnegat
Ebb and flow each day,
Ebenezer acquired a plat
Of ground Where he did stay

Until the ocean's restless whim
Called him afar to roam;
Atlantic's fury followed him,
He lies beneath its foam.

From north to south along the coast
Lived all these Quarker Friends,
Their numbers reckoned by the host.
They right and might did blend.

Among this great and worthy band,
Eli and Samuel,
Ezekiel, Amos, Lucy Ann,
Joseph and Daniel.

Deliverance, Martha, Anna,
Stephen, Job, and John,
Rachel, Isaac, Hannah,
So the names run on

Their names were taken straight from out
The great and good old Book;
There hearts were steadfast and devout;
Their God they ne'er forsook.

One, more daring than the rest,
Left his coat and clan;
With his sons he journeyed west
To the wilds of Michigan.

He landed at the port, Monroe,
With but few earthly goods,
Then looked about where he should go
To settle in the woods

Before him forest, grand but grim,
The home of wolves and bears,
Ready to tear him limb from limb
If driven from their lairs,

Through the wilds he hewed his way.
Still farther westward came,
Until Macon he reached one day
And there took up a claim.

The trees were felled, the land was cleared,
A fertile sandy loam,
Upon this bit of ground was reared
A neat log-cabin home.

The sons and daughters left behind,
Now journeyed toward the west;
In Macon valley they did find
A place where they could rest.

In face of hardships, toil and pain,
Privations, too and fears,
More forest land they cleared for grain,
These sturdy pioneers.

They married, scattered, and their farms
Still broader, richer grew.
Secure then from frontier alarms,
Peace and success they knew.

They left to us a heritage
Of fields now ripe with grain,
Dark woodlanps, fruitful acreage,
But more than all a name.

A name that stands for truth and right,
For just and cleanly life,
For labor with one's hand and might,
For love to friends and wife

More precious than our homes or gold,
Prosperity or fame,
We prize the legacy we hold,
This splendid Collins name.

Today we,ve come to celebrate
The simple fact that we
Are one and all connected
With the Collins family tree.

Reunions are the fashion now,
That you have heard before;
So if you like this one, just vow
That we will have lots more.

Germans Oppose Poles' Autonomy.

AMSTERDAM — The Berlin Tageblatt, in an attack on the proposals for an autonomous Poland, says: "What interests have we, Germany and Austria, in creating an autonomous Poland which should pursue economic interests opposed to ours? This would not be a guarantee but a danger to future peace. How could Poland be expected to reconcile her economic interests with those of both Austria and Germany?"

Do You Worry?

The good worrier is a poor worker. Men who worry never arrive anywhere. They go by fits and starts. Some time you started a bank account, but you didn't keep it up. You had so many things on your mind. You were worried about this and about that. You hadn't the time to give to piling up money in the bank. Cut that habit of worrying out. Pitch in and work. Bank every dollar you possibly can. Get it into the bank at once. Keep at it and the time will come when you will have no cause to worry.

An account with this bank will aid you in many ways besides the money you will receive in interest.

Your account—large or small—will be appreciated at

SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Wm. Rendell while threshing at Walter Byers near Britton met with a serious accident Monday. They were threshing from the field, and he was on one of the wagons. He got off the wagon to check up a young colt when the machine started and frightened the horses so they started on a run dragging him some distance. The wagon overturned as they ran through a ditch pinning him underneath.

His arm was broken and his head cut and bruised, so several stitches had to be taken. Three ribs were broken, and his leg badly cut. At last reports his condition was quite critical.

BARGAIN DAY.

One whole long day of pleasant weather and a beautiful evening greeted us for Bargain Day Wednesday. Quite a few were in town through the day to take advantage of the various bargains offered by our merchants, but evening brought out the crowd.

As usual our band furnished some delightful music and the singing of John Pennington was fine. As a contortionist the man of the hour was certainly a success and was greeted with rounds of applause during his performance.

CO-OPERATIVE SEMI-ANNUAL MEETING AND BANQUET

Over 200 were present at the banquet of the Tecumseh Co-Operative Association on Wednesday evening, the Grange serving a sumptuous banquet at 6:30. Later a very enthusiastic meeting followed with a number of speeches by members of the association. They report that the business of this quarter was double that of the first, and the prospects are very favorable for a dividend at the close of the year.

This association is being watched closely for results all over the country, but under the management of Channing Beebe and his force of helpers the good work goes on steadily.

A directors' meeting has been called for Saturday night.

Peru.

Peru in the abundance of her minerals is the real treasure chest of South America. The country has a territorial extension of upward of 600,000 square miles. Callao, the chief port, by the ocean route through the Panama canal is within 200 miles as near to New York as is the City of Mexico by rail. The Amazon port of Iquitos, 2,100 miles from Para, is reached in shorter time by steamers from New York than by the overland journey from Lima, the capital. The country, which has about 4,000,000 inhabitants, is divided into three distinct zones, with as many varieties of climate, products and soil. These are the coast zone, the sierra or mountain zone, which includes the great tablelands and valleys of the Andes, and the montanic or forest region, which stretches from the eastern slopes of the Andes to the vast river basin of the interior. Peru's resources are both agricultural and mineral. The principal agricultural export products are rubber, cotton, cane sugar and alpaca wool.—Exchange.

The Venerable Microbe.

Just to think, the microbe has been in this terrestrial sphere twenty millions of years! Disease germs that now afflict humanity have been discovered in the fossils of the earliest life on earth. There was a belief that bacteria were a modern pest, and they came just in time to plague mankind. But why should they exist before? What was the object of their insignificant lives? This question science answers by saying that they first came to assist in the decomposition of the calcareous rocks. This certainly was a more honorable mission than to scare people in later days into the use of special drinking cups and to set up great government bulwarks to resist their imaginary fury. The microbe was formerly an honorable and useful citizen, but now he has fallen from his high estate.—Columbus Journal.

A TECUMSEH MAN GIVE EVIDENCE.

His Testimony Will Interest Every Tecumseh Reader.

The value of local evidence is indisputable. It is the kind of evidence we accept as true because we know we can prove it for ourselves. There has been plenty of such evidence in the Tecumseh papers lately, and this [illegible] has established a confidence in the minds of Tecumseh people that will not be easily shaken.

J. B. Smith, E. Chicago St., Tecumseh, says: "I was caused a great deal of suffering by pains in the small of my back. When the attacks were present, it was all I could do to work. When stooping, I became very dizzy and spots of fire seemed to splash before my eyes. I rested poorly and in the morning when I got up, was unrefreshed. I doctored and used remedies of various kinds, but got no benefit until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. They made me feel like a different person, ridding me of the trouble. I gladly confirm my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills"

PLAN CREDIT OF $500,000,000

Wall Street Bankers Discuss Project for Britain In America.

NEW YORK — Further pronounced weakness in foreign exchange caused such concern in Wall street that a project for the establishment here of a British credit of $500,000,000 received serious consideration. The discussion had to do with a much more imposing credit arrangement than that brought forward when J. P. Morgan last visited Lonuon. At that time the balance of trade against Europe had not assumed such large proportions and it was proposed to advance $100,000,000 in credits here.

International bankers have taken the stand in the last few days that when the bulk of American war supplies now being turned out goes forward the final payments due will be so large as to make a credit of $100,000,000 ineffectual in stemming the decline in exchange. For that reason it has come to be accepted that the arrangements should contemplate $500,000,000.

Britain Holds Up Sweden's Coal.

STOCKHOLM — The British government has refused to permit two shiploads of coal purchased by a Swedish firm for the Swedish navy to leave England. The incident has brought forth much bitter comment from the Swedish press and is absorbing the attention of the public.

What Vinegar Will Do.

Vinegar works like magic in cleaning dirt and smoke from walls and woodwork. Put some in a basin, wet a flannel cloth in it and wipe the article that needs cleaning. When the cloth becomes soiled wash it out in clear water before putting it in the vinegar again. It will remove fly specks from woodwork, picture frames, windows and so forth. It will soften an old paint brush on which paint has been allowed to dry. Heat some vinegar to the boiling point and allow the brush to simmer in it for a few minutes. Remove and wash well in strong soapsuds and the brush will be like new. If the hands become chapped or roughened after having them in water for a long time rinse them well and apply a little vinegar, letting it dry on.—Washington Star.

New England Pie.

Some poor dweller in the benighted beyond of Chicago asks what a real New England pie is like. It probably will not help him to be told, but if he means apple it is like an essay by Emerson liquefied with the music of Massenet and spiced with the cynicism of Shaw. If he means pumpkin it is like some of Gounod's music heard in a landscape all sun and flowers, and if he means mince pie, why, it is like an increase in salary and a present from home arriving on the day when one's conscience was behaving itself.—Boston Globe.

Encouragement.

"Why don't you offer your heart and hand?"

"I fear she would turn me down."

"I don't believe it. She has given you enough encouragement."

"Why, she never gave me the slightest encouragement."

"Get out! I heard her telling you yesterday that her mother did not allow her to accept anything of value from young men."—Houston Post.

Mining In the Sea.

Among the sights on the island of Martinique is the mining of material for the manufacture of lime from the bottom of the sea. The bulk of the lime used on the island is manufactured from madreporic stone or reef coral so mined.

DEATH AND ACCIDENTS STALK OSHTEMO HOME

Demise of Thomas R. Page Is Sixth Misfortune to Family

KALAMAZOO MICH. — The sad misfortune of the Page family culminated in the suden death of Thomas R. Page, 77 years old, at his home in Oshtemo.

Accidents and death have trailed the family for years, beginning with the unexpected death of Florence, the beautiful little granddaughter. A few months after the family had laid the child in the grave Lewis Page, father of the girl and president of the Street Car Men's association of Kalamazoo, died suddenly.

REPORT CATTLE GOING BLIND

It Is Feared Infection May Have Come From Chicago Serum.

LANSING, MICH. — Puzzled by a mysterious disease which is killing cattle in Saginaw county, members of the State Live Stock Sanitary Commission were confronted with another problem when a report was received from Standish, Arenac county, that cattle in that vicinity are being stricken blind. Inspectors have been sent to Standish to diagonose this new malady.

It is the opinion of the State Live Stock Sanitary Commission that serum sent to Saginaw county from Chicago may have contained some infection and federal authorities have placed a temporary injunction on cattle in Saginaw county.

An Interesting Talk.

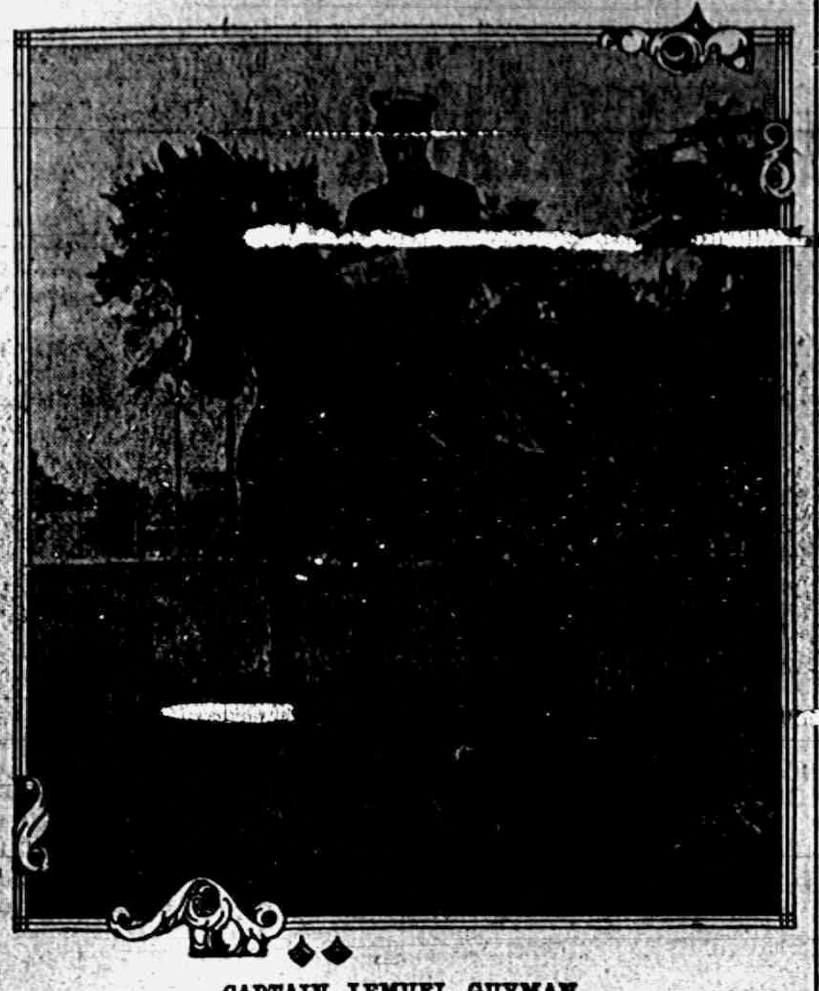
In the days of Henry Clay, a Kentucky farmer sent a servant to Lexington with a note for the president of a certain bank. When the man returned he said to his master:

"I met Marse Henry Clay in the bank and had a conversation with him."

"Indeed! And on what topic did you and Mr. Clay converse?" inquired the master with interest.

The darky removed his hat and made a sweeping bow. * * * "Says Mr. Clay to me." * * * And another very low bow. "And I the same to Mr. Clay."—Everybody's.

COMMANDS ONE OF BEST DRILLED BODIES OF MEN IN UNITED STATES



CAPTAIN LEMUEL GUYMAN.

CAPTAIN LEMUEL GUYMAN of the Detroit mounted police, one of the finest drilled and best mounted bodies of men in the country, has been a member of the Detroit police department twenty years and is one of the oldest officers in the department.

He says that practicing for the maneuvers and drills which the mounted police will give at the State Fair at Detroit, Sept. 6 to 15, has already begun.

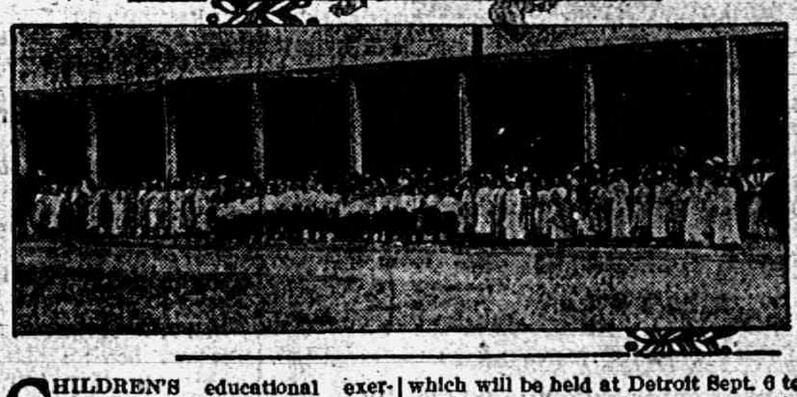
AUTO RACES TO BE ONE OF THE BIG FEATURES OF MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

MAKING THE LAST TURN WHEEL BY WHEEL.

NO more thrilling sight is listed in the catalogue of the spectacular than the finish of an automobile race. The long grinds on the speedways have their interest, but they do not compare to the finals of a five or ten mile contest on a dirt track between drivers who are noted for the chances they take to keep out of last place. The illustration shows Johnny Raimey of Cincinnati, Eddie Hearne of Detroit and Louis Disbrow in one of their hair raising encounters at the State Fair track.

General Manager Dickinson of the State Fair announces that many of the country's most noted and spectacular drivers will compete at the 1915 State Fair, which will be held at Detroit Sept. 6 to 15.

CHILDREN'S EXERCISES FEATURE OF THE MICHIGAN STATE FAIR



CHILDREN'S educational exercises at the Michigan State Fair attract the attention of thousands annually. The children will give a singing and pantomimic entertainment at the 1915 exposition, which will be held at Detroit Sept. 6 to 15. The above picture was photographed previous to the giving of a patriotic program by the children. The children were dressed in costumes of red, white and blue.

SCOTCH HIGHLAND BAND.

ROY D. SMITH'S Scotch Highlander band will entertain the thousands who attend the State Fair at Detroit, Sept. 6 to 15, with daily concerts, both afternoon and evening. Several of the best artists in the country are members of this famous musical organization.

Daly's Impecunious Employee.

Augustin Daly had in his employment a man who always addressed him a note periodically asking for an advance of money. This note was invariably answered by a most abusive letter in almost insulting terms and threatening instant discharge if the offense was ever repeated and inclosing a check for the money.

At regular intervals of about three months the man invariably made the same request, with the same results, always, however, getting a check inclosed. And thus it continued until Mr. Daly's death.

Reversed Conditions.

"You are careful to set an example for your son?"

"I used to try to set him an example," replied the serious man, "but now I study him attentively to ascertain what kind of clothes I ought to wear and the style of conversation that is considered smart."—Washington Star.

PAIGE
The Standard of Value and Quality

The Fairfield Seven Passenger "Six-46" $1295

"Blind Faith" Versus Facts and the Paige

The overwhelming success and the acknowledged leadership of the Paige seven-passenger "Six-46" are the results of demonstrated facts.

The Paige triumph has been won through achievements of manufacture—proved out in the bitter tests of competition and on the hard field of practical service.

The faith of the motor-buying public in the Paige Six is not a "blind faith." It is a faith founded on the solid rock of facts—of promises more than fulfilled, of goods delivered.

Buyers of the Paige "Six-46" found that they had secured so much in value and quality that a new standard was set. There was no longer any question of "price class." The Paige became the standard of comparison regardless of price.

Paige "Six" Owners Say—

Owners of the Paige "Six-46" will tell you that they have found in it a degree of luxury, ease of riding and comfort they have never before experienced in any car at any price.

They will tell you this is due to Paige design and construction and to the generous Paige policy in values. They will specifically mention—

Abundance of power; flexibility and simplicity of control; and such features as the genuine Pantasote top, the body finish of Richelieu Blue which takes 24 days to complete, and the French glass, hand-buffed leather.

Remember—you get all these great values in the Paige seven-passenger Six for $1295. Come in and see also the remarkable values of the new Paige five-passenger Six at $1095.

KENNETH HAY

Some ten years ago a baker named Kenneth Hay came to Tecumseh as an employee at Donald Reid's bakery. He continued at his trade after Fred Aldrich purchased the business and in April 1910 this young man Hay and Clarence Symonds came into the business. This partnership only lasted until the next fall when Mr. Symonds left the firm and our friend Hay "went it" alone. He soon took a permanent partner who has helped him splendidly.

At Hay's bakery you can find all lines of baked stuff and they have a big business in custom baking for banquets and [illegible] fountain and ice cream trade is no small part of the business and they make their own cream. They also carry a large line of candies of Brooks Morse's and Schrafft's makes, tobaccos, salted nuts, etc.

Their baked goods are carried in the groceries. Their new brand of bread the "Made Well" is sold at F. D. Avery's, E J Lowry's, Aldrich & Son's and the Peoples store while C. M. Gilbert carries in stock Hay's cookies and fried cakes.

B. J. PULVER

Benj. J. Pulver came to our village in 1887 as receiver for the Baker & Hall drug business. S. E. Parrish of Ithaca, Mich, bought stock and as he was not a druggist he retained B. J. to conduct the business. Three years later Dr. W. D. Reed and Mr Pulver bought out Mr. Parrish [illegible] in three years more Ben had purchased his partner's interest and was sole proprietor.

All these years the business was in the store now occupied by the Candy Kitchen. In 1907 Mr. Pulver purchased the Merritt building next door west remodelled and redecorated it. As soon as possible his stock was moved in and Ben was at home in his own building with his own big stock around him and only been in Tecumseh ten years. Shows what paying attention to business can do

Beside a full line of drugs, tobacco stationary, etc. he has a line of wall paper with the best, and right now it is school books and supplies which are coming each day. Everything the school children want can be found here and that is sure some assortment to carry.

Ben is assisted by J. J. Orr the well known druggist of this vicinity for so many years and the combination is most excellent.

C. A. WRIGHT & SON

To the student of early history of the village and county some of these interviews with the older firms have been mighty interesting. Such was the case in talking with C. A. Wright of C. A. Wright & Son the other day. He said that it was in 1865 that his father Moses Wright opened the drug store which is the firms present stand. The building had a partition through the center and George Heesen ran a tailor shop in the east side and Joe Burroughs an eating place in the west room. There were no stores further east in the block and the children had a well worn path diagonally across from the front corner of the store to Ottawa street on their way to the present high school building.

For 15 years Mr. Wright conducted this drug business, the son C. A. Wright learning the business and working with his father. Upon the elder gentleman's death in 1880 the firm became C. A Wright & Co, his mother retaining her interest in the business until her death.

Ten years ago Mr. Wright's son Donald, having studied pharmacy, was admitted into the firm and it has been C. A. Wright & Son since. Their stock consists of a full line of drugs, medicines, paints oils, wall paper, tobacco and cigars and in recent years a splendid stock of kodak goods has been added. And the reputation for skillful handling of drugs has been earned.

Royal Welsh Ladies Choir

THE Royal Welsh Ladies Choir, under the personal leadership of Mme. Hughes-Thomas of Cardiff, Wales. This organization is one of which Mme. Melba said: "They are wonderful. They are perfectly splendid, and you may say that I said so."

TECUMSEH CHAUTAUQUA, SEPTEMBER 5—10

WILLIAMSON BROS.

C. E. Williamson in March 1885, established a wholesale commission business shipping car lots of eggs and poultry. In 1895 he added a grocery department which he ran in his store corner Chicago and Ottawa streets In 1907 his three sons Charles, Floyd and Leon bought the business and buildings which consist of a splendid two story store building largest refrigerator building in this part of the country.

CHAS. H. WILLIAMSON

The boys have worked up a fine trade in the grocery line with fruit and vegetables in addition. They specialize in the Karavan coffees, teas and spices.

Their commission business is immense, shipping out one-half million lbs. a poultry a year. Some seasons of the year they have as high as 25 men men driving over the country buying this poultry which it takes 35 men to dress and pack. And they buy up most of the butter and eggs from this part of the country.

LEON E. WILLIAMSON

Automatic refrigerator has been installed where factory out puts of cheese and crates of lemons, beside the poultry, butter and eggs are kept for the wholesale trade.

Floyd left the firm in 1913 and since Charles has taken as his particular duty the overseeing of the commission business and Leon the grocery department.

It would pay you to look over their stock and entertain you greatly to go through the refrigerator plant.

TECUMSEH CANDY KITCHEN

Sept 4, 1908 Chas Melonakos opened to the public, The Tecumseh Candy Kitchen and with the shining new fixtures, beautiful Soda fountain and well lighted room attracted a big trade from the first. Two years ago Mike Melonakos and Pete Zurdos, Chas Melonakos' nephews bought him out and have been very succesful in manufacturing home made candy and ice cream which they retail and whole sale. This last spring the boys put an ice cream wagon on the street which certainly does a fine business Wherever there is a crowd there is sure to be the ice cream man and his cones have been great favorites with both old and young all summer. Their window, full of choice candies is quite a center for the youngsters and any time of day a row of little people are lined up looking at the goodies Inside is the largest display of candies in the village and all is good as it looks.

LOCATION OF FRANK SLAYING IS IN DOUBT

Actual Killing Probably Occurred Where Body Hung.

Macon, Ga., Aug. 20.—That Governor Harris means business in his hunt for the lynchers of Leo M. Frank, people in his home city are satisfied. The information is received here direct from the governor that he has offered half of the entire reward fund of the state for 1915 for the three first convictions of parties guilty of the abduction and lynching of Frank. The fund provided for the purpose of covering executive offers of rewards is limited to $3,000 a year, the maximum in any one case being $500.

The proclamation is so drawn that it leaves room to doubt as to whether the actual slaying of Frank occurred at Marietta, in Cobb county, or at Milledgeville, in Baldwin county. This covers the possibility that Frank was killed by lynchers before the party reached Cobb county. It is probable the killing occurred where the body was found, with the intention of forcing trial of the case or cases, in the event of apprehension of any of the lynchers, in the county where feeling against Frank is bitter and where the family of Mary Phagan, the murdered girl lived.

BARS ALL ALCOHOL IN DRY COUNTY DRINKS

Fellows Dispels Idea Small Percentage Is Allowable.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 20.—Although there has been a prevailing opinion that beverages containing one-half of 1 per cent of alcohol could be manufactured in local option counties without violation of the law, this theory was dispelled by Attorney General Fellows, who declared it illegal to manufacture a beverage containing any alcohol in a county where local option is in force.

SHOPLIFTER IS GIVEN PRROLE

State Pardon Board Orders Lansing Woman Released.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 20.—The board of pardons has ordered the parole of Mrs. Emma Hamilton of Lansing, who is in the Detroit house of correction. Her minimum sentence expired some time ago but the parole will only take effect Saturday.

Mrs. Hamilton was a member of the quartet of shoplifters who caused a sensation during the holidays last winter in Lansing. Mrs. Hamilton will return to Lansing to live with her son, daughter-in-law and granddaughter, born ten days ago.

ELOPER STILL HELD IN JAIL

Huron County Man Whom Sheriff Nabbed Awaits Raising of Bail.

Bad Axe, Mich., Aug. 20.—"D. C. Smith," or Dewitt Howard of Verona Mills, Huron county, arrested by Sheriff Uptegrove in Mesick, Wexford county, on a wife desertion charge after "Smith" had eloped with a Saginaw girl, is in jail here pending aid from his friends who are endeavoring to arrange for bail.

Howard waived examination before Recorder Burgess here and was bound over to the October term of the circuit court.

WHOLE DAY SAVED BY 'BUS

Flint-Flushing Motor Line Has Good Inaugural.

Flint, Mich., Aug. 20.—An auto bus line was started between here and Flushing, twelve miles. The line was well patronised.

The motor trip takes but forty-five minutes each way while a trip by train which has to be made via Durand takes practically all day.

Young Slaybaugh Arraigned.

Hillsdale, Mich., Aug. 20.—Guy Slaybaugh, the thirteen year old son of Ellsworth Slaybaugh, was arraigned Wednesday before Judge F. H. Stone on the charge of murder, being accused of causing the death of Cyrus Coon, rural mail carrier, found dead here with a bullet wound in his head July 20.

Divorces Outnumber Marriages.

Muskegon, Mich., Aug. 20.—A survey of divorce cases up in the circuit court this term just completed shows that during the past fortnight more divorces have been granted than marriages have been performed in the county during the same period of time.

Ministers' Children Wed.

Hillsdale, Mich., Aug. 20.—Miss Mildred Reed, only daughter of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. D. B. Reed of this city, and Rev. Charles Immanuel Edinger, only child of Rev. and Mrs. Charles Edinger of Hersey, were married here at the Episcopal church.

War Drives Socialist to Kill Self.

Bellaire, Mich., Aug. 20.—Because he couldn't reconcile Socialism and the European war, Ernest L. Bliadeaux, a well-to-do farmer, killed himself in Bellaire by shooting himself in the head.

BLAND'S BAND THE ESCANABA DAILY MIRROR

Escanaba, Mich., July 22, 1915

In what is regarded as the best musical treat offered Escanabans since the appearance of Sousa's big organization several years ago, Bland's orchestra entertained Escanaba people for several hours last night. * * *

The band and orchestra, under the leadership of Harrie L. Bland is one [illegible] of young fellows, clean cut and unmistakably college bred. Then too, they are real musicians, as evidence in the execution of the numbers presented and the character of them.

Director Bland has a wonderful faculty of apparently being in close touch with each of his musicians and of getting the maximum of music and expression out of their playing. * * *

"The Last Stand of Gen. Custer," the final number of the evening was one of the spectacular kind. The story of the great fight was told in music; the deploying of the scouts, the first gun, the charge of the Indians; the preparation for the defense and the battle and finally, the last bugle call. The effects were splendid especially the bugle call in the distance and the close when the orchestra rose and swung into the "Star Spangled Banner." The audience also rose to its feet and applauded vigorously.

Madame Melba and Papers Praise Welch Choir 24 30 His Majesty the King, also Joins Chorls of Critics and Admirers (12 18)

The Royal Welsh Ladies' Choir of Cardiff, Wales, under the leadership of Madame Hughes-Thomas, has been widely heard and praised in its American tour. His Majesty, the King, and various newspapers as well as Madame Melba, have written of them as follows:

Madame Melba says: "The Welsh Choir is magnificent; they are perfectly splendid, and you may say I said so."

H. I. M., The King, at Cardiff: "Well, you Welsh people [illegible] ately fond of music, and you have beautiful voices. I have certainly enjoy your Choir immensely. I must congratulate you (Madame Thomas) and your Choir on your excellent performance."

Winnipeg Telegram: "The program was of high class, and the artists were artists of distinction and recognized talent, and the manner in which they acquited themselves evoked repeated encores from a discriminating audience." The Royal Welsh Ladies' Choir will appear in Tecumseh on the 10 day of September at the Chautauqua.

The Home Talent recital to be given at the Macon Presbyterian Church Thursday evening, August 26th will be postponed for one week. Definate date will be announced later.

Miss Ruth Ager returned from her visit in Manchester Saturday morning.

The village stand pipe is being treated to a coat of paint inside and out. It is otherwise being strengthened and improved.

Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman of Decatur Ill., came Saturday night for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Rathbun.

Gerald Kent and John Snyder two young lads left home for parts unknown last week and at last accounts had not been found.

FEDS WIN BIG VICTORY IN CASE OF MARSANS

United States Court Hands Cuban Over to St. Louis Club.

St. Louis, Aug. 20.—The injunction restraining Armando Marsans from playing baseball with the St. Louis Federals was dissolved by Judge Dyer in the federal district court here and Marsans now is at liberty to play with the St. Louis team.

Judge Dyer in deciding the case considered only one of the three points raised by the attorneys for Marsans in their petition for a modification or dissolution of the injunction. This was that Marsans' contract with the Cincinnati Nationals was not binding after Oct. 14, 1914.

WHOLE LIFE SPENT AT HOME

Woman, 78, on Train Once, Dies at Lagrange, Ind.

Lagrange, Ind., Aug. 21.—Miss Ann Tidrick, seventy-eight years old, a pioneer resident of this county, is dead here at the home of her sister, Mrs. A. L. Lovell.

Miss Tidrick, died on the farm taken up from the government by her father, Jacob Tidrick, in 1835. She had been out of Lagrange county only twice in her life and had ridden once on a railroad train, and then only twelve miles to Sturgis, Mich. Three miles from the Lagrange county line was the farthest she ever was outside the county.

Child Wanted "to Be an Angel."

What Cures Eczema?

We have had so many inquiries lately regarding Eczema and other skin diseases, that we are glad to make our answer public. After careful investigation we have found that a simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen, as compounded in D. D. D. Prescription, can be relied upon. We would not make this statement to our patrons, friends and neighbors unless we were sure of it—and although there are many so-called Eczema remedies sold, we ourselves unhesitatingly recommend D. D. D. Prescription.

Drop into our store today, just to talk over the merits of this wonderful Prescription.

The FORESTER'S DAUGHTER
A ROMANCE OF THE BEAR TOOTH RANGE
By HAMLIN GARLAND

The FORESTER'S DAUGHTER

A ROMANCE OF THE BEAR TOOTH RANGE

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1914, by Hamlin Garland

"We'll return to the Springs in a few days," she [illegible] "Come and see us. Our bungalow is on the other side of the river. And you too," she addressed Berrie, but her tone was so conventionally polite that the ranch girl, burning with jealous heat, made no reply.

McFarlane led the way to the lake rapidly and in silence. The splendors of the foliage, subdued by the rains; the grandeur of the peaks, the song of the glorious stream, all were lost on Berrie, for she now felt herself to be nothing but a big, clumsy, coarse handed tomboy. Her worn gloves, her faded skirt and her man's shoes had been made hateful to her by that smug, graceful, play acting tourist with the cool, keen eyes and smirking lips. "She pretends to be a kitten, but she isn't. She's a sly grownup cat," she bitterly accused, but she could not deny the charm of her personality.

Wayland was forced to acknowledge that Berrie in this dark mood was not the delightful companion she had hitherto been. Something sweet and confiding had gone out of their relationship, and he was too keen witted not to know what it was. He estimated precisely the value of the malicious parting words of Siona Moore.

That Berrie was suffering and that her jealousy touchingly proved the depth of her love for him brought no elation, only perplexity. He was not seeking such devotion. As a companion on the trail she had been a joy; as a jealous sweetheart she was less admirable. He realized perfectly that this return journey was of her arrangement, not McFarlane's, and, while he was not resentful of her care, he was in doubt of the outcome. It hurried him into a further intimacy which might prove embarrassing.

At the camp by the lake the supervisor became sharply commanding. "Now, let's throw these packs on lively. It will be slippery on the high trail, and you'll just naturally have to hit leather hard and keep jouncing if you reach the wagon road before dark. But you'll make it."

"Make it!" said Berrie. "Of course we'll make it. Don't you worry about that for a minute. Once I get out of the green timber the dark won't worry me. We'll push right through."

In packing the camp stuff on the saddles Berrie, almost as swift and powerful as her father, acted with perfect understanding of every task, and Wayland's admiration of her skill increased mightily.

She insisted on her father's turning back. "We don't need you," she said. "I can find the pass."

McFarlane's faith in his daughter had been tested many times, and yet he was a little loath to have her start off on a trail new to her. He argued against it briefly, but she laughed at his fears. "I can go anywhere you can," she said. "Stand clear!" With final admonition he stood clear.

"Goodby!" he called. "If you meet Nash hurry him along. Moore is anxious to run those lines. Keep in touch with Landon, and if anybody turns up from the district office say I'll be back on Friday. Good luck!"

"Same to you. So long!"

Berea led the way, and Norcross fell in behind the pack horses, feeling as unimportant as a small boy at the heels of a circus parade. His girl captain was so competent, so self reliant and so sure that nothing he could say or do assisted in the slightest degree. Her leadership was a curiously close reproduction of her father's unhurried and graceful action. Her seat in the saddle was as easy as Landon's, and her eyes were alert to every rock and stream in the road. She was at home here, where the other girl would have been a bewildered child, and his words of praise lifted the shadow from her face.

Wayland called out, "The air feels like Thanksgiving morning, doesn't it?"

"It is Thanksgiving for me, and I'm going to get a grouse for dinner," she replied, and in less than an hour the snap of her rifle made good her promise.

After leaving the upper lake she turned to the right and followed the course of a swift and splendid stream which came churning through a cheerless, mossy swamp of spruce trees. Inexperienced as he was, Wayland knew that this was not a well marked trail, but his confidence in his guide was too great to permit of any worry over the pass, and he amused himself by watching the water robins as they flitted from stone to stone in the torrent, and in calculating just where he would drop a line for trout if he had time to do so, and in recovered serenity enjoyed his ride. Gradually he put aside his perplexities concerning the future, permitting his mind to prefigure nothing but his duties with Landon at Meeker's mill.

He was rather glad of the decision to send him there, for it promised absorbing sport. "I shall see how Landon and Belden work out their problem," he said. He had no fear of Frank Meeker now. "As a forest guard with official duties to perform I can meet that young savage on other and more nearly equal terms," he assured himself.

The trail grew slippery and in places ran full of water. "But there's a bottom somewhere," Berrie confidently declared, and pushed ahead with resolute mien. It was noon when they rose above timber and entered upon the wide, smooth slopes of the pass. Snow filled the grass here, and the wind, keen, cutting, unhindered, came out of the desolate west with savage fury, but the sun occasionally shone through the clouds with vivid splendor. "It is December now," shouted Wayland as he put on his slicker and cowered low to his saddle. "It will be January soon."

"We will make it Christmas dinner," she laughed, and her glowing good humor warmed the heart. She was entirely her cheerful self again.

As they rose the view became magnificent, wintry, sparkling. The great clouds, drifting like ancient warships heavy with armament, sent down chill showers of hail over the frosted gold of the grassy slopes, but when the shadows passed the sunlight descended in silent cataracts deliciously spring-like. The conies squeaked from the rocky ridges and a brace of eagles circling about a lone crag, as if exulting in their sovereign mastery of the air, screamed in shrill ecstatic duo. The sheer cliffs on their shadowed sides were violently purple. Everywhere the landscape exhibited crashing contrasts of primary pigments which bit into consciousness like the flare of a martial band.

It was nearly 2 o'clock when they began to drop down behind the rocky ridges of the eastern slope, and soon, in the bottom of a warm and sheltered hollow just at timber line, Berrie drew her horse to stand and slipped from the saddle. "We'll rest here an hour," she said, "and cook our grouse, or are you too hungry to wait?"

"I can wait," he answered dramatically. "But it seems as if I had never eaten."

"Well, then, we'll save the grouse till tomorrow, but I'll make some coffee. You bring some water while I start a fire."

And so, while the tired horses cropped the russet grass, she boiled some coffee and laid out some bread and meat, while he sat by watching her and absorbing the beauty of the scene, the charm of the hour. "It is exactly like a warm afternoon in April," he said, "and here are some of the spring flowers."

"There now, sit by and eat," she said, with humor, and in perfectly restored tranquillity they ate and drank, with no thought of critics or of rivals. They were alone, and content to be so.

It was deliciously sweet and restful there in that sunny hollow on the breast of the mountain. The wind swept through the worn branches of the dwarfed spruce with immemorial wistfulness, but these young souls heard it only as a far off song. Side by side on the soft Alpine clover they rested and talked, looking away at the shining peaks, and down over the dark green billows of fir beneath them. Half the forest was under their eyes at the moment, and the man said: "Is it not magnificent! It makes me proud of my country. Just think, all this glorious spread of hill and valley is under your father's direction—I may say under your direction, for I notice he does just about what you tell him to do."

"You've noticed that?" she laughed. "If I were a man I'd rather be supervisor of this forest than congressman."

"So would I," he agreed. "Nash says you are the supervisor. I wonder if your father realizes how efficient you are? Does he ever sorrow over your not being a boy?"

Her eyes shone with mirth. "Not that I can notice. He 'pears contented."

"You're a good deal like a son to him, I imagine. You can do about all that a boy can do, anyhow—more than I could ever do. Does he realize how much you have to do with the management of his forest? I've never seen your like. I really believe you could carry on the work as well as he."

She flushed with pleasure. "You seem to think I'm a district forester in disguise."

"I have eyes, Miss Supervisor, and also ears, which leads me to ask, Why don't you clean out that saloon gang? Landon is sure there's crooked work going on at that mill—certainly that open bar is a disgraceful and corrupting thing."

Her face clouded. "We've tried to cut out that saloon, but it can't be done. You see, it's on a patented claim. The claim was bogus, of course, and we've made complaint, but the matter is hung up and that gives 'em a chance to go on."

"Well, let's not talk of that. It's too delicious an hour for any question of business. It is a moment for poetry. I wish I could write what I feel this moment. Why don't we camp here and watch the sun go down and the moon rise? From our lofty vantage ground the coming of dawn would be an epic."

"We mustn't think of that," she protested. "We must be going."

"Not yet. The hour is too perfect. It may never come again. The wind in the pines, the sunshine, the conies crying from their rocks, the butterflies on the clover—my heart aches with the beauty of it. It's been a wonderful trip. Even that staggering walk in the rain had its splendid quality. I couldn't see the poetry in it then, but I do now. These few days have made us comrades, haven't they—comrades of the trail?"

CHAPTER XII.

The Death Grapple.

"YOU have been very considerate of me, Miss Supervisor." Wayland took her hand. "I've never seen such hands. They are like steel and yet they are feminine."

She drew her hands away. "I'm ashamed of my hands—they are so big and rough and dingy."

"They're brown, of course, and calloused—a little—but they are not big and they are beautifully modeled." He looked at the girl of the forest speculatively. "I am wondering how you would look in conventional dress."

"Do you 'mean'— She hesitated. "I'd look like a gawk in one of those low necked outfits. I'd never dare—and those short skirts would sure cripple me."

"Oh, no, they wouldn't. You'd have to modify your [illegible] a little, but you'd negotiate it. You're equal to anything."

"You're making fun of me!"

"No, I'm not. I'm in earnest. You're the kind of American girl that can go anywhere and do anything. My sisters would mortgage their share of the golden streets for your abounding health—and so would I."

"You are all right now," she smiled. "You don't look or talk as you did."

"It's this sunlight!" He lifted a spread hand as if to clutch and hold something. "I feel it soaking into me like some magical oil. No more moping and whining for me. I've proved that hardship is good for me."

"Don't crow till you're out of the woods. It's a long ride down the hill and going down is harder on the tenderfoot than going up."

"I'm no longer a tenderfoot. All I need is another trip like this with you and I shall be a master trailer."

All this was very sweet to her, and though she knew they should be going she lingered. Childishly reckless of the sinking sun, she played with the wild flowers at her side and listened to his voice in complete content. He was right. The hour was too beautiful to be shortened, although she saw no reason why others equally delightful might not come to them both. He was more of the lover than he had ever been before, that she knew, and in the light of his eyes all that was not girlish and charming melted away. She forgot her heavy shoes, her rough hands and sun tanned [illegible] and listened with wondering joy and pride to his words, which were of a fineness such as she had never heard spoken—only books contained such unusual and exquisite phrases.

A cloud passing across the sun flung down a shadow of portentous chill and darkness. She started to her feet with startled recollection of the place and the hour.

"We must be going—at once!" she commanded.

"Not yet," he pleaded. "It's only a cloud. The sun is coming out again. I have perfect confidence in your woodcraft. Why not spend another night on the trail? It may be our last trip together."

He tempted her strongly, so frank and boyish and lovable were his glances and his words. But she was vaguely afraid of herself, and though the long ride at the moment seemed hard and dull the thought of her mother waiting decided her action.

"No, no!" she responded firmly. "We have wasted too much time already. We must ride."

He looked up at her with challenging glance. "Suppose I refuse—suppose I decide to stay here?"

Upon her as he talked a sweet hesitation fell, a dream which held more of happiness than she had ever known. "It is a long, hard ride," she thought, "and another night on the trail will not matter." And so the moments passed on velvet feet, and still she lingered, reluctant to break the spell.

Suddenly into their idyllic drowse of content, so sweet, so youthful and so pure of heart, broke the sound of a horse's hurrying, clashing steel shod feet, and, looking up, Berrie saw a mounted man coming down the mountain side with furious, reckless haste.

"It is Cliff!" she cried out. "He's on our trail!" And into her face came a look of alarm. Her lips paled; her eyes widened. "He's mad—he's dangerous! Leave him to me," she added.

There was something so sinister in the rider's disregard of stone and tree and pace, something so menacing in the forward thrust of his body, that Berrie was able to divine his wrath and was smitten into irresolution, all her hardy, boyish self reliance swallowed up in the weakness of the woman. She forgot the pistol at her belt and awaited the assault with rigid pose.

As Belden neared them Norcross also perceived that the rider's face was distorted with passion and that his glance was not directed upon Berrie, but upon himself, and he braced himself for the attack.

Leaving his saddle with one flying leap, which the cowboy practices at play, Belden hurled himself upon his rival with the fury of a panther.

The slender youth went down before the big rancher as though struck by a catapult, and the force of his fall against the stony earth stunned him so that he lay beneath his enemy as helpless as a child.

Belden snarled between his teeth, "I told you I'd kill you, and I will!"

But this was not to be. Berea suddenly recovered her native force. With a cry of pain, of anger, she flung herself on the maddened man's back. Her hands encircled his neck like a collar of bronze.

"Let go!" she commanded, with deadly intensity. "Let go or I'll choke the life out of you! Let go, I say!"

He raised a hand to beat her off, but she was too strong, too desperate to be driven away. She was as blind to pain as a mother eagle and bent above him so closely that he could not bring the full weight of his fist to bear. With one determined hand still clutching his throat, she ran the fingers of her other hand into his hair and twisted his head upward with a power which he could not resist. And so, looking into his upturned ferocious eyes, she repeated with remorseless fury, "Let go, I say!"

His swollen face grew rigid, his mouth gaped, his tongue protruded, and at last, releasing his hold on his victim, he rose, flinging Berrie off with a final desperate effort. "I'll kill you, too!" he gasped.

Up to this moment the girl had felt no fear of herself, but now she resorted to other weapons. Snatching her pistol from its holster, she leveled it at his forehead. "Stop!" she said, and something in her voice froze him into calm. He was not a fiend; he was not a deliberate assassin; he was only a jealous, despairing, insane lover, and as he looked into the face he knew so well and realized that nothing but hate and deadly resolution lit the eyes he had so often kissed his heart gave way, and, dropping his head, he said: "Kill me if you want to. I've nothing left to live for."

There was something unreal, appalling in this sudden reversion to wea-ness, and Berrie could not credit his remorse. "Give me your gun," she said.

He surrendered it to her, and she threw it aside, then turned to Wayland, who was lying white and still with face upturned to the sky. With a moan of anguish she bent above him and called upon his name. He did not stir, and when she lifted his head to her lap his hair, streaming with blood, stained her dress. She kissed him and called again to him, then turned with accusing frenzy to Belden: "You've killed him! Do you hear? You've killed him!"

The agony, the fury of hate in her voice reached the heart of the conquered man. He raised his head and stared at her with mingled fear and remorse. And so across that limp body these two souls, so lately lovers, looked into each other's eyes as though nothing but words of hate and loathing had ever passed between them. The girl saw in him only a savage, vengeful, bloodthirsty beast; the man confronted in her an accusing angel.

"I didn't mean to kill him," he muttered.

"Yes, you did! You meant it. You crushed his life out with your big hands—and now I'm going to kill you for it!"

ARABIAN HORSES.

Ancient Stories of Their Care and Training Are Mere Fables.

So far as we know, the Arabian breeders have no patented system of training their horses different from those prevailing among peoples of a similar degree of civilization. Naturally the lack of pasture results in young Arabian horses being fed a considerable quantity of barley and, so the story goes at least, a not inconsiderable quantity of the fruit of the date palm, fresh and dried, by way of succulence.

The colts are broken, usually barebacked, at two or three years old. Their subsequent handling is much like that of all other horses, with perhaps the difference that as early in life as possible the young animals are accustomed to doing without water for increasing periods of time in order to accustom them later on to the scarcity of liquids in desert journeys.

The ancient stories about the Arab steed being kissed and bawled over by the sheik's whole family, kept in the living tent and foaled on the best silk rugs are picturesque fables containing about the same measure of truth as the one which dates the pedigrees of Arabian horses back to the mares owned in Biblical times by King Solomon.—Breeder's Gazette.

THEY SAW THE GHOST.

Easy to Recognize the Woman Who Had Haunted the Place.

"A certain lady and her family," says Sir Mountstuart Grant-Duff in his "Diary," "hired a place in Scotland which was haunted by the ghost of a woman, who was to be seen constantly at night wandering through the rooms and passages. When the family arrived the lady was much struck with the place and said, 'I must have been here before, for I know this place so well, only there ought to be two rooms here, and there is only one.'

"The agent replied that within a few weeks the owner had caused a partition to be taken down and made the two rooms into one. Still the lady was puzzled at her knowledge of the place till she remembered that it was a house she used to go to in her dreams.

"Well, some time passed, and the agent was up at the house again, when the lady complained that one part of the contract had not been fulfilled. They had hired a house and a ghost for the summer, and no ghost had she seen.

"The agent replied: 'Of course not, because you, madam, are the ghost. We recognized you the moment we saw you.'"

An Old Guidebook.

Of all the old guidebooks none is sought so keenly by collectors as some of Murray's early guides. Perhaps the most precious of these as a bibliographical curiosity is the first edition of "Murray's Guide to Switzerland," published in 1838. Mountaineering as a popular pastime was not then invented, and in the section devoted to Mont Blanc the author contemptuously declares that "it is a somewhat remarkable fact that a large proportion of those who have made this ascent have been persons of unsound mind."—London Chronicle.

For the Children

Sons of Princeton graduates of the class of 1910 had a fine time at the recent commencement exercises of that university. Of course they are pretty small boys, but that did not detract from the enjoyment they had nor the pleasure they gave to the older folks. The little fellows were dressed in Turkish costumes and took part in the parade around the campus. They attracted a great deal of attention from the spectators and were generally acclaimed the best hit of the day. The photograph shows two of the little fellows, who are decorated with the figures "1910," which denotes the year in which their fathers were graduated.

Game of Initials.

Provide a pack of cards upon which the letters of the alphabet have been conspicuously printed. There should be but one letter on each card and more than one alphabet will be needed. Four or five would not be too many, but Q, X and Z may be omitted.

Choose a leader and have him sit where he can be plainly seen by all. He must put the pack of cards face down on a table before him, or on a book on his lap. He then calls for the name of some general, novelist, country or city, or any object he pleases, beginning with the letter which he turns up from the pack and holds up for all to see, reading it distinctly as he does so. He must name the object required before turning up the card.

Whoever in the company first names the object called for receives the card. When the cards have all been used the person holding the most has won the game. For example, the leader says, "Name a state of the Union beginning with"—here he turns up a card—"the letter 'D.'" Some one cries "Delaware" and receives the card.

"Name one of Scott's characters beginning with F."

"Name one of Dickens' novels beginning with G."

"Name a famous general beginning with G."

And so on. In case no one can give an answer the card is returned to the bottom of the pack.

Three Puzzle Birds.

Each of the following stanzas is to be completed by adding at the end of the fourth line the name of the bird described in the preceding three lines. The stars show the number of letters in the name which must rime with the second line:

What bird is fabled to bring pleasant weather,
And every sailor boy is his well wisher?
His coat is gay with many a bright hued feather,
This bird is called **********.

What bird is ever prophesying rain,
Though oft his prognostics fail?
"More wet!" he cries; "More wet. More wet!" again,
Do you know the *****?

What bird is he whose humming charms the ear,
And yet whose voice perhaps is seldom heard?
His plumage gleams like gems with brilliant rays,
This [illegible] ***** ****.

Answers.—Kingfisher, quail, humming bird.

Some Facts About Birds.

Birds are covered with feathers because they need a covering that, while it will keep them warm, will also be light, so that it will not prevent them from flying.

Ostriches have small wings because their legs are long, and the wings are not needed for running. They are only used to steady the body while running.

Birds have sharp beaks because they have no teeth, and the beak seizes, holds and divides their food.

Birds that swim under water have web feet because the spreading out of the toes of the bird brings the thin membrane between the toes into the shape of a fin, and by striking this fin against the water the bird moves itself along.

Cleaning Day.

My goodness! What a dirty place!
There's doll clothes everywhere.
No wonder that I'm in disgrace—
You bad things, though, don't care.

I'll put you on this chair to stay
While I go get a broom;
Then you'll be safely out the way
Till I clean up this room.

I wouldn't b'lieve two babies could Get their home so sad a sight;
If I was jus' to whip you good
'Twould only serve you right.

Well, if here isn't that Nellie's dress
I looked all over for!
Here underneath this awful mess,
And with the front all tore!

And there's that nice new rubber ball
I missed the other day.

Languages.

The French, Spanish, Italian and Portuguese languages (known as the "romance" languages) are offshoots of the old Latin and are to a considerable extent founded upon it, while the German and English tongues grew up quite apart from the Latin. That is why the Scandinavian, Dutch, German and English languages (which, like the peoples themselves, are closely related) are so scant in Latin words and derivations.—New York American.

[illegible] CURIOSITY.

An Evil and a Bore at Times, but on the Whole, a Grand Quality.

Humanity has never been able to satisfy itself as to whether curiosity be a virtue or a vice. When inconvenient it is labeled as a vice; when it leads to discovery or adds to knowledge it is applauded as a virtue of the highest [illegible]. Certainly it is an instinct deeply [illegible] human nature. On it the [illegible] of childhood [illegible] the most intelligent [illegible] wonder; this quickly [illegible] active curiosity, until life becomes an [illegible] and breathless voyage of [illegible] Its possession is the great distinction between youth and the purlieus of age. Youth is passed when the sensation of adventure is ended, when, instead of boundless expectation and of curiosity that penetrates into all the corners of existence, a man is content to take things as they are, when eagerness gives way to complacency and questioning to the cynicism of experience.

Human curiosity may be stifled, but mercifully it never can be killed. In its best form it raises man above the level of the rest of creation; it becomes the desire to know, to penetrate to the root of things, to ascend to the stars and wrest from them their secrets, to solve the problems of the past, the present and the future. At its worst it may be low and vulgar, unworthy prying into matters which concern us not, the desire to apprehend evil as well as good, a curiosity that is morbid and unwholesome, but, taking it all in all, it is an excellent stimulant to progress.—London Academy.

AN ARAB LEGEND.

Story of the Covetous Man Who Went a Step Too Far.

The Arabs tell a story to show how a mean man's philosophy overshoots itself. Under the reign of the first caliph there was a merchant of Bagdad equally rich and avaricious.

One day he bargained with a porter to carry home for him a basket of porcelain vases for 10 paras. As they went along he said to the man: "My friend, you are young, and I am old. You can still earn plenty. Strike a para from your hire." "Willingly," replied the porter. This request was repeated again and again, until, when they reached the house, the porter had only a single para to receive.

As they went upstairs the merchant said, "If you will resign the last para I will give you three pieces of advice." "Be it so," said the porter. "Well, then," said the merchant, "if any one tells you it is better to be fasting than feasting do not believe him. If any one tells you it is better to be poor than rich do not believe him. If any one tells you it is better to walk than ride in your carriage do not believe him."

"My dear sir," replied the astonished porter, "I knew these things before. But if you will listen to me I will give you such advice as you never heard before." The merchant turned around, and the porter, throwing the basket down the staircase, said, "If any one tells you that one of your vases is unbroken do not believe him."

Seeing an Eclipse.

In December, 1870, a solar eclipse occurred, the partial phases of which M. Flammarion observed in Paris while the enemy's shells were dropping in the besieged city. The total phase of the eclipse was visible in North Africa, and Bismarck, being aware that before the war arrangements had been made for Professor Janssen to go to Africa to make scientific observations of totality on behalf of the Paris observatory, sent a message into the city offering the scientist a safe conduct.

This was politely refused by Professor Janssen, says the London Standard, but, nevertheless, he went to Africa to see the phenomenon, leaving Paris by way of the air in a balloon, thanks in large measure to the assistance of M. Flammarion in making the necessary arrangements for the aerial voyage.

Without Prejudice.

A party of young men and women, members of a sketching club, were motoring along a country road. Just within the fence on the left grew innumerable graceful stalks, each bearing globes of pale green that shaded into gray and purple.

"How enchanting!" exclaimed one young woman.

"Do tell us," said another young woman, equally enthusiastic, to a gardener standing near, "what these beau-oo-tiful things are."

"Them? Them's onions gone to seed."—New York Times.

Rice In Costa Rica.

Rice is one of the most important articles of food used in Costa Rica. It is eaten at least twice a day by every inhabitant of the republic. The per capita consumption of rice in Costa Rica is thus at least 100 pounds per year, and the total amount of rice consumed over 30,000,000 pounds per year.—Exchange.

Force of Habit.

"See here, boss, I ordered tripe and beans, with coffee, and the waitress has brought me a lettuce sandwich and a cup of weak tea."

"You must excuse her, sir. All due to absentmindedness. She's a former society girl, and she can't seem to grasp the idea that a quick lunch is not a function."—Chicago News.

Presence of Mind.

"That woman over there looks as if she were painted."

"Sir, that is my wife."

"I had not finished my sentence. She looks as if she were painted by Raphael and had just stepped out of the frame."—Exchange.

Pale Yellow Color Employed This Pretty Summer Blouse.

ELABORATE SHIRT WAIST.

The eton jacket effect is simulated in this handsome blouse by means of inserts of white silk embroidery. The color of the blouse is a pale yellow, a color much liked this year. The collar follows the lines well liked by all femininity and is moderately high in the back. The sleeves are long and trimmed with the embroidery.

ABOUT HYPOCRISY.

Be Sincere About What You Say, Do and Think.

Be sincere of what you say of others. If you cannot think nice things about them do not say anything at all. You should never run down others in your speech, so if you cannot praise be silent. If you are forced to utter an opinion about a person you dislike pick out the one point you find to admire in that person and mention that.

Unfortunately it is all too seldom that the real hypocrite recognizes herself in her true nature. She usually garbs herself in a cloak of self righteousness, covering her inward self with a mask of dissimulation. Her "I am better than thou" attitude succeeds in deceiving most of the world, including herself. This pharisaism is one of the commonest characteristics of the hypocrite.

It is better to be blunt and outspoken than to be hypocritical. The hypocrite may make more friends, but the frank person knows her friends are true. You want your friends to like you for what you are—not for what you are not, but pretend to be.

The hypocrite parades her pretended virtues before the world. Self advertisement is a model of kindness and nobility is her pet labor. Her plausibility is her best stock in trade. You have only to talk to her five minutes to know that she has two Bible classes and is the most charitable member of her church. According to her, she is constantly doing good. She will tell you in one breath that she has only love in her heart for the whole world and in the next that Mrs. Brown is no doubt a respectable woman, but that she shouldn't be so indiscreet.

The awful part about the hypocrite is that she can do more harm to a girl's character in one minute than a frank person can do in a year. The outspoken girl will talk to you against a person and you will know right away that she is talking of some one she greatly dislikes. You can tell, consequently, that her opinion of the person in question is prejudiced by her dislike and is to be valued accordingly.

But the hypocrite speaks very highly of the person she wants to slander. Then she inserts a but and a slight innuendo. Every insinuation is preceded by a flattering comment. The impression you receive at once is that this criticism must be quite unprejudiced, as the talker said so many nice things too. Every harmful innuendo is doubled in importance because you think that if a woman who is such a friend can say such things they must be true.

Keep Pantry Neat.

We all know how hard it is to keep the pantry looking neat. The spices and other articles lying around make it so untidy. From your grocer get three large, strong egg cases. Nail these firmly one on the other. This gives you six compartments. Now get a ten cent can of paint (any color you want); then make a curtain (double) and put on rod. In one compartment have spices, in another all articles that come in bags, like beans, rice, etc. This cleans the pantry out and helps fill up the kitchen.

To Keep Stockings Mated.

Take some small snap fasteners. Sew one part of the fastener on one stocking at the top and the other part on the other stocking at the top. Then when stockings are taken off to put in the wash have each person snap his or her pair together. It does not interfere with the washing, and no clothespins are necessary when they are hung on the line to dry. Best of all, the pairs are always together.

Bull Fight Whistles.

Nearly every spectator at a Spanish bullfight carries a whistle, which he blows if he considers a toreador to have broken any of the rules of the "game."

Enforced Truthfulness.

Care of the Baby in Summer

Helps For the Country Mother in the Care of the Baby.

[Prepared by the children's bureau, United States department of labor.]

Thousands of young mothers living on the farms and in the sparsely settled rural communities of this country have to meet the problems of motherhood [illegible] mothers [illegible] about [illegible] as well as hospitals [illegible] the infant [illegible] of enormous help to [illegible] so as to be able to avail themselves of it.

But the country mother usually lives too far away to make use of these stations, while hospitals and doctors are resources to be used only in illness or emergencies. Thus the country mother usually has had to learn from her neighbors or from her own, sometimes sorrowful, experience what to do or what not to do in the care of her baby. In this situation the mother should have at least one good book on this subject. If she will apply to the chief of the children's bureau, United States department of labor, Washington, asking for the publication called "Infant Care" [illegible] This bulletin contains simple directions for the care of the baby and in addition gives references to the standard books dealing with the subject.

An encouraging prospect for the relief of the country mother has lately opened up in the coming of the rural visiting nurse, who travels about the farming communities with a horse or an automobile. She is employed by the families in her district, who contribute to pay her salary. The town and country nursing service maintained by the American Red Cross association, with headquarters at 1624 H street, Washington, will be glad to send literature and answer questions about such service.

The nurses ride about their districts, calling at each house where there is need of their assistance. They work under the direction of a doctor, helping the family to carry out his instructions in cases of illness or accident. Thus the nurse does dressings, gives baths, takes temperatures or whatever may be required in the case. If there is a baby she advises the mother as to his care, shows her how to give him a bath and how to prepare his food if he is already weaned. But in addition to giving bedside nursing and home care the rural nurse does many other things. If typhoid makes its appearance she may look about for a polluted water supply or trace back the milk the family uses to its origin to see whether this is the source of the infection and urge methods which will prevent further spread of the disease.

She stops at the country schools and looks over the children and sometimes detects beginning cases of infectious disease in time to prevent an epidemic. She also notes cases of probable adenoids, deafness or weak eyes and calls the attention of the child's family to the need of care by a physician.

In all of this she carries on a continual campaign of education toward a better standard of community life by showing the mothers how flies can be exterminated or at least be kept out of the house; how to take care of the milk and the baby's bottles; how to clean up the premises, dispose of the refuse and how to keep the streams of the community pure. Such a nurse is therefore, if she is as useful as she may be, far more than a nurse. She is teacher, hygienist, dietician as well, and her salary will be saved many times over in the course of years by the prevention of illness and suffering through her work.

A rural woman's club may be the nucleus from which the movement for a community nurse starts. Clubs of this sort interested in such a movement will find many suggestions in a bulletin published by the children's bureau on work of this sort which is carried on in New Zealand. This pamphlet is published by the New Zealand Society For the Health of Women and Children and is sent free by the children's bureau, Washington, to all who ask for it.

Yellow Is Popular.

Yellow is an extremely fashionable color this season, as is evidenced by the number of pale yellow dance frocks at every opening of importance and by the hats trimmed with yellow daisies and pale yellow frosted grapes. A particularly charming hat noted the other day at luncheon hour was of black milan in elongated sailor shape, with a trimming of white petaled, yellow centered daisies of exaggerated size all around the base of the crown and a simple bow of black moire ribbon across the back. Two short amber headed pins held this hat to the hair, which, by the way, was dark, and around the edge of the brim was draped one of the graceful sanpan veils, the latest veil notion of fashion. These veils are square or circular affairs, cut out in the middle to fit over the hat crown and with an elastic run through a casing, so that the veil holds itself on without aid of pins.

Fresh Beets Valuable.

Fresh beets are quite rich in food properties and may be eaten hot with a dressing of butter or cold with an oil and vinegar dressing. Pickled beets, one of the best loved picnic dishes, are invaluable as an appetizer and deserve a place on every table.

Interesting Comparison.

"It beats all how luck does play favorites," remarked Farmer Corntossel. "I jes' been to see Ezra Hawkins."

"How's he gettin' along since he hurt his foot?"

"He's purty glum. The doctor charged him $100 fur cuttin' his foot off. An' when the railroad cut off Uncle Jake's foot the company paid him $600 in cash. Maybe these great corporations ain't as graspin' as some people says."—Washington Star.

GOOD-BYE BLUE MONDAY

I have seen a lot of women lately all tired out Tuesday and Wednesday from the effects of the hard Monday's Washing.

I have also seen a lot of women who would rather quit house-keeping [illegible] WASHING MACHINE we recently installed on a trial basis.

Honestly, one woman told us it was saving doctor bills.

The machine runs quiet, so very simple to operate. You know the wringer can be run at the same time as the washer or either can be run separate.

You can wring the clothes from the machine to the rinsing water, then to the bluing water, then to the basket just by the mere feeding of the clothes to the wringer.

No water to carry out as there is a simple devise to drain the water off.

As for doing clean work, you will simply be surprised to see how clean it washes the clothes without the least chance of tearing.

We want every lady to try a machine and will bring one to you, you can use it for two washing and if satisfied to go back to the old way will call for the machine.

Prices are very reasonable, on time if you wish, from $10.00 up,

Do You Worry?

The good worrier is a poor worker. Men who worry never arrive anywhere. They go by fits and starts. Some time you started a bank account, but you didn't keep it up. You had so many things on your mind. You were worried about this and about that. You hadn't the time to give to piling up money in the bank. Cut that habit of worrying out. Pitch in and work. Bank every dollar you possibly can. Get it into the bank at once. Keep at it and the time will come when you will have no cause to worry.

An account with this bank will aid you in many ways besides the money you will receive in interest.

1882 VS 1915

So many have referred to the year 1882 as like unto the year 1915 we have hunted up the file and quote from August—

"Immediately after the shower on Tuesday (Aug. 1) last the Brownville pond reached the highest point it has reached in 40 years. Fortunately the gates all worked well and in ten minutes every available space for the escape of water was opened and the flood was pouring into the river below.

On the same date Tecumseh was literally flooded and it seemed for about an hour or so as if another flood had come. The streets were flooded the cellars filled with water, several houses were deluged with the water coming down the chimneys. Chickens were drowned by the dozens several buildings were struck by lightning and a general havoc prevailed.

C. E. Williamson brought into our office yesterday a handful of unthreshed wheat the kernels of which has new sprouts nearly two inches long. The wheat was taken from Charlie Wileys farm, which lies in the west part of town.

The continued wet weather of the past few days has injured the wheat very much that is standing in the shock, and farmers will sustain a great loss by reason of grown wheat. In Macon it is estimated that half the crop is still in the field.

By way of encouragement to our farmers today we quote from the issue of the Herald of Aug. 24, '82. "An article appeared in the Herald two weeks since concerning Charlie Wileys wheat saying it was badly grown, come to thresh it out he has over 700 bushels of as nice wheat as was ever seen.".

New wheat is coming into Market quite freely this week one dollar per bushel is paid for good dry wheat.

D. GRATZ & SON INSTALL NEW HESS DRIER

For the past week D. Gratz & Son have been busy installing a new Hess drier in their Tecumseh mill. This drier is made by the Hess Warming and Ventilating Co. of Chicago and has a capacity of 100 bu. per hour. To install it the roof of the mill had to be opened as its height is 27 feet.

The Hess drier is claimed to be the best on the market. They guarantee to take 7½ per cent. of the moisture out of the wet grain. A 40-horse power boiler in the basement furnishes the steam which is carried to the drier and circulated through steam coils. The air passes through these coils becomes heated and set in motion through the drier by means of a fan. Hot air passes through the top and cold air at the bottom which heats and cools it.

The grain is taken from bins located in the upper part of the mill and is carried to the drier by means of conveyors here it is required to stay from 20 to 30 minutes and then taken back to the top of the mill and placed in bins by elevators.

Gratz & Son anticipating a quanity of wet grain to be put on the market put in a hurry order for this drier, which when installed and in operation, will put them in shape to handle much grain which would otherwise have to be refused. This is a big improvement to their already complete mill and will increase the efficiency of their plant wonderfully besides making Tecumseh a better market for the farmer living in this locality

Gratz & Son manufacture two brands of flour, Blue Ribbon Patent and Tecumseh Chief Patent besids doing a general milling business.

FAMILY REUNION

VanWinkles' 16th Annual Meeting Thursday August 19.

The pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. VanWinkle on North Union street was the scene of a grand family reunion Thursday when seventy-five members of the families met for their 16th reunion The day was perfect, and the company was a merry one.

A sumptous dinner was served, tables being spread in the house and on the spacious porch. Needless to say all did ample justice to the feast of good things.

The day was full of visiting and reminiscience. A history of the VanWinkle family tracing back to the 14th century when the VanWinkle name first originated in Holland was one of the interesting features. This was a bound volume of 400 pages and traced the families down to the present generation.

Among the out of town guests present were: Mrs. Dana Wright of North Dakota, Mrs. Baker, Minnesota, Mesdames Baker, Cornell and Backus and Kirk Van Winkle, wife and children of Lansing, Harry Backus, wife and children of Lapeer, Cary VanWinkle and wife of Pinkney, Louis VanWinkle, Grand Rapids, Homer and Marie Cornell Blissfield, Mr. and Mrs. Cornell, Blissfield, Mr. and Mrs. Barlow and son Danton and Mrs. Danton of Trenton, Mesdames Greenwood and Benton of Napoleon, Mrs. Palmer and daughter of Manchester and Mrs. Aylesworth of Peoria, Ill.

The officers for the ensuing year are:
President—Kirk VanWinkle
Secretary—Miss Jane Palmer.

His Testimony Will Interest Every Tecumseh Reader.

The value of local evidence is indisputable. It is the kind of evidence we accept as true because we know we can prove it for ourselves. There has been plenty of such evidence in the Tecumseh papers lately, and this straightforward testimony has established a confidence in the minds of [illegible] that will not be easily shaken.

J. B. Smith, E. Chicago St., Tecumseh, says: "I was caused a great deal of suffering by pains in the small of my back. When the attacks were present, it was all I could do to work. When stooping, I became very dizzy and spots of fire seemed to splash before my eyes. I rested poorly and in the morning when I got up, was unrefreshed. I doctored and used remedies of various kinds, but got no benefit until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. They made me feel like a different person, ridding me of the trouble. I gladly confirm my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills."

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound and imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

GERMANY TO ANNEX POLAND

Von Bethmann-Hollweg Tells of Purpose Opening of Reichstag.

Berlin, Aug. 20.—(Via The Hague.)—Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German imperial chancellor, opened the reichstag session. A feature of the chancellor's speech was his discussion of Poland's future, in the course of which he said: "The present occupation of Poland is the beginning of an evolution which will lead the country, freed from the Russian yoke, towards a bright future and able to develop and cultivate its individual and national character."

This passage is generally interpreted here as meaning that Germany proposes to hold Poland, to rehabilitate that country to a kingdom incorporated in the German empire.

Strikes Likely in New York and New England.

Washington, Aug. 20—Sanction was given by the executive board of the International Association of Machinists for four strikes, if necessary, to enforce the demand of workmen for an eight hour day in the machine tool industry. These strikes if ordered will occur in New York and New England and will call about 15,000 men This is believed to have been the result of the appearance before the executive board of J. J. Keppler of New York, who is vice president of the international association and field man for New York and New England.

Keppler took occasion to deny that he was in any way connected with the alleged attempt by the German representatives to precipitate strikes in the United States and denied that he knew or had heard of the other man named as alleged co-conspirator with him in the plan to start a strike

GRAVE CONCERN AT WASHINGTON

Situation Over Arabic Most Serious Since Maine Disaster.

NOT A MUNITION TRANSPORT

President Awaits Official Report—News Is Hastened to Wilson as He Plays Golf—Chief Magistrate Deeply Moved—"No Warning" Defiance of U. S. Demands.

Washington, Aug. 20—Official Washington is stirred to its depths over the sinking of the liner Arabic by a German submarine and the state department has taken steps to ascertain whether there were American citizens on board and whether the vessel was given warning. These were the two final issues made by President Wilson in his last note.

The attitude of this government will be governed by the official reports from the diplomatic and consular offices in England and Ireland.

In view of the final statements made by the president in his last note the question of whether an American was aboard the ship probably was the most momentous faced by this government since the sinking of the battleship Maine, in Havana harbor.

Not Munition Transport.

It was pointed out here that the fact that the Arabic was westward bound from Liverpool to New York would exclude from any possible controversy the contention raised by Germany in the Lusitania case that the German U boat commander's act was justified because the vessel sunk carried war munitions.

At 3 p. m. a dispatch was received from Consul Thompson at Queenstown saying:

"Arabic sunk at 9:30 this morning fifty miles from Queenstown. Sunk in eleven minutes. Eleven boats being brought here."

Secretary Lansing said he had no comment to make and would have none until after all details had been received. He assumed American consuls would send reports and the state department was not ordering any.

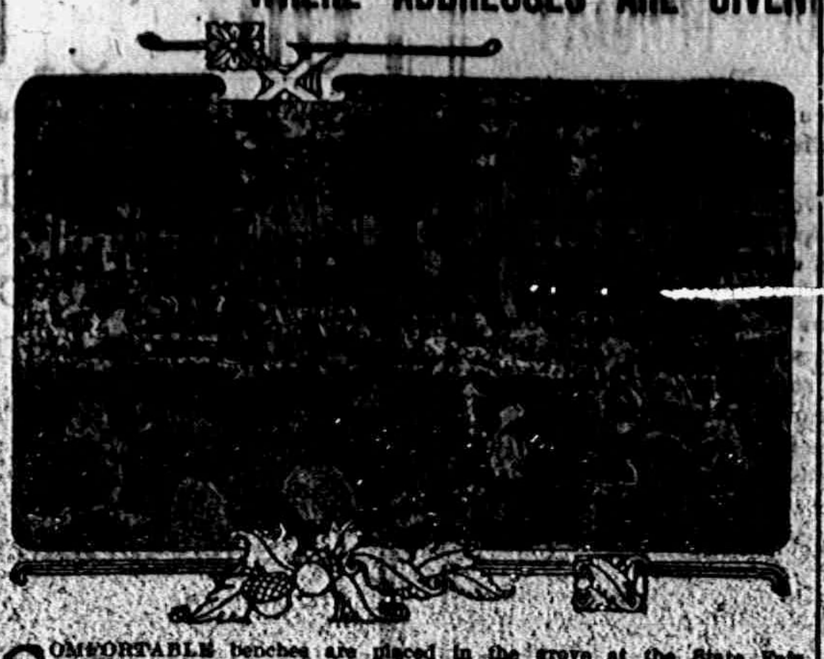
President Is Informed.

Consul Thompson's dispatch, the first official advice to reach here, was sent to President Wilson, who was about to leave the White House for the golf links. The president delayed his departure awaiting reports.

Vice Consul Thompson's message caused officials to believe the Arabic's passengers and crew were ordered into boats before it was torpedoed. The standard lifeboat holds sixty persons. There were 436 persons reported aboard.

If there were Americans on board and the boat was not warned, if all were saved, the situation would be none the less serious.

GROVE AT STATE FAIR GROUNDS WHERE ADDRESSES ARE GIVEN



COMFORTABLE benches are placed in the grove at the State Fair grounds, where addresses are given nearly every day during the big expositions. Among the speakers at Detroit this year will be Governor W. N. Ferris, Congressman Patrick H. Kelley of Lansing and other men prominent in the state and nation.

Band concerts will be given in the grove by Smith's Scotch Highlanders.

RUTHERFORD GREATER SHOWS TO BE ATTRACTIONS ON MIDWAY AT STATE FAIR GROUNDS AT DETROIT

THE Rutherford Greater Shows, which will exhibit at the State Fair Midway, Sept. 6 to 15, is one of the largest and most complete amusement enterprises in the world, carrying fifteen attractions, including two big bands and an imported Berni organ and big free acts.

This mammoth organization, which is controlled and owned by Pittsburgh capital, H. R. and Irving P. Polack being the managers, travels on its own train of twenty cars, having all its own wagons and horses. It carries about 800 people for its various attractions. The feature show is the La Rose electric fountain, which consists of fire, water, electricity and human life. There are electrical effects of every color of the rainbow, with water spouting forth 100 feet in the air and forming in colonnades and pyramids. In the center of all this there will be beautiful living poses. This is all worked under the personal supervision of George La Rose, the inventor.

The Wild West Show features Miss Julia Allen and her $10,000 dancing horse Teddy. There are also bucking bronchos ridden in a daring manner by cowboys and cowgirls, as in every other Wild West show.

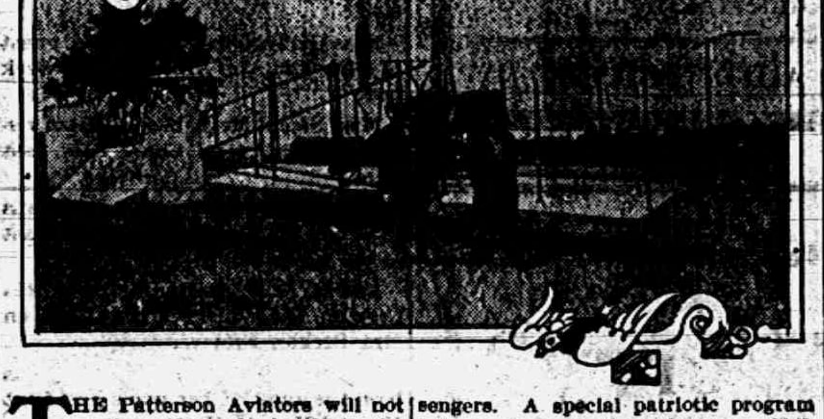
The Reese Brothers' Africanders Revive Minstrel Show is a revival of the old time colored minstrels. The Africanders are not only entertainers, but are musicians as well, as they have their own band and orchestra.

A new departure has been made this year in the autodrome. Heretofore motorcycles only have been used on the saucer shaped tracks, but this season a much larger drome is used, and an automobile is driven 100 miles an hour, racing with the motorcycles. Miss Maud Smith has the honor of driving the motorcar and is the only woman driver participating in this thrilling exhibition. The track is built [illegible] of seventy-eight degrees and the speed must at all times be from 90 to 100 miles an hour.

The athletic show, featuring Paul Bowser and Cora Livingston, is well known throughout the entire country and as a high class attraction, Mr. Bowser being the welterweight champion wrestler of the world and Miss Livingston being the champion woman wrestler of the world.

Other attractions are: Zalla; Ted Meta's big circus side show, Paulson's busy city, the trip to Mars, Beauty and the Beast, Carno and his den of reptiles, the Ilion carrousel and the Ferris wheel. There are two big free attractions and music by Professor Marransini and his Royal Italian band of twenty-five pieces. In conjunction with this there is a big seventy man band Berni organ and Mr. La Rose's air calliope.

AVIATOR WHO WILL GIVE FLIGHTS DAILY AT MICHIGAN STATE FAIR



THE Patterson Aviators will not only present the battle in the clouds at the Michigan State Fair, which will be held at Detroit Sept. 6 to 15, but will give other exhibition flights and will carry passengers. A special patriotic program will be given by the aviators on Children's day as well as the day the old soldiers are guests of the Michigan State Fair management at the big exposition.

26 AMERICANS WERE ON ARABIC

White Star Liner Is Torpedoed Without Warning.

THIRTY-THREE ARE MISSING

Four Hundred Aboard When Struck—Queenstown Report Says 175 of 182 Passengers and 216 of Crew of 242 Have Been Landed—British Lost Cruiser and Destroyer.

Berlin, Aug. 20.—(Via The Hague.)—A naval engagement off the west coast of Jutland between five German torpedo boats and a small modern British cruiser and eight British torpedo boat destroyers, in which the Germans sank the cruiser and one destroyer last Tuesday is reported in an official announcement of the German admiralty, issued here. The statement also asserts that the Zeppelin raid on London Tuesday night had "good results."

London, Aug. 20.—A torpedo from a German submarine sent to the bottom of the Atlantic at 9:30 o'clock this morning, off the south coast of Ireland the White Star liner Arabic, on her way from Liverpool to New York. A dispatch from Queenstown said that approximately 175 of the 182 passengers and 216 of the crew of 242 of the Arabic have been landed. Third Engineer Logon is among the missing.

Reports Six Passengers Lost.

The White Star announcement says there were 423 persons, including the crew, aboard the Arabic, of whom 375 were saved. It adds that only six passengers were lost.

Twenty-six Americans Aboard.

The number of Americans aboard the ill-fated liner is in doubt. A dispatch from Liverpool declares there were twenty-six. The White Star line has given out a list containing seventeen names.

Americans on Arabic.

New York, Aug. 20.—The White Star line gave out a list cabled from Liverpool containing the names of the following cabin passengers sailing on the Arabic, all of whom are Americans:

Miss Josephine L. Bruguiere, Mr. Bruguiere, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Burgess, Mr. and Mrs. James Calmon, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. A. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Delilah Covington, James Houlihan, Rev. Dr. E. A. McAllister, Christopher McTammie, Leopold F. Moore, A. Hulme Mebeker, John Delan, Claude Roode, James M. Rowley, W. E. Ramsdell, Miss F. E. Shrimpton, Edmund Woods.

American passengers in the steerage were: Thomas Elmore, William Hughes, J. Kellett, John Olson.

Edmond F. Woods, apparently lives in Janesville, Wis. Inquiry concerning his safety was received by the White Star line from Mrs. E. F. Woods at the above address.

Four More Boats Lost.

London, Aug. 20.—Two freighters owned by the Wilson line were sunk by German submarines. The boats were the Grodno and the Serbino, engaged in traffic between England and the continent. The crews of both vessels were rescued, it is reported.

Two other submarine victims have been reported. The steamer Thornfield of Liverpool and a small British steamer, the Dunsley, were torpedoed.

CONSTANTINOPLE IS IN DARK

Coal Shortage Causes Munition Plants to Work Without Lights.

Rome, Aug. 20.—It is reported here that owing to the scarcity of coal, two munitions factories installed by the Germans in Constantinople are now working without electric lights. Street car service is expected to be discontinued shortly. The Turko-German fleet is reported to be entirely useless. The situation is conceded to be critical, and Europeans are alarmed, especially since upon the pretext of a possible aerial bombardment neutral warships, including the American gunboat Scorpion, have been ordered to change moorings.

These ships now have been shifted out of the way to places whence an exit is most difficult and where the landing of crews in cases of emergency will be necessarily delayed.

The Twenty Year Test

"Some twenty years ago I used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," writes Geo. W. Brock, publisher of the Enterprise Aberdeen, Md. "I discovered that it was a quick and safe cure for diarrhoea. Since then no one can sell me anything said to be 'just as good.' During all these years I have used it and recommended it many times, and it has never disappointed anyone." For sale by all dealers. advt

The Case of L. L. Cantelou

The case of L. L. Cantelou, Clarendon, Texas, is similar to that of many others who have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says, "After trying a doctor for several months, and using different kinds of medicine for my wife who had been troubled with severe bowel complaint for several months, I bought a 25c bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. After using the second bottle she was entirely cured." For sale by all dealers. adv

Not So Strange After All

You may think it strange that so many people are cured of stomach trouble by Chamberlain's Tablets. You would not, however, if you should give them a trial. They strengthen and invigorate the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Mrs. Rosie Rice, Wabash, Ind., writes, "Nothing did me the least good until I began using Chamberlain's Tablets. It is decidedly the best medicine for stomach trouble I have ever used." GERMAN FLEET IS SMASKED AT RIGA

Dreadnaught Moltke and Ten Other Warships Are Sunk.

PETROGRAD CLAIM IS OFFICIAL

Tremendous Victory Is Announced in Duma—Besides Dreadnaught Kaiser Lost Three Cruisers, and Seven Torpedo Boats in Battle He Was Supposed to Have Won.

PARIS. — "Two French torpedo boats encountered and sank a German torpedo boat destroyed off Ostend, Belgium," says an announcement made here. "Our boats were undamaged."

PETROGRAD — The president of the duma announces that the Germans lost the superdreadnaught Moltke, three cruisers and seven torpedo boats in the battle of the Gulf of Riga. An official announcement adds that the German fleet has left the Gulf of Riga.

PETROGRAD — For the first time since the Russians took Permysl with 117,000 prisoners, Petrograd celebrated an important victory today with services of thanksgiving in the cathedrals.

The sinking of the German dreadnaught Moltke and ten other Teuton warships in the Gulf of Riga the populace took as a divine answer to their prayers for victory offered up in great religious demonstrations one week ago. With this news came word from the war office [illegible] attempt to turn the Russian right flank has met with stubborn resistance that has brought the Germans to a halt.

Decisive Victory for Russ Fleet.

LONDON, ENG. — The greatest naval battle of the war, with a decisive victory for the Russian fleet opposing the German naval advance upon Riga, is officially reported from Petrograd.

Military and naval authorities here, who had deduced from Saturday's official German report on the battle that the Germans had been victorious, were stirred to a high pitch of enthusiasm for the czar's sea forces by the report which revealed that while the Russians had lost two gunboats and a torpedo boat and suffered damage to several other naval craft, they had inflicted much more serious losses upon the Germans and had driven the attacking fleet from the Gulf of Riga.

Germans Lose Dreadnaught.

Chief of the Russians' victims was the German superdreadnought Moltke, which was sunk.

The German official statement on the same battle was received Saturday. As it announced the destruction of three Russian warships and declared the German losses were slight, it was interpreted to mean a great German naval victory, though such a claim was not actually made.

Great Strategy by Russ.

It would appear from the Petrograd dispatches that the admiral in command of the Russian naval forces in the gulf of Riga permitted the German fleet to work its way through the narrow entrance to the gulf when at his leisure he directed the attack that cost the Germans so dearly. Not only, according to Petrograd, did the Russian fleet overwhelm the German forces, but having destroyed the bulwark of the German battle line finally drove the invaders to flee from the gulf and into the comparatively open waters of the Baltic.

But the Russian victory did not end with the defeat of the German naval forces. The invading fleet was accompanied by four enormous transports, all crammed with troops. These troops attempted to make a landing on the shore of Pernov bay, on the northeastern shoulder of the Gulf of Riga. Either the accompanying warships are unable to support the landing of the troops or the Russian strategy in some way overcame the advantage of German naval guns, for the troops were permitted to land and were then attacked and exterminated by the Russian forces at that point.

Moltke Fine Vessel.

There can be no doubt of the importance of the loss of the battle cruiser Moltke. She was built in 1910 and when launched was the finest ship of her type. She was capable of developing a speed of more than twenty-nine knots and carried in her main armament ten 11-inch guns. She displaced 22,632 tons. It was the Moltke that served as Rear Admiral Von Ruber-Paschwitz's flagship when a squadron of German warships visited New York harbor in 1912.

Airman Sinks Turk Troop Ship.

LONDON — A Mytilene dispatch to the Times says that on Aug. 12 Flight Lieutenant Edmonds, while flying over the Dardanelels in a seaplane, sighted a Turkish transport carrying troops. Making straight for his quarry, he flew low enough to be able to drop a heavy bomb full on the deck of the vessel. The resulting explosion split up the transport, which immediately sank. All the troops on board are believed to have been lost.

TWO LADS TRY RESCUE, DIE

Go Into Water Over Their Heads to Save Child.

CALUMET, MICH.—While they were wading out to a small raft to rescue seven-year-old Joseph Perreault, who was drifting out into Torch lake at Lake Linden, Theodore Prevencher, aged fourteen, and Jerome Crossitier, aged twelve, went into water over their heads and were drowned. Both bodies were recovered.

Easy to Lead, but Hard to Stop.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — When a well dressed unidentified man accosted Mrs. C. W. Noel her husband interfered and after a scuffle led the intruder to police headquarters. At the entrance to the police station the prisoner hurled Noel down the steps and escaped.

AGED 100, AUTOS 20 MILES

Mrs. Eliza Collins of Delhi Celebrates Anniversary With Friends.

EATON RAPIDS, MICH. — Riding across the country twenty miles in an automobile to celebrate her one hundredth birthday anniversary, was one of the "stunts" of Mrs. Eliza Collins of Delhi, who came from that town to Eaton Rapids and made the return trip in the same machine after the celebration was over. Mrs. Collins was a former resident of Eaton Rapids, having settled here in pioneer days, eighty years ago. Among the guests at the function was Mrs. Eunice Holmes of Jackson, ninety-one years old, who was one of Mrs. Collins' associates in her early life here. The celebration was held at the hotel on the state Holiness camp ground, and was the first and only event of the kind ever held in Eaton county. Several members of the Eaton Rapids Ladies' Pioneer club were present as guests of honor, among them being Mrs. Nancy Jopp, president of the organization, who is eighty years of age.

Mrs. Collins has been a widow more than sixty years, her husband having died in 1846, a few years after he built the first house that was ever built on the east side of Grand river in Eaton Rapids, and helped build the mill at Spicerville, the first mill in Eaton county.

LEAVES $15,000 TO FIANCEE

Miss Jewel Michelson Given Home by Walter Nelson.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — Miss Jewel Michelson of this city, who is a stenographer at the King Paper company, has just received a legacy of $15,000 from her fiance, Walter Nelson of Detroit, who died just three months before the date set for their marriage.

Miss Michelson's fiance had built a home which they were to occupy after their marriage and a happy honeymoon. It was this home he left her when on his death bed he succumbed to typhoid fever and diphtheria.

HALT CARRANZA MUNITIONS PLAN

Next Pan-American Step Is to Leave Chief Helpless.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—An embargo on the shipment of arms to the Carranzista forces is the next step contemplated by the Pan-American conference in furtherance of the plan to restore order in Mexico. In fact, there is good reason to believe that Carranza and his following will begin to experience great difficulty in obtaining arms and other munitions of war from the United States long before an announcement is made that an embargo has been imposed by all America.

In an informal way Carranza already has advised the United States that he will not subscribe to the peace proposal made by the Pan-American conference. He has communicated this indirectly through General Obregon. Carranza will not make peace with his enemies in Mexico. His formal responses to the Pan-American proposal undoubtedly will be to that effect and to it will be appended an argument that his government is entitled to recognition.

Atlantic City Has $250,000 Fire.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. — The beach front was visited by the most disastrous fire it has suffered during the past thirteen years, when an entire business block between Penna and North Carolina avenues was swept by flames that razed eleven stores and inflicted damage estimated at a quarter million dollars.

Youth Dives to His Death.

CADILLAC, MICH. — With a half dozen boys looking admiringly at him and urging him to "make a big high dive," Neil Davis, seventeen, dove to death from a spile in Lake Cadillac. The body was recovered.

The dead boy was the oldest of a family of six children. His father died two years ago and Neil was the chief contributor to the support of his little brothers and sisters.

BRITISH BEATEN BACK BY TURKS

Invaders Checked With Heavy Losses at Sulva Bay.

2,500,000 MEN ASSAIL RUSS

Balkans Are Expected to Join Italy Against Turkey—Diplomats Cite Roumania's Friendship for Rome as Favoring Allies—Roumania to Get German Ultimatum.

CONSTANTINOPLE — Heavy attacks by re-enforced British troops on the Turkish positions in the Sulva Bay region have been repulsed, with severe enemy losses, the war office announced.

The Turkish trenches were first subjected to violent artillery fire. The British then charged, but were unable to penetrate to the Turkish first lines.

Fortifying Constantinople.

LONDON — The Germans are now devoting their whole attention to the fortification of Constantinople and attach no importance to the defense of Adrianople, according to the Times' Balkan correspondent.

The Turks, the correspondent says, for some time have been preparing a second defensive line on the Gallipoli peninsula.

Teuton Army of 2,500,000 Assail Russ.

PETROGRAD — More than 2,500,000 Austro-Germans are being hurled against the Russian lines from Riga to Galicia in an attempt to crush the grand duke's armies.

A semi-official statement estimated that 120 divisions of infantry and 20 divisions of cavalry are operating the Russians. Theis includes about 40 per cent of all the German forces and 70 per cent of the strength of Austria.

Expect Balkans to Join War.

LONDON — Italy's declaration of war against Turkey is expected to have an almost immediate effect on the Balkan states, which are still debating which side they will take in the conflict. The relations between Roumania for years have been intimate, and the opinion is expressed here that it is probable, especially in view of the threatening attitude of the Germanic powers toward Roumania because of the latter's refusal to allow ammunition to pass through its territory, that Roumania will join the quadruple entente.

Bulgaria is still waiting for the reply of Serbia to the suggestions of the entente ministers that Serbia cede Macedonia to Bulgaria, while Greece is likely to declare its future policy when the chamber meets this week.

Roumania to Get German Ultimatum.

SOFIA — A private dispatch from Bucharest says that the Roumanian capital is expecting an ultimatum from Germany demanding that Roumania allow munitions to go to Turkey. It is generally believed that Roumania will not yield.

Lineman Is Electrocuted.

THREE RIVERS, MICH. — Trimming arc lights on the Constantine Hydraulic company's lines, Frank Rowe, thirty-two years old, was electrocuted.

Rowe stepped to a light pole and grasped the wire with both hands. In some manner this wire carried the full voltage of the power

Just a Mistake, That's All.

PORT HURON, MICH. — Arthur Hillier, who was struck over the head with a beer bottle by Fred Dillman, a Battle Creek lineman, and who was thought to have a fractured skull regained his normal condition and is out of danger. It is alleged that Dillman mistook Hillier for a man who had assaulted him.

Hunters Must Get Card.

LANSING, MICH. — The state game warden says that every person hunting ducks or other wild water fowl when the season opens Sept. 1, must obtain a license. Game Warden Oates calls attention to the new law whereby the rabbit and partridge season now opens Oct. 1.

FULLER IS RESPECTED AS BIG LEGAL LIGHT

Wallop He Handed Simpson Salary Establishes Reputation.

LANSING, MICH. — The Auditor General Fuller, since he upset the proposed raise in salary for Warden Nathan Simpson of Jackson, after it had been practically decided that the law required only the governor's approval, is held in wholesome respect at the capitol as a student of Michigan statutes.

This applies particularly to Governor Ferris. He began to think of appointing the housing commission created by the Flowers act of the last legislature. The act carried on appropriation and the governor was desirous of knowing whether the men he chose would have their expenses paid. So he sent Clark Austin to find out.

Austin returned in a few moments with word that the members of the commission would not only draw no pay, but would have to pay their expenses out of their own pockets.

"Where did you get that information?" asked the governor.

"From the attorney general."

"Well, never mind what the attorney general says. Before you think you are sure about it, see Auditor General Fuller."

As a matter of fact, Fuller admits that he is getting credit that really does not belong to him alone. The act of 1907, which upset the attorney general's advice in the Simpson case, was found by State Accountant Fred Hamilton, in the auditor general's office.

STRIKES AT COMMISSIONERS

Injunction Granted in Row Over Beach Sidewalks at Port Huron.

PORT HURON, MICH. — Sensational charges are conatined in a bill of complaint filed by John B. McIlwain, attorney, against City Commissioners Hill, Montieth and Green as the result of a protest against the construction of a cement sidewalk on Gratoit avenue bock of Keewahdin and Gratoit beaches.

It is alleged that an agreement exists whereby the three commissioners are to be supreme in their respective departments. It is cited in the bill that Commissioners Green and Montieth stated that they were opposed to the construction of the sidewalk and that it was urged by Commissioner Hill under threats that he would oppose them in their departments. The resolution to build the walk was unanimously adopted, but the bill of complaint alleges that the resolution was not read and that some of the commissioners did not understand its import.

GIRL BATHER IS DROWNED

Miss Blanch Button Goes Beyond Depth at Lakeside Park.

PORT HURON, MICH. — Miss Blanche Button, twenty years old, a telephone operator of this city, was drowned while bathing at Lakeside park.

Miss Button, accompanied by a number of young ladies, had spent the afternoon at the park and organized a bathing party. Miss Button went beyond her depth and sank. Shrieks of her companions brought several men, but it took some time to locate her body. A pulmotor failed to revive her.

Rich Ottawa Man Weds at 89.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — William R. Loutit of Grand Haven, retired sea and lake captain, was married to Mrs. Anna Hinken of this city Aug. 5. Captain Loutit is reputed to be the wealthiest man in Ottawa county. He is eighty-nine years old.

Mother Cuts Down Son.

MUSKEGON, MICH. — Charles J. Nelson attempted to hang himself in the wood shed at the rear of his home. He is now at Hackley hospital. Nelson was cut down by his mother, Mrs. Peter Nelson. He had been despondent for some time.

FINDS HER SISTER AND WEDS ON SAME DAY

Beautiful Coincidence Is Culmination of Betrothal.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — Miss Eva M. Jackson found her sister and a few hours later became the bride of Charles R. Olmstead, who, on this same wonderful day, celebrated his twenty-first birthday.

About a score of years ago, Emmett Jackson, father of the two sisters who are just reunited, died, and the girls, Bernice and Eva, were adopted by different local families. The two girls grew to young womanhood and didn't know they were adopted. Eva was told when she was about thirteen, and was also told that she had a sister when she was adopted, but she never knew where the sister was. Bernice never knew until last year, when she became the bride of Arthur E. Brewer, that she had been adopted. She never knew she had a sister.

The night before the wedding Olmstead, the groom, and Mr. Brewer, the groom of last year's wedding, happened to be walking home from work together. Mr. Olmstead said he was going to be married on his twenty-first birthday and his friend asked the girl's name. It was then the men learned they were to be brothers-in-law.

Ministers' Children Wed.

HILLSDALE, MICH. — Miss Mildred Reed, only daughter of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. D. B. Reed of this city, and Rev. Charles Immanuel Edinger, only child of Rev. and Mrs. Charles Edinger of Hersey, were married here at the Episcopal church.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound and imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

REPORTS GERMANY BANKRUPT

Chancellor Would Prepare Peace Proposals Aceptable to Allies.

AMSTERDAM — At the secret conference of cabinet ministers, political leaders and influential writers, called by the German imperial chancellor before the reassemblying of the peischstag last Thursday to discuss the political situation, the Telegraaf says, Karl Helfferich, secretary of the treasury, explained that the new German war loan would completely exhaust the empire's financial resources and that the increase in exchequer bonds would cause bankruptcy. Therefore Dr. Helfferich urged, it was needful to prepare for an honorable peace

Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, according to the same report, declared that the difficulties of the empire were inceasing and advised his hearers to use their influence to soften down bellicose inclinations and expansion policy in the reichstag and the country and carefully prepare peace proposals which would be acceptable to the four members of the entente.

Plan to Bond St. Clair for Roads.

PORT HURON, MICH. — At a conference of a committee of the board of supervisors and the county road commissioners it was decided to submit at the coming fall election a proposition to bond the county for $500,000 for the construction of good roads. A plan is being outlined for the construction of 138 miles of gravel roads and 40 miles of state trunk line highway roads.

Ulcerated Tooth Fatal to Detroiter.

ANN ARBOR, MICH. — David D. Stovel, twenty-two years old, of this city, is dead of blood poisoning from an ulcerated tooth. He was a graduate of the engineering department of the University of Michigan in 1915 and since graduation had been working in Detroit.

This County Has Fine Weather.

EWEN, MICH. — While the lower Michigan farmers have been wallowing in rain storms all season and the southern part of the upper peninsula has even had a snow storm, Ontonagon county has been enjoying fine weather and the farmers have harvested good crops.

Divorces Outnumber Marriages.

MUSKEGON, MICH. — A survey of divorce cases up in the circuit court this term just completed shows that during the past fortnight more divorces have been granted than marriages have been performed in the county during the same period of time.

Business To Do in Own State.

LANSING, MICH.—Governor W. N. Ferris declares that members of the state board of health will have to quit taking vacations and long trips until they get together and start the campaign against tuberculosis in this state for which the last legislature appropriated $100,000.

And man is also the architect of most of his own misfortunes.—Chicago News.

GRAND CHAPTER EASTERN STAR

Battle Creek, October 12, 13, 14.

The following letter was received and read at the last meeting of the order of the Eastern Star, and we publish it by request.

Battle Creek, Mich. July. This city has started its preparations for the entertainment of the Grand Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, meeting in Battle Creek, October 12th 13th and 14th. The Chamber of Commerce, the City officials and the Convention League, with the Merchants Association are working together to make this the largest and best meeting of the Eastern Stars ever held in this state. The Tabernacle which will seat 3000 people has been secured for the use of the Eastern Star delegates for their official sessions, while the reception and ball will be held in the new $85,000 Masonic Temple, which is considered one of the finest in the state. The Postum Cereal Co, Ltd., will entertain all the delegates and their friends on Tuesday afternoon, at their great pure food plant. The private art collection of the late C. W. Post, consisting of over a hundred paintings in oil and water colors by some of the world's greatest artists will be opened to the Eastern Star and guests, The Kellogg Toasted Corn Flake Co. will entertain at their magnificent plant on Wednesday morning. The Battle Creek Sanitarium, the largest of its kind in the world, will keep "open house" during that week, and all delegates and visitors will have the privilege of going through this great health institution. The Country Club will tender the use of their golf grounds and club house to members of other golf clubs and during that week there will be added attractions at Goguac Lake which adjoins the city. Preparations are being made to entertain 3500 Eastern star delegates and their friends during this meeting, and the city will be handsomely decorated for this occasion. The grand Eastern Star ball and reception will be on Tuesday night, October 12, tendered by the two local Chapters of the Eastern Star to the Worthy Grand Matron and Grand Chapter Officials.

ACTION OF SINGLE SPOONFUL SURPRISES MANY

Tecumseh people who bought the simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., known as Adler-i-ka, are surprised at the INSTANT effect of a SINGLE SPOONFUL. This remedy is so complete a bowel cleanser than it is used successfully in appendicitis. Adler-i-ka acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel and ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE of constipation, sour or gassy stomach ONE MINUTE after you take it the gasses rumble and pass out. B. J. FRANKLIN

Emmet Brighton is on the sick list.

Charley Slayton of Tecumseh was calling on friends in this vicinity Tuesday.

Mrs. Alton Whelan motored to Adrian Wednesday. The latter remained for a few days visit with her brothers, Bert and Frank Billington and families.

Mr. Campbell motored to Adrian Monday a. m. having as passengers, Mrs. A. B. Wisner, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilford Allen and Llewellyn.

Harry Daniels, wife and children were callers at S. N. Wisner's Sunday.

One of Earl Allen's colts, a handsome three year old mare, got tangled up in a wire fence Tuesday, receiving very serious injuries.

Mr. and Mrs. Otis Whelan spent Friday August 20 with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tripp honoring the birthdays of Mrs. Whelan and Mr. Tripp which happened to occur on the same day of the month but not of the same year.

While on his trip delivering mail one day last week Harry Daniels discovered a rattle snake coiled up on the road side and stopping his machine got out and killed it. The snake had five rattles.

Dr. Waldron made an examination Thursday at Earl Allen's of the mare that got caught in the wire fence and found no bones broken but it badly bruised.

Christine Elizabeth infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. N. Wisner has been ailing but is now better.

Among those attending the banquet at the Co-Operative store, Tecumseh were C. L. and S. N. Wisner and their families, Alton and Hoyt Whelan and their families, Mrs. Spencer, George Taylor and family and most of the stock holders of Tipton.

Clifford Aten and wife spent Sunday and Monday in Adrian

Sam Decker is building a belfry on the Bradley school house.

Mr. and Mrs. Brighton continue to get very encouraging reports from their son Floyd. At last accounts he expected to [illegible] hospital in a few days.

Tipton Grange met at their hall at Tipton Saturday night. The coming exhibit at the County fair was under discussion. There will be a special meeting Sept 11.

Mrs. Cecil Billington and Ray and Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Allen spent Sunday with Mrs. Rosetta Billington at Tecumseh. Mrs. Billington joined her husband who had come out from Detroit to spend the week end with his mother. They returned to Detroit Monday.

Alton Whelan and family and Mrs. E. J. Whelan were motoring over the lake country Sunday, extending their trip beyond the Junction and taking in Evans, Sand, Wamplers, Wolf and many other lakes. If one is 'hankering' after adventure, hair-breadth escapes, etc. let him motor in the lake country where the cures and short turns in the road, precipate descents of the roadside immediately adjoining the roadside immediately adjoining the road-bed and "Danger" warnings on every hand will give one the necessary thrills. At the very spot where a man was killed in an auto accident last year, they met a car and experienced their thrills.

There was some excitment Thursday morning on the road between C. L and S. N. Wisners which might easily have ended in a tradedy. A bull belonging to S. N. Wisner had jumped the fence and started down the road in an appearantly very belligerent frame of mind. A group of of eight children were coming up the road. What might have happened to the little tots is a conjecture had not Mrs. Lt Wisner been with them and fortunately succeeded in getting them into the barn. The animal was at last secured without further damage than a good shaking up of the nerves

I have also seen a lot of women who would rather quit house-keeping than dispose of their bright new ...TZ WASHING MACHINE we recently installed on a trial basis.

Honestly, one woman told us it was saving doctor bills.

The machine runs quiet, so very simple to operate. You know the wringer can be run at the same time as the washer or either can be run separate.

You can wring the clothes from the machine to the rinsing water, then to the bluing water, then to the basket just by the mere feeding of the clothes to the wringer.

No water to carry out as there is a simple devise to drain the water off.

As for doing clean work, you will simply be surprised to see how clean it washes the clothes without the least chance of tearing.

We want every lady to try a machine and will bring one to you, you can use it for two washing and if satisfied to go back to the old way will call for the machine.

Prices are very reasonable, on time if you wish, from $10.00 up,

BURGLARIES

Again the store of W. L. Coller has been entered and a number of articles taken flash light batteries, knives, cigarettes, cigars, shells, a cigar case valued at $4.50 and numerous other articles were taken. The entrance was made as before through a window in the rear of the store and the exit through the door which was bolted on the inside.

This same night (Tuesday) the house of Milliard Hunter occupied [illegible] Manly was also visited, but Mrs Manly hearing a noise screamed and undoubtedly frightened them away.

Wednesday night the Peoples store was entered, the visitor helping himself to shoes, socks and shirts, also cigars and about six dollars in change, evidently who ever it was, needed a change of garments Sheriff Heing was over Thursday morning making investigations.

It is thought that the entrance was made through a cellar window and the exit by the back door which was found wide open when Mr. Palman came to the store in the morning

This is the third burglary on the street within a few weeks and it would seem as if we needed more efficient protection. It is getting to be no joke to the merchants

MILAN BOOSTERS

About 15 autos from Milan visited Tecumseh Tuesday boosting their big day which will be celebrated September 2. They had a fine band with them and favored us with some good music. A very small man leading a very large dog gaily decorated, was one of the features of the occasion. The young men of the crowd were busy scattering hand bills and other wise advertizing the day

CHAUTAUQUA TOUR

About 18 autos, accompained by a band, will leave Tecumseh Monday morning in the interest of the coming Chautauqua. The start will be made about 8:30 a. m.

The towns to be visited are Holloway, Ridgeway, Britton, Macon, Clinton, Manchester, Wamplers Lake, Sand Lake and Tipton.

A chicken dinner will be served to the travelers at Wamplers Lake about 3 o'clock.

BARGAIN DAY

The tenth Bargain Day of the season was rather unpromising in the morning but finally came out clear and pleasant. Quite a number were present through the day and the merchants were kept busy waiting on the trade.

The fire department made a good showing establishing the fact that they can "get there" when the alarm sounds. Some of the juveniles were anxious to know who won the prize, as they had been told that the one who knocked down the most men with the water from the hose, would be the lucky one.

Floyd Heesen turned in the alarm which was responded to in 40 seconds when the team left the building. It took 1 min and 10 sec to run from the Presbyterian church to Kennedy's corner, hook on and get water.

A big crowd gathered for the evenings entertainment. The vaudeville performing as exceptionally good and the music by the band was enjoyed by all.

The Tecumseh Band will play on the Chautauqua trip Monday August 30

Mr. and Mrs Zimmerman of Decatur came Sunday morning for a visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Rathbun.

Miss Margeret Carter who has been making a extended visit with her uncle and aunt Mr and Mrs. Will Westcott left for her home in Elkhart Wednesday.

Tecumseh Band visited Deerfield Tuesday night and gave them a concert on the street. They report a cordial reception and an invitation to come again.

Sixteen of the young friends of Miss Nerissa Fitzsimmons were entertained at the Fitzsimmons cottage Tuesday. H. T Dunn, H. S. Moore and Fred Rosscrans autos took the crowd to their destination. The company was chaperoned by Misses Josephine Hayden and Marian Rosscrans in a very pleasing manner.

Saturday afternoon Cecil Clark entertained 14 of her young friends with progressive flinch. Marjorie VanWinkle and Mildred Price winning 1st and 2nd prizes. At the close of the games a dainty two course supper was served. The out-of-town guests were Margeret Carter of Elkhart and Margeret Osborn of Cleveland. Lester Coller was on hand with his camera and took their pictures.

EARLY MORNING

Wedding of Miss Josephine Orr and Mr. Frank Barritt of Williamston, Mich., at the Home of the Bride's Parents

MONDAY AUGUST 23 WITH ABOUT 30 RELATIVES AND FRIENDS IN ATTENDANCE.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Orr on Oneida street was the scene of a very pretty wedding Monday morning when their daughter Josephine Marguerite, was united in marriage to Frank J. Barritt of Williamston, Mich.

Promptly at 9 o'clock to the strains of the wedding march from Lohengren played by Miss Hessie Orr, a cousin of the bride, the bridal couple, attended by Miss Lydia Babcock and Harold Hornberger, took their places in a lovely arch of flowers, where the words were spoken that made these two husband and wife, Rev. W. A. Rex performing the ceremony, using the ring service. Congratulations and best wishes followed.

The bride was gowned in white charmeuse trimmed with pearls and carried bride's roses. A four course breakfast was served with the bridal party at a table in the dining room which was prettily decorated, flowers being used in profusion. The Misses Geraldine, Hessie and Eunice Orr and Winnifred Hall served the company.

The bride has always lived in Tecumseh graduating class of 1911 later taking a course at the Thomas Normal Training School in Detroit in music and drawing, teaching since at Zeeland and Williamston. At the latter place she met Mr. Barritt junior member of Barritt & Son Lumber Co.

The young couple left on a wedding trip and will be at home to their many friends after Sept 1 at Williamston.

Among the out-of-town guests [illegible] T. J. Barritt and Miss Cora, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Swan, Earl Taylor and Harold Hornberger of Williamston, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Kenyon of Detroit and Miss Edyth Cotton of Saline who with the immediate friends made up this most delightful wedding party.

AUTO ACCIDENT

Funny and otherwise were the accidents by auto for the weekend. As Hobert Bird was driving by an auto standing by the roadside, it suddenly started up and frightened the colt he was driving With loud neighing the colt started in pursuit and becoming entangled in the rear of the car where he tried to take the back seat, the car was overturned taking the horse with it—No one hurt.

Saturday night the Schneider boys in driving their car collided with an electric light pole with damage to both, and a bad cut on Carls arm.

Sunday evening some young men driving a Garlinghouse car, mixed up with a tree on Chicago St., Fred Chase jr. received several cuts around the head and face. Every body doing well except the autos.

TO BE HEARD AT THE TECUMSEH CHAUTAUQUA

Jean S. Macdonald

Suggested Heading—Scotch-Irish Humorist (24-30)

Native Canadian Makes American Chautauqua Circuit's Second Season (12-18)

Miss Jean MacDonald of London, Ontario, made a number of towns in Illinois last year for the Lincoln Chautauqua management. She was so successful in her humor, which has been termed "the ministry of fun," that the management asked her return this year. She will appear on the fourth day, afternoon and night, with Bland's Chautauqua Band and Senator William E. Mason.

Speaking of her preparation for this work she one time said: "Yes, I graduated from a Conservatory of Music and School of Expression in London, and the rest of what I do is just natural."

Sometimes she gives Irish impersonations; at other times she impersonates colored people; again she does child impersonations. People who delight in humor should hear Miss Macdonald without fail, as she alternates with the band and the noted Illinois Senator.

Col. Gearhart.

The growing popularity of chautauqua as a typical American institution was recently discussed by a group of men of whom Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus of Chicago was one. This famous minister in discussing talent said of Col. Gearhart: "Mr. Gearhart is one of the sanest and most manly of men His popular lectures for past twenty years have stimulated thousands, as they have been given in churches, universities and chautauquas in every state. They are especially appreciated in these chattering days when sentimentalism and twaddle are so much in evidence in the name of religion. I have never listened to him without gratefuly rejoicing that the old lecture platform with its steadiness of aim, thoroughness of thinking, and genuine power of eloquence is still with us."

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE

Quite a little excitment was manifested in Tecumseh Monday evening by the reflection on the sky south of town of the big fire on the Edgar Rogers farm just out of Holloway. Two large barns and their contents were burned to the ground. The contents were owned by Albert Wagner who is running the farm. The loss is estimated at about $2,000, Water from two large cisterns and a tank were used by the neighbors to put out the fire but to no avail. Fortunately the house was saved.

There were 200 autos on the ground in a short space of time. It is said that some party or parties becoming in haste to leave, borrowed the auto belonging to Ed. Kaynor, without consulting the owner, and left it in a door yard near Tecumseh.

The Alarm Clock Cure.

A writer in the Farm and Fireside declares that the surest cure for broody hens is an alarm clock. He says:

"Some years ago I was endeavoring to break up a sitting hen, but my efforts were in vain. Old Yaller continued to sit. Finally I took a small alarm clock and set it so it would go off in a few minutes. I placed it in one corner of her nest and watched. It went off. And so did Old Yaller. She left the nest and stood dazed for one horrified instant, and then, with one shrill squawk, she ran out of the henhouse and flew over the park fence and began to hunt for bugs in the grass.

"She not only stopped sitting, but she stopped clucking, and in a short time began to lay. I have since tried this method on more than 100 broody hens with complete success."

He Saw a Great Light.

Wrecks on the coast of Cornwall, England, were once a source of revenue to the natives. The Cornish folk were great smugglers too. The Rev. R. S. Hawker had in his service as man of all work old Tristram Pentire, the last of the smugglers. One day he made to the vicar this notable confession: "Well, sir, I do think, when I come to look back and to consider what lives we used to live—drunk all night and idle abed all day, cursing, swearing, fighting, gambling, lying and always prepared to shoot the gauger—I do really believe, sir, we surely was in sin!"—London Express.

Her Turn Had Come.

After two years he proposed to her, and she accepted him.

"I'm so happy and glad," she sighed.

"Why, dearest?" he asked. "Because I'm to be your husband?"

"Oh, it isn't altogether that," she answered. "But now I can have the laugh on all our relatives who have been saying that you'd never propose."—Detroit Free Press.

BETTER HUMAN BODIES IS AIM

State Fair Adds to List of Educational Departments.

HOW TO KEEP WELL.

Instructors by Lectures and Exercises Will Illustrate Means—Twenty-five Mile Marathon Race to Be One of Features.

Physical education will play an important part at the Michigan State Fair, to be held at Detroit Sept. 6 to 15.

G. W. Dickinson, secretary and general manager of the big exposition, announces that W. J. Foster Walker of Detroit has been appointed superintendent of this new department. Mr. Walker, who has been a student at various colleges in physical education departments, has been actively connected with athletics for many years. He formerly was physical director at the Detroit Athletic club and athletic coach at the Detroit University school. He now conducts the Solvay and Franklin street settlements in Detroit and has been very successful in his work.

Lectures on Care of Body.

Daily lectures will be given on the care of the body and how to keep well. Mr. Foster will be assisted by Miss Lotta Broadridge, who now is in charge of women's athletics and physical education at the Panama-Pacific exposition. She will conduct basketball and field hockey tournaments for girls and assist in the games which will feature Children's day at the Fair.

In all the athletic events and games appropriate medals and prizes will be awarded by the State Fair. There will be a Marathon race for men from Pontiac to Detroit, with five miles of the finish of the event staged on the race track at the Fair grounds. A ten mile Marathon for boys will attract considerable attention, as many prizes will be given the leading contestants.

One of the semi-final games for the American amateur baseball championship will be played at the Fair grounds. The final game will be contested at the San Francisco Fair.

In addition there will be Newcomb games for children and a tennis tournament.

Home Exercises to Be Demonstrated.

Mr. Foster will demonstrate how gymnasium classes for children should be conducted, and an advanced class in apparatus work will give an exhibition drill. Exercises for the home will be featured, and Mr. Foster will demonstrate how every business man who has but a few minutes for exercise may keep well by following a fifteen minute program daily.

"Our physical educational department is an innovation and, I think, should accomplish much good," declared General Manager Dickinson. "People do not give enough thought to physical exercise, and we purpose to give every one who attends the State Fair an opportunity to hear these lectures on how to keep well. A few minutes devoted to physical exercise each day will do much to curtail future doctor bills."

The City.

Cities are made, not born. No two cities are alike. The sum of one city is never equal to all the parts of another. Once a city, not always a city; sometimes only a dust heap. A city is made up of a part of the country filled with inhabitants. It consists of houses, streets and debts. No city is complete without a hospital and a franchise plant. The hospital is used to shelter its victims and to provide its surgeons with plenty of working material. The franchise plant enables it to support politicians. A city without politicians would be like a steam laundry without any steam.

Cities are an antidote for farms. Up to date, however, no cure has been found for the antidote.—Life.

The Stuart Penny.

A pamphlet published in 1677, entitled "The Worth of a Penny, or, a Caution to Keep Money, With the Causes of the Scarcity and Misery of the Want Thereof In These Hard and Merciless Times," contains a list of articles obtainable for a penny in the days of Charles II. These include "a dish of coffee to quicken your stomach and refresh your spirits," "a fair cucumber" and "portions of such commodities as nuts, vinegar, grapes, cake, onions and oatmeal." The catalogue of pennyworths obtainable at an apothecary's is a lengthy one and includes "lettuce to make you sleep, mithridate to make you sweat and aniseed, which may save your life in a fainting or swound."—London Mirror.

Odd Name Oddly Won.

The inn known as the "Same Yet," at Prestwich, has a curious history, which Mr. Hackwood relates: "The house originally bore the 'Seven Stars,' but many years ago it became necessary to have its faded sign repainted. When the painter asked the landlord what he was to put on the board he received the answer, 'The same yet.' And the man took him at his word."—London News.

Certainly Foolish.

We never heard of a man who tried to free himself of a manslaughter charge by pleading guilty to murder, but an up state man tried to prove he wasn't crazy the other day by claiming he was in love.—Milwaukee Journal.

Fixing the Blame.

The Parson—To whom am I indebted for this visit? The Bridegroom—To Mamie's mother; she thought I'd been courting her long enough, and she said so.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Got Him Guessing.

An old miner, a bachelor, had a pretty niece, who kept his house, and at his death he bequeathed all his earnings to her on condition that she married Tom J., a young miner in whom he had always taken a deep interest. But the pretty niece had no wish to marry Tom and put herself out of his reach by wedding a hard working factory lad. The heir at law was not at all displeased with the niece for marrying another, as he thought that now the old miner's wealth would come to him.

"That siller belongs to me now, I reckon," he said to the trustee, a white haired old collier, who had ideas of his own. "Susan's lost it by marryin' the wrong man. So you'd better hand it ower."

"Not so fast, lad," replied the trustee. "You'll have to be patient for awhile. Susan may marry and bury a dozen husbands and still come doon to you in the end."

And the heir at law is wondering whether this is really so.—London Tit-Bits.

His Fine Contract.

Giorgio Polacco's brilliancy as revealed in music does not extend to the domain of business if one may judge by a story told by Algernon St. John-Brenon. Mr. Polacco was approached on one occasion by a Milanese agent offering him an engagement at Lisbon. Mr. Polacco named a certain price as remuneration. The engagement, however, fell through, as Mr. Polacco had to go elsewhere. The next season the same agent asked Mr. Polacco his terms again and for the same city. Mr. Polacco named them. The agent, acting with a certain celerity, asked Mr. Polacco to sign then and there. This was done, and Mr. Polacco took his contract home to his wife. The latter read it. Then she folded it up and looked straight at her husband. "Giorgio," she said, very tranquilly, "you have made a great contract." "Ah," said Mr. Polacco delightedly, "I know I have." "Yes, Giorgio," resumed his wife, "you have asked and accepted less than last year—and—also the season is a month longer."

NOTED DRIVERS TO COMPETE AT THE STATE FAIR

Cash Prizes Total Several Thousand Dollars

EXPECT TO BREAK RECORDS

"Wild Bill" Endicott Among the Speed Demons Who Will Make Auto Races One of Big Features of Exposition at Detroit.

Dirt track automobile racing is becoming less dangerous and more popular every year, according to G. W. Dickinson, general manager of the Michigan State Fair, who announces that plans are being rapidly completed for the speed contests which will be held during the 1915 exposition at Detroit, Sept. 6 to 15.

Noted Drivers to Compete.

Noted drivers from all parts of the country will enter the races and the events in which attempts will be made to shatter dirt track records. The prizes will total several thousand dollars. "Wild Bill" Endicott is among the drivers of space eating vehicles who will be at Detroit this fall.

The State Fair races will be governed by the rules of the International Motor Contest association, of which Mr. Dickinson is president. State Fair races in practically all the middle western states will be held under the auspices of the I. M. C. A.

Accidents Less Frequent.

Mr. Dickinson says that automobile racing had its beginning on the dirt track, and he believes that the sport will continue to be more popular than ever now that accidents are becoming less frequent, rules having been adopted which have had the effect of making contests much less dangerous.

A physician will examine every driver to determine whether the autoists are in the best physical condition, and the cars will be examined by mechanical experts.

Great Interest In Horse Show.

The horse show, one of the society events of the State Fair, will attract the attention of thousands this fall. An exceptional interest is being taken in the show by owners of saddle and harness horses from all sections of the state.

Roller Coaster a Feature.

One of the attractions at the State Fair grounds which delight the children is the giant roller coaster, which is absolutely safe. In fact, "Safety First" is the slogan at the State Fair grounds at Detroit.

PRISON EXHIBIT TO BE FEATURE AT STATE FAIR

Reformatory Great Industrial Institution, Says Warden.

PRODUCTS TO BE DISPLAYED

Minature Tile and Brick Plants to Be Shown In Operation, While Method of Manufacturing Binder Twine Will Be Demonstrated.

One of the most unique and interesting exhibits at the Michigan State Fair, to be held at Detroit Sept. 6 to 15, will be that of the Michigan State prison, at Jackson. Warden Nathan F. Simpson says that Michigan residents will be given an opportunity to see what the inmates of the reformatory are accomplishing by the exhibits of buggies, wagons and cutlery made at the prison by prisoners.

Miniature Plants In Operation.

In addition, there will be displays of canned fruits and vegetables grown on the prison farm, miniature tile and brick plants similar to those at Jackson prison and binder twine machinery in operation, demonstrating how this twine is manufactured by prisoners.

"There will be displays representing all the departments of our prison," said Warden Simpson. "Many persons do not know that the reformatory is a great industrial institution, and I am certain that the exhibit will be most interesting."

Hope.

"Yes, she rejected me, but she did it in a most encouraging way."

"How was that?"

China's Tea and Rice.

China has three crops of tea—the spring crop in April, the second in May and the "even flower" crop about the 1st of July. The export season is throughout the year. Three crops of rice are harvested. Export of this product is prohibited.

A Loving Couple.

"How many lumps of sugar, George?" asked the wife.

"Oh, have your own sweet way, as usual, dear," replied the husband.—Yonkers Statesman.

Fountain of Youth.

She—Old Mrs. Butterbus seems to be a fountain of youth in spite of her years. Sheba—At any rate she's always gushing.—Chaparral.

'Ask your friends for advice, women for pity, strangers for charity and your relatives for nothing.—Spanish Proverb.

Special Awards to Sheep Breeders.

Three sheep breeders' associations will award special cash premiums to prize winning sheep at the Michigan State Fair to be held at Detroit, Sept. 6 to 15.

The American Shropshire Registry association offers $80 in prizes in eight classes, the American Cotswold Registry association $15 and the American Hampshire Sheep association $30.

MAKING A MATCH

For a Time It Was Considered a Thankless Job

By F. A. MITCHEL

"Martha," said Farmer Holt one evening to his wife when she was washing the dishes, "John Corey was talkin' to me this afternoon. He says he wants to git married."

"Well, why don't he?"

"He says there ain't no one to marry."

"There's lots o' wimmin would like to get John. He's passed out o' onsartin youth into shore middle age. He's got a good farm, and it's well stocked, and he hain't got no bad habits fixed on to him. I could name half a dozen gals about yere that would be glad to get him."

"He says he couldn't make up his mind to do the courtin'."

"What's he want to do any courtin' for? Courtin's for younkers. John's too old for that, and if he marries a woman of suitable age—some'rs about thirty—I reckon she won't set store by the courtin' part of it neither."

"How can a man get married without doin' any courtin'?"

"He kin jist ask the woman he wants to marry, and if she says yes they kin be married."

"But John says he don't know any particular woman he wants to marry."

Mrs. Holt finished doing her dishes, put them away and, taking up a basket of stockings, began to darn them. Her husband turned to the Farmer's Helper and began to read.

"I'm thinkin'," said the wife, whose mind had got set on the matrimonial question, "that Mandy Sellers would be about what John wants. She's a first rate cook and keeps the house lookin' [illegible] ways workin' at somethin'."

"Reckon her father and mother need her."

"There's the younger sister, Susan. She could take Mandy's place. Besides, a gal has got to look out for a home of her own."

"How d'ye know Mandy would have John?"

"Humph! She'd jump at the chance."

The farmer turned to his paper. He was more interested in an article on the feeding of hogs than in providing John Corey with a wife. But the idea of making the poor man comfortable and obtaining at the same time a home for Mandy Sellers had got into Mrs. Holt's head, and she couldn't get it out.

Miss Sellers occupied the adjoining farm to the Holts, and presently leaving her husband immersed in the hog feeding problem the good woman slipped out and interviewed Mandy, telling her that John Corey wanted a wife. She did not ask Mandy if she would like the position; she simply stated the fact. But a few days later when Mandy asked if John had got a wife yet Mrs. Holt suggested that Mandy would be about the kind of wife he should have. Mandy simpered and said he "wouldn't look at her."

One day John was at work at the cider press when he heard Mrs. Holt call him from the road. He went to her, and she spent half an hour questioning him about the treatment of cows and chickens and other matters pertaining to the farm. Just as she was about to depart she said:

"By the bye, Mr. Corey, have you seen Mandy Sellers lately?"

"No, Mrs. Holt, I hain't seen none o' the Sellers family in some time."

"Fine gal, Mandy."

"Think so?"

"Good cook; knows all about a farm and specially good at dairy work."

"I want to know!"

"I wonder why some of the unmarried men about yere hasn't picked Mandy up. She's gettin' on past the age for the young fellers, and there's not many middle aged men in these parts that haven't wives."

"Reckon I'm about the only one o' that kind."

"If you're wantin' a wife you couldn't do better than marry Mandy."

"La' sakes, Mrs. Holt! Mandy Sellers wouldn't marry me. Besides, she's wanted at the Sellers farm. She a'most runs it."

"Don't you believe that. Mandy would like a home as well as any gal I know."

Mrs. Holt, being a diplomat, went no further at the time. She had sowed the seed both in the breast of Miss Sellers and Mr. Corey and was disposed to give it time to germinate. By a skillful manipulation of the parties she finally got them together. John proposed, was accepted, and in due time the pair were married.

Now, John Corey was not a pliable man even in youth, and, having come to middle age, his will was hardening like his bones and cartilage. As for Mandy, she was a methodical person who preferred to do such work as a woman is expected to do in her own way. Thus when he saw her doing things in a different way from what he had been used to doing them he demurred. Mandy had kept the parental abode spick and span. Her father had been accustomed on coming into the house after his day's work was finished to put on a pair of slippers; John tramped in his muddy boots all over the house. Her father did not smoke; John did and knocked the ashes out of his pipe on anything that came handy, usually the floor.

"Howdy, John?" said Holt. "How do you like matrimony so far as ye got?"

"Waal, I ain't as independent as I was. My wife seems inclined to run things."

Farmer Holt changed the subject. Later Mrs. Holt dropped in on Mrs. Corey and asked her a similar question.

"Waal, Mrs. Holt, it would be well enough if John had any respect for the looks o' the house. He's lived alone so long that his home isn't any more to him than his barn."

When Mr. and Mrs. Holt compared notes it became apparent to them that if the Corey family continued as they had begun they would not hang together long. Mr. Holt accused his wife of having been too active in making the match, and Mrs. Holt retorted by asking him who started the matter. Since he had done so in reporting to her that John Corey wanted a wife he pursued the argument no further.

Matters in the Corey family went from bad to worse. Whenever John met Farmer Holt he abused him for making a match for him with the "consarnedest woman in the world." When Mrs. Corey met Mrs. Holt she rued the day when she had left a good home to keep house for a man who was so set in his ways that an ox team couldn't move him. The recitals of family difficulties were from time to time poured into Farmer Holt's ears by John Corey and into Mrs. Holt's ears by Mrs. Corey. Now and again the Holts were reminded that they had made the match. John said he didn't blame Holt for his share in tying him up with a virago, but this did not cause the latter to feel especially well satisfied with himself for having done so. Mrs. Corey did not hesitate to throw all the blame for her "mistake" on Mrs. Holt.

In time these vituperations became so marked that the Holts concluded that they must do something to stop them. The only thing they could think of was to apologize for having interfered to bring the couple together. One evening after Mrs. Holt had cleared the supper table and done the dishes they walked over to the Corey farm to carry out their intention. They found Mr. and Mrs. Corey at home, and the couple, not having had any reason to quarrel with each other, received their guests, if not with cordiality, at least with common civility.

The visitors talked for a time about the crops, what they were going to put into the ground for the next year and other ordinary matters. Presently Mrs. Holt looked knowingly at her husband, who, nerving himself for an effort after clearing his throat, said:

"I want to say to you people that the blame for the mistake that has been made is all on me. I mentioned to my wife that John wanted to get married, and she reckoned that you two might be a help to each other. I didn't know that John wasn't used to havin' a clean house and"—

"I didn't know," interrupted Mrs. Holt, "that Mandy would make a fuss every time there was a bit o' dirt left on a rag carpet."

"Air you statin' this case or I?" asked Farmer Holt severely.

"Look a-here," said Mr. Corey, bristling. "What do you people mean by comin' yere to interfere between man and wife?"

"Ain't you got nothin' better to do than that?" asked Mrs. Corey tempestuously.

"We jist wanted to apologize for what we done in bringin' you two together, seein' that you both made a mistake in puttin' on double harness."

"Who's made a mistake?" growled Corey.

"There hasn't been any mistake," cried his wife.

Mrs. Holt was so indignant at this denial of what had been poured into her ears and her husband's ears for so long a time that she opened up the debate on a high key, Mr. Corey endeavoring to drown her words with a higher one. For a time the man threw in an occasional remark, but, finding themselves no match for the women, dropped out, their utterances sounding like distant thunder muttering in a violent storm.

Finally Farmer Corey deserted, leaving his wife to carry on the fight alone. She then began a retreat, turning here and there to fire a parting shot. Mrs. Corey followed her on to the porch, while John went out the back door to seek quiet in the barn.

The tempest was stilled when Mrs. Holt reached the gate and was not resumed. No more reproaches were visited on Holt by Corey or on Mrs. Holt by Mrs. Corey. There was no intercourse between the families for six months. Then one day Mrs. Holt sent a mysterious looking box to Mrs. Corey. It was not returned, but a note of thanks came to the donor, with an expressed desire that the past might be forgotten. Within a few weeks from that time the stork visited the Coreys. Mr. and Mrs. Holt sent the baby a silver cup and were invited to stand as godfather and godmother at the child's christening. After the ceremony they returned with the happy parents to the latter's home.

"It beats all," said Corey to Holt, "how a little chunk of flesh like that will make a lot o' other things seem so little you can't see 'em."

"Reckon you'll find the chunk o' flesh not so little as you think," replied Farmer Holt.

"I want to thank you, Mr. Holt, for givin' me the best wife in the hull county and the baby as well."

"Don't mention it."

Meanwhile, Mrs. Holt was being thanked by the mother for saving her from being an old maid and giving her the best man that ever lived, besides the baby.

REBUKE TO WOOD ANGERS COLONEL

Roosevelt Makes Hot Retort to Garrison's Reprimand.

PLATTSBURG TALK IS CAUSE

Military Head of Citizens Camp Is Severely Scored for Permitting Roosevelt to Attack Administration and Take Sides in European War Question—May Be Punished.

New York, Aug. 27.—Colonel Roosevelt rallied to the support of General Leonard Wood, who is under fire from the war department for permitting the colonel to make his Plattsburg speech attacking the administration. He issued a statement in which he said that Secretary Garrison could not have been ignorant of Colonel Roosevelt's announced intention of speaking at the camp and that not having made any objection to his going, Mr. Garrison should not criticise General Wood "because I was there or because I did not submit my speech in advance to the administration for approva.."

Colonel Roosevelt said that in his speech he had not once mentioned the president or the administration and then delivered a broadside by saying that if the administration had displayed one-tenth the spirit and energy in holding Germany and Mexico to account for American lives that it is now showing in trying to prevent the people from being taught the need of preparedness it would be rendering a real service to the people of the country. It was evident as Colonel Roosevelt dictated his statement in the offices of the Metropolitan magazine that he was greatly moved by the attack on General Wood and wished to do anything he could to remove the unpleasant situation in which General Wood has found himself as the result of Colonel Roosevelt's visit to the camp. They have been fast friends for years.

Wood Severely Reprimanded.

Washington, Aug. 27.—Major General Leonard Wood of the United States army was severely reprimanded by Secretary of War Garrison for permitting Theodore Roosevelt to deliver to the business men in the military camp at Plattsburg, N. Y., the sensational speech in which Mr. Roosevelt denounced the Wilson administration for its failure to put through a big military program at the last session of congress. Mr. Roosevelt's utterances in criticism of the administration's military policy excited great anger in official circles, and following a conference at the White House, Secretary Garrison telegraphed the reprimand to General Wood.

There is a possibility that General Wood may be further punished by detachment from the office of commandant of the department of the east. It is even suggested that the former chief of staff may be court martialed for speeches that he has delivered in which he is said to have violated the proclamation issued by the president prohibiting army and naval officers from discussing questions bearing either directly or indirectly on the European war.

Warning to Wood.

In his telegram to General Wood the secretary of war warns General Wood not to give further opportunity at Plattsburg for discussion of military topics.

"I have just seen the reports in the newspapers of the speech made by ex-President Roosevelt at the Plattsburg camp. It is difficult to conceive of anything which could have a more detrimental effect upon the real value of this experiment than such an incident.

"This camp, held under government auspices, has successfully demonstrating many things of great moment. Its virtue consisted in the fact that it conveyed its own impressive lesson in its practical and successful operation and results. No opportunity should have been furnished to anyone to present to the men any matter excepting that which was essential to the necessary training they were there to receive. Anything else could only have the effect of distracting attention from the real nature of the experiment, diverting consideration to issues which excite controversy, antagonism and ill feeling, and thereby impairing, if not destroying what otherwise would have been so effective.

"There must not be any opportunity given at Plattsburg, or at any other similar camp for any such unfortunate consequences."

Whether further action will be taken in the Wood case probably will be determined by President Wilson. It is altogether possible that the offense of which complaint is made may be noted against General Wood's name in the efficiency records of the war department.

Bar Roosevelt at Cleveland.

Cleveland, Aug. 27.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt will be barred from addressing Cleveland's civilian military camp, to be opened at Chagrin Falls if federal officials express disapproval of Colonel Roosevelt's "war" speech made at the Plattsburg training camp. This announcement was made by Capt. H. P. Shupe, president of the trustees of the Cleveland Grays. The Grays are back of the local camp project. "I believe as Roosevelt that we should be prepared for war, but I do not approve of his criticism of the administration's policy," said Captain Shupe.

County Prosecutor Zecher, the first "recruit" to sign for camp training, said that he will resign if Roosevelt or anyone else is brought here to stir up agitation for war.

Man Hit by Train Dies.

Richmond, Ind., Aug. 27.—John Tull, a laborer, was struck by a train in crossing the Pennsylvania railroad and died soon afterward at the Reid Memorial hospital.

Aviator to Make Flight at Hague's

MANAGER ODELL PLANING ON EIGHT BIG DAYS TO END RESORT SEASON

Experienced Bird Man to Make Two Flights Per Day Carrying Passengers

Manager Odell as a fitting ending of the resort season at Hague park has been planning on and finally completed arrangements for eight big days which from indications promise to excel any similar event ever held at the lake.

During these eight days, August 29 to September 5, an aviator will make two flights daily over the waters of the lake. B R J. Hassell, of the Thomas Brady, jr., concern of New York city, has been secured to make the flights at Hague park, Mr. Hassell is a licensed aviator of considerable renown. He is of the Curtis school and distinguished chiefly by the accuracy and precision of his flights rather than recklessness. Each day of his eight days' stay at Hague park will find him twice in the air, a passenger accompanying.

The machine to be used is of the Curtis type of hydroplane such as was seen at the park a year or so ago. The plane is exceedingly handsome in appearance, graceful in all its lines. The start is made by means of a pontoon. After skimming the surface of the water for a moment the planes are lifted and thrills begin. Thrills not only for the aviator and his passenger but for the audience on the ground.

Manager Odell states he has perfected arrangements so that large minimum of delay and confusion. He crowds may be handled with the assures a plenty of street car service while everything for the convenience and comfort of his guests will be their's upon arrival at the park.

Owing to the extremely disagreeable weather experienced during the summer the resort season has suffered not only in Jackson but throughout the country. Because of this the aviator's stay at Hague park will be made the most of for all concerned. The flights are absolutely free to the public.

The machine and aviator are expected to arrive any day. Mr Hassell takes personal charge of the assembling of his plane which will be housed in an enclosure at the further end of the park on the shores of the lake. Following his engagement at Hague park Mr. Hassell goes to Detroit where he will make flights during the state fair.

FAMILIES PERILED BY FLOOD

Hundreds Are Rescued in Stricken Districts of Arkansas.

Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 27.—More than a hundred persons caught in the town of McClelland by flood waters of the White river were rescued, according to reports received here.

It is believed there are families in the flooded districts who will be drowned unless aid can reach them. Lean Spur and Cow Mound, small towns east of McClelland, are covered with water and efforts are being made to reach them with boats.

Chalmers Six-40
$1350 Seven Passenger

First Quality Car at $1350
40-Horsepower, 7-Passenger Touring Car, Weight 3075 lbs.
Valve-in-Head Motor with Overhead Camshaft

The battle of the giants is on. It is a battle royal for the supremacy of the medium priced motor car field.

It is the battle of that type of motor which smashed all speed and endurance records at Indianapolis and Chicago—against old style motors.

It is the battle of the principles of construction that went 90 miles an hour, for 500 miles at Indianapolis, and 100 miles an hour for 500 miles at Chicago—against out-dated principles of motor construction.

It is the battle of the manufacturer against the middleman, the producer against the assembler, of buying for cash, against buying on time, of new efficiency in methods of manufacture and administration against inexperienced methods.

It is the battle of Quality and lower profits against higher profits and lack of quality.

It is the battle of new service ideals and co-operation against old methods of expensive upkeep and neglect of the owner.

Into this contest the Chalmers Motor Company enters the greatest car it has ever built, the "Six-40" with valve-in-head overhead camshaft motor.

It is the lowest price at which Chalmers Quality has ever been sold—$1350 for a big 7-passenger touring car.

It is a new car at a lower price sent to battle with old cars at cut prices.

With new service to owners, bigger plans, new buildings, increased factory facilities, and greatly increased production, the Chalmers Motor Company moves forward to the great battle with supreme confidence.

New Motor—New Car—New Price—New Service to Owners
Increased Factory Facilities—Greatly Increased Production for 1916

TWO years ago we saw three things. First was that the tendency of the public demand in both Europe and America was to a compact high speed motor that was more efficient, would get away quicker, run more smoothly, have greater flexibility, show greater economy and last longer under hard service.

Second was that a public temporarily diverted to cars that only looked well and rode nicely for a while, would swing back to demand quality manufacture and the ability to "stay put."

Third was that only those manufacturers who built their own cars in large volume and bought their own materials for spot cash at the advantage of the market could survive.

Motor Designed in Europe

So we sent our engineers to Europe to design a new motor and began to lay our plans for a greatly increased production this season.

We are now building two big new factory additions to handle the work. We added machines that cost $90,000.00 apiece to do work in our factory in order to give this remarkable quality car to you at $1350.

Here is the result.

No one dreamed that such a car could be built for $1350. It is equal to cars that sold for $4000 three years ago. It isn't a made-over model, reduced in size, or certain things eliminated to fit the price—it is a brand new car, designed specially as a Quality car at a low price.

The Quality Car at Small Profit

We are marketing this QUALITY car on the lowest profit per car in the motor car business.

The great valve-in-head motor, with overhead camshaft, costs us $80.00 more to build in our own shops, than the ordinary type of motor can be bought for on the outside, and most of the competitors in our price class are using the ordinary type of motor.

When Chalmers engineers went to Europe to study design two years ago, they found European designers at work on high speed motors of the valve-in-head type with overhead camshaft.

European makers had already tried this type out in their racers. They were perfecting it for a road car.

We hoped to be the first in America to adopt this style of motor. But when the war stopped European makers, fate decreed that we should lead the world in the use of the valve-in-head overhead camshaft motor for a stock car.

We were not surprised at the showing at Indianapolis and Chicago, where this type of motor won all honors. We knew a year ago that these results would be achieved.

Speedway Racers All of This Type

We knew that to attain a speed of 90 to 100 miles an hour that the motor would have to be a valve-in-head, overhead camshaft type.

Quality First

"Let your next car be a Chalmers"

Think of it! 90 miles an hour for 500 miles at Indianapolis and the first four to finish, and eight out of the first ten were valve-in-head motors, with overhead camshafts!

And then the Chicago races at 100 miles an hour for 500 miles—the first three and seven out of the first eleven were of this type!

Some one said a short time ago that people buy motor cars largely on three P's—Paint, Price and Performance. You can measure this wonderful Chalmers car, at $1350, by any one of these three standards. It is right in Paint, which indicates finish and wearing qualities.

It is right in Performance, because no car at any price, performs better than this car does.

And it is right in Price. No one in the history of the industry ever approached such quality at such a price before.

Take a Ride in this Car

"Take a ride in this car," and see for yourself if you do not get in this Chalmers type of six-cylinder motor all the smoothness, all of the flexibility, all of the pick-up, and all of the "pep" that is claimed for any other motor built, no matter how many cylinders it may have.

Therefore, we say that all of our strength, all of our organization, all of our money, all of our reputation, are back of these six words: "TAKE A RIDE IN THIS CAR."

Demonstrators are now in the hands of our dealers.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound and imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free

PAIGE

The Standard of Value and Quality

All The Paige Character and Value In This Six

The new Paige "Six-46" sells for the amazingly low figure—$1295.

Yet this seven-passenger Paige Six has every element and feature of quality that has won Paige cars their present leadership.

The definite purpose of Paige officials in designing and building this car was to make it at every point a car worthy of the Paige name it bears—"The Standard of Value and Quality."

So here you have a Paige miracle—a car with an overplus of value and quality that immediately gives it dominance in the field of seven-passenger models.

That is because it gives you at $1295 the beauty, distinctiveness, the elegance, the comfort, the power, the ease of riding, the simplicity of operation, the flexibility—all the great qualities that have created Paige prestige and success.

It gives you at this remarkably low price the characteristic Paige economy of operation.

It gives you in fact what you have waited for—a seven passenger Paige Six at $1295 without compromise, from the genuine French glaze, hand buffed leather of the comfortable upholstery, and the real Pantasote top, straight through to every vital element of the car.

Examine it, ride in it—and then consider the price—$1295.

There are also marvelous values in the Paige Hollywood "Six-36," a five passenger Six at $1095.

FARMERS PICNIC

It is estimated that between 9000 and 13000 people were present at the Farmers Picnic at Devils Lake Thursday. Grant F. T. Fellows made the principle address. At the close of the program the election of officers followed.

President—Frank Smith of Somerset

Vice President—Milo Camp of Pittsford

Secretary—Harold Pierce of Moscow

Treasurer—A. C. Weed of Rollin.

It was proposed to have a new picnic ground for another year, The matter was left in the hands of the officials. The day was a fine one, The weather man favoring the farmers.

SCHOOL REUNION

The second reunion of the Lindsley District Saline township was held August 19th, at the school grounds. The weather proved ideal for the picnicers, and at 12:30 p m. two hundred assembled to enjoy a sumptuous dinner, carefully planned and well served by an appointed committee.

Mr Frank Morgan a former resident of the district, but now of Detroit, acted as president of the day. He proved to be the right man in the right place, with his good stock of catchy stories and witticism, much was added to the neat, printed programs. The numbers on these programs consisted of recitations, songs, historical reminiscences, letters from absent members, remarks from former teachers, and a good, practical talk by Comm Evan Essery, Master Lyle Goodrich of Milan rendered three violin selections which were greatly enjoyed.

Three large tents wer erected to increase the seating capacity of the school house, which with portable seats accommodated the company. The school flag and a banner with the word "Welcome" helped to form the decorations.

The afternoon closed with a business session with the following officers elected:

President—Lavern Camburn.
Secretary—Margaret McClue.
Treasurers- Fred Abel

MITCHELL "SIX" MAKES WONDERFUL DEMONSTRATION

From a Letter Recently Published in Leslies Illustrated Weekly.

Motor Department
H. W. Slauson, M. E,
July 8, 1915.

Mitchell-Lewis Motor Co,
Racine, Wis.
Gentlemen:

After receiving your letter to the Carl H. Page Company, Mr. Clark, their Metropolitan Sales Manager, was very kind and courteous and not only arranged for a demonstration for me in the Eight, but suggested that I try out the Six as well.

In these two cars you have a wonderful line that should meet the requirements of any purchaser I had been prepared for a demonstration of power and flexibility in the Eight, but was surprised at the ease with which it was handled. I do not believe that there is a car on the market with a shorter turning radius, and this in spite of the contentions of some manufacturers to the effect that the Eight makes necessary a wide frame that renders short turning impossible. The way in which the car will "pick up" from a speed of three or four miles an hour on a grade, to twenty or thirty in a short distance, and without a murmur, is most convincing and furnishes a wonderful demonstration of the overlapping of power impulses that produces a continuous stream of energy.

But my demonstration in "THE SIX OF 16" was even more illuminating, for I was NOT prepared to find the wealth of power, pick up, and flexibility in a motor measuring only 3½x5 inches, There was absolutely nothing that we tried that this car would not do. I asked the demonstrator, Mr. Draper, who, by the way was a most efficient one, to try an especially bad hill which could only be reached by turning an acute angle and which necessitated slowing down to about ten miles an hour at the very beginning of the ascent. The hill was one with which he was not familiar and we were upon the turn before I recognized that particular street myself. Consequently, he could get only a very poor start, and was prepared to see him shift into second before we were half way up, for the hill is of that long, 'steady" kind that requires a motor of tremendous, constant power to get the car even part way up. To my amazement, however, the motor kept picking up and finished the climb at twenty-five miles an hour. In the many demonstrations that I have had in all kinds of cars, this was the most illuminating test that I had experienced with a Six. Another impressive "stunt" was furnished when the car was driven down a twelve percent grade at about two miles an hour, turned in the middle of the hill in a thirty-six foot circle, and made the ascent again at a constantly increasing speed.

But I was furthermore able to determine that this performonce was not due solely to the skill of the demonstrator, for I drove the car up the difficult Abbey Hill, with its tortuous turns, at a constantly increasing speed that convinced me that this motor has more power and accelerating ability than will be required in any ordinary service. But in addition to this wealth of power is the quiet operation, the ability to travel at two miles an hour, and the ease of control, that are, in the long run, more important than the mere development of tremendous energy.

I congratulate your Company on having produced two such wonderful cars, also upon having secured as your representatives in the Metropolitan district a concern as keen, courteous and efficient as the Carl H. Page Motors Company.

Yours very truly,
HAROLD W SLAWSON,
Motor Department.

The FORESTER'S DAUGHTER

A ROMANCE OF THE BEAR TOOTH RANGE

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1914, by Hamlin Garland

A fierce calm had come upon her. Some faroff ancestral deep of passion called for blood revenge. She lifted the weapon with steady hand and pointed it at his heart.

His fear passed as his wrath had passed. His head drooped, his glance wavered. "Shoot!" he commanded sullenly. "I'd sooner die than live—now."

His words, his tone, brought back to her a vision of the man he had seemed when she first met and admired him. Her hand fell, the woman in her reasserted itself. A wave of weakness, of indecision, of passionate grief overwhelmed her. "Oh, Cliff!" she moaned. "Why did you do it? He was so gentle and sweet."

He did not answer. His glance wandered to his horse, serenely cropping the grass in utter disregard of this tumultuous human drama, but the wind, less insensate than the brute, swept through the grove of dwarfed, distorted pines with a desolate, sympathetic moan which filled the man's heart with a new and exalted sorrow. "You're right," he [illegible] deserve killing."

But Berrie was now too deep in her own desolation to care what he said or did. She kissed the cold lips of the still youth, murmuring passionately, "I don't care to live without you; I shall go with you!"

Belden's hand was on her wrist before she could raise the weapon. "Don't, for God's sake; don't do that! He may not be dead!"

She responded but dully to the suggestion. "No, no. He's gone. His breath is gone."

"Maybe not. Let me see."

Again she bent to the quiet face on which the sunlight fell with mocking splendor. It seemed all a dream till she felt once more the stain of his blood upon her hands. It was all so incredibly sudden. Only just now he was exulting over the warmth and beauty of the day—and now—

How beautiful he was. He seemed asleep. The conies crying from their runways suddenly took on poignant pathos. They appeared to be grieving with her, but the eagles spoke of revenge.

A sharp cry, a note of joy sprang versal of the ordinary relations between hero and heroine, and he saw no way of re-establishing the normal attitude of the male.

Entirely unaware of what was passing in the mind of her patient Berrie went about her duties with a cheerfulness which astonished the sufferer in the tent. She seemed about to hum a song as she set the skillet on the fire, but a moment later she called out, in a tone of irritation, "Here comes Nash!"

"I'm glad of that," answered Wayland, although he perceived something of her displeasure.

Nash, on his way to join the supervisor, raised a friendly greeting as he saw the girl and drew rein. "I expected to meet you farther down the hill," he said. "Tony phoned that you had started. Where did you leave the supervisor?"

"Over at the station waiting for you. Where's your outfit?"

"Camped down the trail a mile or so. I thought I'd better push through tonight. What about Norcross? Isn't he with you?"

She hesitated an instant. "He's in the tent. He fell and struck his head on a rock, and I had to go into camp here."

Nash was deeply concerned. "Is that so? Well, that's hard luck. Is he badly hurt?"

"Well, he had a terrible fall. But he's easier now. I think he's asleep."

"May I look in on him?"

"I don't think you'd better take the time. It's a long, hard ride from here to the station. It will be deep night before you can make it"—

"Don't you think the supervisor would want me to camp here tonight and do what I could for you? If Norcross is badly injured you will need me."

She liked Nash, and she knew he was right, and yet she was reluctant to give up the pleasure of her lone vigil. "He's not in any danger, and we'll be able to ride on in the morning."

Nash, thinking of her as Clifford Belden's promised wife, had no suspicion of her feeling toward Norcross. Therefore he gently urged that to go on was quite out of order. "I can't think of leaving you here alone—certainly not till I see Norcross and find out how badly he is hurt."

She yielded. "I reckon you're right," she said. "I'll go see if he is awake."

He followed her to the door of the tent, apprehending something new and inexplicable in her attitude. In the music of her voice as she spoke to the sick man was the love note of the mate. "You may come in," she called back, and Nash, stooping, entered the small tent.

"Hello, old man! What you been doing with yourself? Hitting the high spots?"

Norcross smiled feebly. "No, the hill flew up and bumped me."

"How did it all happen?"

"I don't exactly know. It all came of a sudden. I had no share in it. I didn't go for to do it."

"Whether you did or not, you seem to have made a good job of it."

Nash examined the wounded man carefully, and his skill and strength in handling Norcross pleased Berrie, though she was jealous of the warm friendship which seemed to exist between the men.

She had always liked Nash, but she resented him now, especially as he insisted on taking charge of the case, but she gave way finally and went back to her pots and pans with pensive countenance.

A little later, when Nash came out to make report, she was not very gracious in her manner. "He's pretty badly hurt," he said. "There's an ugly gash in his scalp, and the shock has produced a good deal of pain and confusion in his head, but he's going to be all right in a day or two. For a man seeking rest and recuperation he certainly has had a rough run of weather."

Through a serious minded, honorable forester, determined to keep sternly in mind that he was in the presence of the daughter of his chief, and that she was engaged to marry another, Nash was, after all, a man, and the witchery of the hour, the charm of the girl's graceful figure, asserted their power over him. His eyes grew tender, and his voice eloquent in spite of himself. His words he could guard, but it was hard to keep from his speech the song of the lover. The thought that he was to camp in her company, to help her about the fire, to see her from moment to moment, with full liberty to speak to her, to meet her glance, pleased him. It was the most romantic and moving episode in his life, and though of a rather dry and analytic temperament he had a sense of poesy.

The night, black, oppressive and silent, brought a closer bond of mutual help and understanding between them.

She grew friendlier and asked him about his work and especially about his ambitions and plans for the future. They discussed the forest and its enemies, and he wondered at her freedom in speaking of the mill and saloon. He said: "Of course you know that Alec Belden is a partner in that business, and I'm told—of course I don't know this—that Clifford Belden is also interested."

She offered no defense of young Belden, and this unconcern puzzled him. He had expected indignant protest, but she merely replied: "I don't care who owns it. It should be rooted out. I hate that kind of thing. It's just another way of robbing those poor tie-jacks."

"Clifford should get out of it. Can't you persuade him to do so?"

"I don't think I can."

"His relationship to you"—

"He is not related to me."

from her lips. "He is alive! I saw his eyelids quiver! Quick! Bring some water!"

The man leaped to his feet and, running down to the pool, filled his sombrero with icy water. He was as eager now to save his rival as he had been mad to destroy him. "Let me help," he pleaded. But she would not permit him to touch the body.

Again, while splashing the water upon his face, the girl called upon her love to return. "He hears me!" she exulted to her enemy. "He is breathing now! He is opening his eyes!"

The wounded man did, indeed, open his eyes, but his look was a blank, uncomprehending stare, which plunged her back into despair. "He don't know me!" she said, with piteous accent. She now perceived the source of the blood upon her arm. It came from a wound in the boy's head which had been dashed upon a stone.

The sight of this wound brought back the blaze of accusing anger to her eyes. "See what you did!" she said, with cold malignity. Then by sudden shift she bent to the sweet face in her arms and kissed it passionately. "Open your eyes, darling. You must not die! I won't let you die! Can't you hear me? Don't you know where you are?"

He opened his eyes once more, quietly, and looked up into her face with a faint, drowsy smile. He could not yet locate himself in space and time, but he knew her and was comforted.

Slowly the youth's eyes took on expression. "Are we still on the hill?" he asked.

"Yes, dearest," she assured him. Then to Belden, "He knows where he is!"

Wayland again struggled with reality. "What has happened to me?"

"You fell and hurt your head."

He turned slightly and observed the other man looking down at her with dark and tragic glance. "Hello, Belden," he said feebly. "How came you here?" Then noting Berrie's look, he added: "I remember. He tried to kill me." He again searched his antagonist's face. "Why didn't you finish the job?"

The girl tried to turn his thought aside. "It's all right now, darling. He won't make any more trouble. Don't mind him. I don't care for anybody now you are coming back to me."

Wayland wonderingly regarded the face of the girl. "And you—are you hurt?"

"No, I'm not hurt. I am perfectly happy now." She turned to Belden with quick, authoritative command. "Unsaddle the horses and set up the tent. We won't be able to leave here tonight."

He rose with instant obedience, glad of a chance to serve her, and soon had the tent pegged to its place and the bedding unrolled. Together they lifted the wounded youth and laid him upon his blankets beneath the low canvas roof which seemed heavenly helpful to Berea.

"There!" she said caressingly. "Now you are safe, no matter whether it rains or not."

He smiled. "It seems I'm to have my way after all. I hope I shall be able to see the sun rise. I've sort of lost my interest in the sunset."

"Now, Cliff," she said as soon as the camp was in order and a fire started, "I reckon you'd better ride on. I haven't any further use for you."

"Don't say that, Berrie," he pleaded. "I can't leave you here alone with a sick man. Let me stay and help."

She looked at him for a long time before she replied. "I shall never be able to look at you again without hating you," she said. "I shall always remember you as you looked when you were killing that boy. So you'd better ride on and keep a-riding. I'm going to forget all this just as soon as I can, and it don't help me any to have you around. I never want to see you or hear your name again."

"You don't mean that, Berrie!"

"Yes, I do," she asserted bitterly. "I mean just that. So saddle up and pull out. All I ask of you is to say nothing about what has happened here. You'd better leave the state. If Wayland should get worse it might go hard with you."

He accepted his banishment. "All right. If you feel that way I'll ride. But I'd like to do something for you before I go. I'll pile up some wood"—

"No. I'll take care of that." And without another word of farewell she turned away and re-entered the tent.

Mounting his horse with painful slowness, as though suddenly grown old, the reprieved assassin rode away up the mountain, his head bent low, his eyes upon the ground.

CHAPTER XIII.

Berrie's Vigil.

As Wayland's mind cleared he became curious to know precisely what had taken place, but he did not feel free to ask her. "She will tell me if she wishes me to know." That she had vanquished Belden and sent him on his way was evident, although he had not been able to hear what she had said to him at the last. What lay between the enemy's furious onslaught and the [illegible] only be surmised. "I wonder if she used her pistol?" Wayland asked himself. "Something like death must have stared him in the face."

That she loved him with the complete passion of her powerful and simple nature he knew, for her voice had reached through the daze of his semi-unconsciousness with thrilling power. The touch of her lips to his, the close clasp of her strong arms were of ever greater convincing quality. And yet he wished the revelation had come in some other way. His pride was abraded. His manhood seemed somehow lessened. It was a disconcerting re-

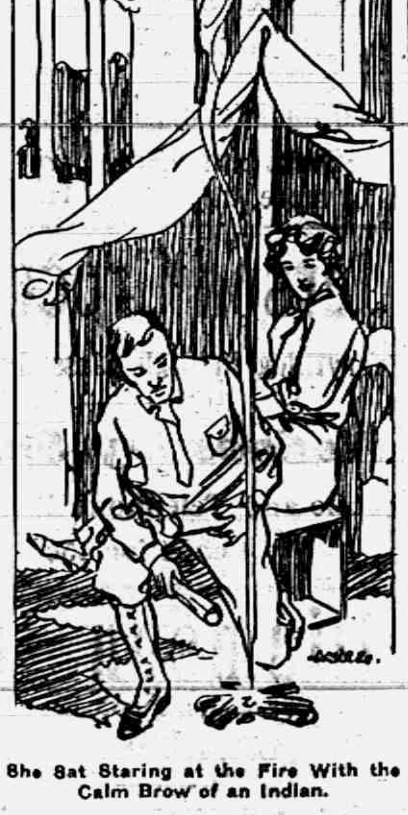
Her tone amazed him. "You know what I mean."

"Of course I do, but you're mistaken. We're not related that way any longer."

This silenced him for a few moments, then he said: "I'm rather glad of that. He isn't anything like the man you thought he was—I couldn't say these things before—but he is as greedy as Alec, only not so open about it."

All this comment, which moved the forester so deeply to utter, seemed not to interest Berea. She sat staring at the fire with the calm brow of an Indian. Clifford Belden had passed out of her life as completely as he had vanished out of the landscape. She felt an immense relief at being rid of him and resented his being brought back even as a subject of conversation.

Wayland, listening, fancied he understood her desire and said nothing that might arouse Nash's curiosity.



She Sat Staring at the Fire With the Calm Brow of an Indian.

Nash on his part, knowing that she had broken with Belden, began to understand the tenderness, the anxious care of her face and voice, as she bent above young Norcross. As the night deepened and the cold air stung, he asked, "Have you plenty of blankets for a bed?"

"Oh, yes," she answered, "but I don't intend to sleep."

"Oh, you must!" he declared. "Go to bed. I will keep the fire going."

At last she consented. "I will make my bed right here at the mouth of the tent close to the fire," she said, "and you can call me if you need me."

"Why not put your bed in the tent? It's going to be cold up here."

"I am all right outside," she protested.

"Put your bed inside, Miss Berrie. We can't let conventions count above timber line. I shall rest better if I know you are properly sheltered."

And so it happened that for the third time she shared the same roof with her lover. But the nurse was uppermost in her now.

Nash was the first to arise in the dusk of dawn, and Berrie, awakened by the crackle of his fire, soon joined him.

"If you'll round up our horses, Mr. Nash, I'll rustle breakfast and we'll get going," she said.

Nash, enthralled, lingered while she twisted her hair into place, then went out to bring in the ponies.

Wayland came out a little uncertainly, but looking very well. "I think I shall discourage my friends from coming to this region for their health," he said feebly. "If I were a novelist now all this would be grist for my mill."

Beneath his joking he was profoundly chagrined. He had hoped by this time to be as sinewy, as alert as Nash, instead of which here he sat, shivering over the fire like a sick girl, his head swollen, his blood sluggish, but this discouragement only increased Berea's tenderness—a tenderness which melted all his reserve.

"I'm not worth all your care," he said to her, with poignant glance.

The sun rose clear and warm, and the fire, the coffee, put new courage into him as well as into the others, and while the morning was yet early and the forest chill and damp with rain, the surveyor brought up the horses and started packing the outfit.

In this Berrie again took part, doing her half of the work quite as dextrously as Nash himself. Indeed, the forester was noticeably confused and not quite up to his usual level of adroit ease.

At last both packs were on, and as they stood together for a moment Nash said: "This has been a great experience—one I shall remember as long as I live."

She stirred uneasily under his frank admiration. "I'm mightily obliged to you," she replied, as heartily as she could command.

"Don't thank me. I'm indebted to you. There is so little in my life of such companionship as you and Norcross give me."

He helped Norcross mount his horse, and as he put the lead rope into Berrie's hand he said, with much feeling: "Good luck to you. I shall remember this night all the rest [illegible] life, Miss Berrie."

"I hate to be going to the rear," called Wayland, whose bare, bandaged head made him look like a wounded young officer. "But I guess it's better for me to lay off a week or two and recover my tone."

And so they parted, the surveyor riding his determined way up the naked mountain side toward the clouds, while Berrie and her ward plunged at once into the dark and dripping forest below. "If you can stand the grief," she said, "we'll go clear through."

Her caution was all for him. She tried each dangerous slough first and thus was able to advise him which way was safest. His head throbbed with pain and his knees were weary, but he rode on.

At last they came into open ground on a high ridge and were gladdened by the valley outspread below them, for it was still radiant with color, though not as brilliant as before the rain.

At 1 o'clock on the bank of a clear stream the girl halted. "I reckon we'd better camp awhile. You look tired, and I am hungry."

She unsaddled one pack animal and spread some blankets on the grass. "Lie down and rest while I boil some coffee," she commanded, and he obeyed, too tired to make pretension toward assisting.

GIBRALTAR.

The Rock That Guards the Mouth of the Mediterranean.

Gibraltar was captured by the British July 24, 1704, and from that day has not been out of British hands.

At first little was thought of the importance of this stronghold. For the succeeding nine years the Spaniards made repeated attempts to recapture it. On one occasion they nearly succeeded.

A French and Spanish force having been collected on the isthmus that joins the rock to the mainland, a goatherd offered to show them a path up the sloping sides of the rock, which he had reason to believe was unknown to the British. This offer was accepted.

Five hundred troops ascended quietly one night and took shelter in a hollow called by the Spaniards "the little chair." At daybreak next morning they ascended higher, took the signal station, killed the guard and anxiously looked for expected re-enforcements. The re-enforcements failed to arrive. The armed garrison sallied out and drove the invaders down the rock. The "little chair" was filled up and the place made stronger than ever.

All subsequent attempts to capture the rock have failed. One of them was a siege by Spain and France, beginning in 1779 and not terminating until September, 1783.

The rock of Gibraltar takes on a more important bearing than ever in these days of big guns because of its commanding position at the mouth of the Mediterranean, where that sea is little more than twenty miles wide.—Exchange.

LITTLE ANDORRA.

The Tiny Republic That Nestles In a Nook In the Pyrenees.

Andorra is a republic of 175 square miles situated in the valley of the same name in the Eastern Pyrenees. It forms an irregular little square plug between France and Spain and is a hotbed for smugglers plying between the two countries. It leads a semi-independent existence under the protection of France and the Bishop of Urgel, Spain. Charlemagne declared it independent in return for its services against the Moors.

In 1278 it was transferred to the Comte de Foix and the Bishopric of Urgel. During the French revolution relations between it and France were interrupted, on account of the refusal of France to accept the annual tribute, which was considered incompatible with a Republican form of government. In 1806, however, the former relations were renewed, and free importation of cereals, made necessary by the limited area of Andorra, was allowed by France in return for an annual tribute of 960 francs.

Andorra is governed by a council of twenty-four members chosen for four years by the heads of the communities. The revenue is derived from lands and a few taxes. The manner of life is very simple. Every ablebodied male is liable to military service between the ages of sixteen and sixty. The capital is Andorra, with about 1,000 inhabitants. The total population is about 6,000 and remains practically stationary.

The matter of censorship of movie films on a broad scale, as discussed before the motion picture exhibitors' convention, is one to ponder over. Harmful exhibitions under the guise of amusement render the offenders liable to police interference. This method localizes the guardianship of morals and avoids clashing with the natural antipathy to a public censor. Censorship of literature and stage representations are not acceptable to a free people. Part of the hostility is due to a suspicion that commercial rivalry and politics often warp the views of the censor. Really, the best censor is a clean public mind re-enforced by the shrewd sense of the amusement purveyor. There are plenty of clean, humorous, instructive, picturesque and harmlessly thrilling fields to exploit on the curtain, and, like the best books and plays, they are self advertising. If the Exhibitors' league exerts the influence it should possess, the public will effectually bar out bad movies because it prefers good ones and can get them all of the time, not merely some of the time.

Is Europe in danger of bankruptcy? Since the war began Great Britain has raised $4,750,000,000, Germany raised $3,500,000,000, Austria $1,200,000,000, France $1,500,000,000 and Russia something over $750,000,000. Leaving out the loans which Italy and Turkey have resorted to, the total is something like $11,750,000,000 raised within [illegible] Leroy-Beaulieu, the noted authority on economics, "the civilized world provides $2,400,000,000 in available capital annually for investment in securities." Accepting these figures as correct, how can the belligerent nations raise all this money without disturbing world finances to an unprecedented extent? In point of fact the European financial situation is in such a chaotic state that no estimate of the extent of the disturbance can be made.

Horrors of war are not confined to the zones where the bullet and torpedo works. In the wake of armies follow scanty and half spoiled food, polluted water, overcrowded sheds and hovels and mansions degraded to hovels, obliteration of the decencies of life and swarms of vermin, all preparing the field for ancient forms of pestilence to shame and slay mankind.

That twenty foot bear which the Alaska hunter met up with may fairly be set down as an optical illusion. The ordinary bear would look like twenty and even forty feet to a very scared fugitive and no tree handy.

Grand opera stars are to act for movie films. As acting never cut much figure in grand opera and movies are voiceless the result will be mere picture galleries instead of moving shows.

1915 STATE FAIR FEATURES

More money is being spent by the State Fair management upon noteworthy features and attractions than ever before, and even in this year of great expositions Michigan's State Fair, which is to be held at Detroit, Sept. 6 to 15, will rank among the best. SPORTS BLOUSE.

Shirt Waists Smartly Tailored Liked For Ordinary Wear.

A PINK AND WHITE FANCY.

The development of the blouse has given us many kinds of them for sports, as well as for more elaborate wear. The one shown in the illustration is made of pink and white striped linen combined with plain white linen for collar and cuffs. Large white pearl buttons are the only ornamental touches.

MAKING LIVABLE PORCHES.

Privacy a Desirability When Constructing Piazzas, Balconies or Loggias.

Unfortunately up to the present time few Americans realize the meaning and desirability of privacy. Even in the country many houses are built near the road, without any attempt to screen private residences from the public gaze, and in the city, where porches are so rare a luxury, they are generally built around the main entrance of a house, where there is a constant coming and going and where a cozy retreat, hidden from every passerby, is almost an impossibility.

However, many houses have possibilities. For instance, roofs over pantries and additions or projecting extensions that are created as a result of architectural design could be made into charming little balconies without much trouble or expense.

A roof can be converted into a very satisfactory porch floor by covering and leveling it with wooden slats that allow natural drainage, and there need be no permanent wooden roofs for such a retreat when awnings and canvas curtains can be made to answer the purpose of protection quite as effectively. Is there anything more restful or more delightful than to be thus sheltered from the dust and bustle of streets? Is there anything more desirable than the security of such a retreat?

Indeed, a balcony, loggia or veranda need not be limited to the homes of the wealthy, for it can easily be brought within the scope of limited incomes and talents. The barest and bleakest of porches can be made an interesting spot—one that is essentially livable—with the help of awnings and screens, a few comfortable chairs, a swinging couch or hammock and, above all, a few flowers and vines. Flowers and green things are to a porch what an open fireplace is to a room. They form a nucleus, a charming center, around which the other things naturally group themselves.

JAPANESE SCREEN.

Black and Rose Is the Color Scheme In This Article.

Black Japanese silk was used in the making of this beautiful screen. It is richly embroidered in pale pink and rose chrysanthemums and the casings are of ebony. There are four leaves in the screen proper, only two of which show in the illustration.

HANDSOME HOUSEHOLD FITTING.

Cooling Process.

To keep milk fresh in warm weather or to cool any liquid in a bottle dip a cloth in cold water, wrap the cloth around the jug or bottle and leave in a cool place, preferably in a draft. This method of cooling is much more effectual on account of the evaporation produced than if the jug or bottle had been placed in cold water.

WHERE THE DAY CHANGES.

The International Date Line In the Pacific Ocean.

A great many people cannot see why when a man crosses the international date line in the Pacific ocean if he goes toward the east he loses a day and if toward the west he gains a day—that is, if it, say, happens to be Tuesday just this side if he crosses to the west it will be Monday. The distance he may have actually gone need be only a few feet, but it is true nevertheless. The actual time may be only a second's difference.

To understand this remember that we go from Monday to Tuesday at 12 o'clock at night—jump immediately from one day to another. Consider also that if a man could travel toward the east as fast as the earth rotates and if he started at midday, with the sun directly overhead, he would go completely round the earth in no solar time at all, for the sun would always be just over his head and to him it would be 12 o'clock all the time if he measured time by the position of the sun. He would not experience any night at all and so would have twenty-four hours of sunlight. But it has actually taken him twenty-four hours to get around, so the time when he reached his starting place again would be 12 o'clock noon all right, but would be a day later than when he started.

So it can be readily seen that some meridian on the earth's surface must be picked out as the starting point of a new day, and the chosen one lies almost entirely in the Pacific ocean.—Every Week.

A DOCTOR'S HOBBY.

There Was a Queer Twist to the End of Peebles' Experiments.

There was a British physician named Robert Peebles who created a sensation in London and Edinburgh several years ago by his insistent coaxing of athletes for the privilege of studying their bodies after death.

Peebles had been experimenting with the muscles and had arrived at what his associates termed a fantastic notion that some sort of operation could be performed on the leg of the human runner so that his speed could be increased. Leapers and high jumpers were his hobby, and in the course of five years it was estimated that he had examined the leg muscles of nearly a thousand men, making comparisons with the running and leaping muscles of the frog, the deer, the greyhound and other animals.

Peebles was a man of means, and after he had succeeded in inducing half a dozen athletes of reputation to "will him their legs" the attention of surgeons was attracted. They took the matter under consideration at one of their quarterly meetings and warned Peebles they would have him committed to a sanitarium if he continued his strange pursuit. Peebles defied them, and they had a commission appointed. While his sanity was being tested Peebles died. In his will he bequeathed his brain to the commission. — Exchange.

LIMITS OF VISION.

Why It Seems to Rain In Streaks Instead of In Drops.

When it is raining just what does one see? We know that the rain consists of drops, nearly spherical, falling either vertically or at an angle (if the wind be blowing). But what do we see? We see streaks through the air and not drops at all. The reason is that the eye cannot follow the raindrop in its flight and so cannot see just the drop continually. The eye gets only one glimpse of the drop in one position, while an impression is made on the retina for some distance by the drop moving.

If the drop were still we could look at it as long as we chose, and the image of the drop would be in just one place on the retina, but if we let the drop escape from our direct view it makes an image, or, rather, a succession of images, on the retina, and that is what we see.

But why does the retina show this succession of images? It certainly sees at any one time the drop in just one position, so it would seem that the last position seen would be the one. This is not the case, and the cause is due to what is known as persistence of vision. We cannot quit seeing a thing immediately after getting a view of it. It takes about an eighth of a second for the retina to lose an image, and so this succession of images will be on the retina at one time and will cause a streak.

For the same reason the spokes of a rapidly rotating wheel cannot be seen except as a blur. For the same reason moving pictures are possible.—New York American.

BEAUTIFUL NOSES.

They Are Very Rare, It Seems, and Deserve Honorable Mention.

Lovely eyes you will find a-plenty, and, though finely cut mouths are scarcer, it will be a strange day when you do not see several. But the discovery of a really beautiful nose is an event of a lifetime. I myself have found exactly seven. And yet I consider myself catholic in my taste for noses. I can enjoy a nose for its mere expressiveness, whether it is aggressive or aristocratic or humorous.

But it is amazing how seldom this feature really satisfies the eye. The bridge may be too thick or too high, the line from the forehead too abrupt or too severely straight. More often a nose that is really promising in its beginning fails in the end. It keeps on too long or not long enough, while the tip finds a dozen ways to err, and a fine nostril is rarely seen. In our typical American faces, overcrowded with features as our houses are with furniture, the nose is commonly disproportionately large.

But your really beautiful nose is a delight in every way. It is as far from sharpness as from coarseness. It shows strength without obtrusiveness, delicacy without fastidiousness, breeding without arrogance. It suggests humor, spirit and daring. But I tell you candidly that there are not more than 100 such in the 4,000,000 noses of New York. You are lucky when one happens to come your way.—Atlantic Monthly.

BATTLE SCARRED JUNE.

Summer's First Month Notable For Many Historic Conflicts.

The battle of Bunker Hill was fought on June 17, 1775, one of many memorable battles fought in the month of June.

Waterloo, the declaration of war between Great Britain and the United States in 1812, the Shannon-Chesapeake fight in that war, the battle of Naseby, the storming of the Mamelon redoubts by the French in the Crimean struggle, Marengo, Friedland, Raab, Kolin, Plassey, the battle of Monmouth and the fight at Fort Moultrie all were in June.

Many of the most famous struggles of the war between the states took place in June. The Kearsarge sank the Alabama on June 19, 1864; Memphis fell on June 6, 1862; the seven days before Richmond began on June 26, 1862; the battle of Cold Harbor was fought from June 1 to 3, 1864; Winchester was fought on June 13-15, 1863; Lynchburg on June 17-18, 1864; Mechanicsville on June 26, 1862; Gaines' Mill on the following day, and the siege of Petersburg lasted from June 15 to 30.

The massacre of Custer and his men by the Indians on the Little Big Horn, the greatest disaster that has befallen United States cavalry in decades, also took place in June—June 25, 1876, a date that always will be kept as a day of mourning by the Seventh cavalry.—New York Herald.

WATERING THE LAWN.

A Task That, as a General Rule, Is Not Properly Performed.

There are probably more mistakes made in connection with the watering of the lawn than in any other phase of its management.

The practice of sprinkling, as it is almost universally followed, is fundamentally wrong—not that the sprinkler does not furnish enough water to the grass during the season, but that it does not furnish it in properly distributed quantities.

Sprinkling for a short period may appear to wet the sod thoroughly, but in reality the water does not penetrate much below the surface. This encourages the formation of surface roots and makes the grass less resistant to the severe conditions of weather and usage.

Except in rare cases the lawn should not be watered oftener than two or three times a week. A thorough soaking is necessary and should be given in the late afternoon or early morning. The ordinary type of revolving spray is quite satisfactory, but the amount of water applied by it is usually much less than appears.

The point to be borne in mind is that the ground should be thoroughly saturated at each application to at least three inches in depth.—Kansas City Journal.

British Julius Caesars.

Julius Caesar, who on one of the closing days of August in 55 B. C. landed on the Kentish coast, has had many British namesakes, including a great cricketer, but the best known is Julius Caesar, master of the rolls under James I., about whom Lord Clarendon in the first volume of his history tells the amusing story, "Remember Caesar." The unpopular Earl of Portland sat up all night in a barricaded house with his friends and retainers armed to the teeth because he found in his pocket a slip of paper bidding him "Remember Caesar," which really had reference not to the assassination of the Roman statesman, but to some preferment promised to a son of Sir Julius Caesar. The tomb of Sir Julius Caesar, with a quaint epitaph in legal phraseology, is among the many curious monuments of St. Helen's, Bishopsgate.—London Mail.

Watching Royalty Eat.

The Saxon court appears to have been the last to preserve the custom of dining in public, initiated at Versailles under the ancient regime. Lady Clarendon notes in her journal on Oct. 1, 1844, when she and her husband were traveling through Germany: "We were invited to dine with the king and queen of Saxony at their villa, near Dresden. The dinner was handsome, and what I liked best was to observe that the galleries commanding a view of the table had people quite of a common order in them. I was told that any one who chose was freely admitted."—London Express.

On Being Up Betimes.

A maiden lady said to her little nephew, "Now, Johnny, you go to bed early and always do so and you'll be rosy cheeked and handsome when you grow up."

Johnny thought over this a few minutes, and then he observed, "Well, aunty, you must have sat up a good deal when you were young."—Atlanta Journal.

GOOD-BYE BLUE MONDAY

I have also seen a lot of women who would rather quit house-keeping than dispose of their bright new METZ WASHING MACHINE we recently installed on a trial basis.

Honestly, one woman told us it was saving doctor bills.

The machine runs quiet, so very simple to operate. You know the wringer can be run at the same time as the washer or either can be run separate.

You can wring the clothes from the machine to the rinsing water, then to the bluing water, then to the basket just by the mere feeding of the clothes to the wringer.

No water to carry out as there is a simple devise to drain the water off.

As for doing clean work, you will simply be surprised to see how clean it washes the clothes without the least chance of tearing.

We want every lady to try a machine and will bring one to you, you can use it for two washing and if satisfied to go back to the old way will call for the machine.

Prices are very reasonable, on time if you wish, from $10.00 up,

Tecumseh Business Houses.

LESTER J. COLLER

Here's an example of thrift and get-there-ness it might be a good lesson for some of our youths to emulate when a youngster of 17, Lester Coller, who had been a student for a few months with L. J. Abrams in his photograph gallery, just walked up and purchased the whole business. Of course he had to find a good backer but in a little over a year had the business all paid for.

Up to a year ago he was the youngest [illegible] owning a gallery belonging to the Photographic Association of America. He saw the opportunity was a good one as it was the only gallery in a radius of ten miles in every direction and he did not misjudge his own ability as an artist so has made good many times over. The little lady assistant who soon became his wife has been a splendid helper and the two were bound to be successful.

Lester is selling more Kadak supplies and puts out more pictures than any photographer in any town of our size in the state—so affirm his travelling men visitors.

LESTER J COLLER

Last November Lester Coller purchased of Ernest M. Coller his music store. At the rear of the store he built an up-to-date gallery with new fixtures and moved his photo business from across the street. So doing away with that long two flights of stairs.

Since attaching the music store to the other business he has also proven himself a hustler in that line. He has sold many pianos, piano-players and sewing machines in the few months he has had the business and lately has added the Royal typewriter, and typewriter supplies to the stock. He sells second-hand typewriters and will rent them when needed.

The sewing machines carried are the White and they do not need further advertisement as they are the old reliable. Pictures of all description are on sale also the largest line of picture moulding in the village. Mr. Coller is making this an up-to-date art store and Tecumseh is proud of this "youngster.

E. M. CAMPBELL

About the busiest man on the street is E. M. Campbell who since May, 1914, has been running a cleaning establishment on East Chicago street. He came to us from Pontiac and had learned the business well. First he erected a cleaning room some feet away from the store building so as to do away with all danger from fire. Then he installed two-cylinder washers which run by a gasoline engine and all the cleaning is done in this outside room. A wringer, such as is used in the laundry, is used and the pressing done by a steam press. With this complete equipment he is better able to care for Tecumseh's work than any other cleaner ever here.

A few words about the cleaning business right here may be interesting. It is of comparatively recent origin, having been discovered by a Frenchman named Judlin in 1868—the fact that gasoline will remove spots. Then a gasoline soap was invented which added to the gasoline would remove spots which the gasoline alone would not touch. The combination makes "dry cleaning" but that is not all of the business by any means for it sakes a knowledge of fabrics and the pressing of the same to make a successful cleaner and such is Mr. Campbell.

He asserts that his system will not shrink the garment and has no effect on the color of the most delicate fabric.

BIG CHIEF GARAGE

On Feb. 1, 1913, C. E. Williamson and son Leon P. formed a company The Big Chief for the purpose of marketing automobiles, motor-cycles, accessories and supplies and to conduct a repair shop. The first step was to buy of Fred Teachout his livery barn, corner of Evans and Logan streets. The barn was moved off and the site built a splendid large brick garage 50x100 ft. in size. It is as nearly fire-proof as it can be made, with an asbestos roof, and cement floor except in the office. This latter room has plate glass windows across the west and north ends, making it an excellent display room. The repair room is thyroughly equipped with all kinds of the machinery needed. A mercury arc for charging storage batteries has been recently installed, also an automatic Allis-Chalmers air compressor driven by electric motor and carrying a pressure of 120 lbs. Four men are employed at the constantly among them an excellent repair man and helpers.

Their record of sales have been very gratifying—somewhere about 300 cars and 60 motor-cycles since their organization 2½ years ago. Since Oct. 1, 1914 to August 1st they have put out 67 Fords.

For next season they carry the Ford and Buick, two of the most popular machines and at all times they have on sale Ford parts and accessories. This corner is some busy place, scarcely a minute passes without some machine with its troubles stopping to be doctored and the office is a favorite gathering place for autoists.

A SAD CASE

Prominent Holly Woman Goes Violently Insane.

Miss Blanche Young was taken to Oak Grove sanitarium Sunday suffering from a violent form of insanity On Friday noon she suddenly attacked the nurse who has been taking care of her mother, Mrs. Miranda Young who is sick; choking her and dragging her from the kitchen into the woodshed The screams of the nurse attracted the attention of neighbors and several hurried to the scene. It required the combined strength of three or four men to rescue the nurse and subdue her assailant. A physician was called and opiates were administered, but Miss Young had another violent spell later and it was necessary to keep her under the influence of drugs nearly all the time until she was taken to the sanitarium. Occasionally she would have rational intervals, during which she remembered what she had done, but these intervals were of short duration.

Miss Young has been a resident of Holly for a long time, except as at different periods, she has been away temporarily. She is a preacher of the Universalist denomination and has held different pastorates in the state For the past four or five years she has been here all the time, taking care of her mother, who is an invalid. Persons who are well acquainted with her say that she has acted a little strange of late, but they attributed it to worry over her mothers condition

August 19 1915 —Holly Advertizer

Since receiving the above account, Miss Mary Whitlock has received a letter from Miss Young from the sanitarium. She tells of her sudden nervous collapse, and that she is receiving treatment, the doctor telling her that a season of perfect rest will help her The mother is in a semi stupor and does not seem to miss her. Miss Youngs friends in Tecumseh will rejoice to hear that she is on the gain.

ARABIC CASE AWAITS REPORTS BY GERARD

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Final reports concerning the sinking of the liner Arabic still were awaited by administration officials, pending the receipt of which the attitude of the United States government remains undetermined.

Already the question seems to have been cleared up that the Arabic was torpedoed without warning. The point now in doubt is as to whether Germany will claim that the change of course of the liner just before she was attacked led the submarine commander to believe that she was attempting a hostile act against him. Ambassador Gerard at Berlin is expected to throw light on this point.

Upon his report probably will depend the decision of the Washington government as to whether Germany has committed a "deliberately unfriendly act." Meanwhile the administration is maintaining an open mind, and no statement as to the course to be pursued will be issued.

Discussion continued as to the possibility of the United States breaking off diplomatic relations with Germany in the event it is decided that the sinking of the Arabic was a "deliberately unfriendly act."

BRYAN IS KISSED BY GERMAN ENTHUSIAST

Bewhiskered Farmer Gets Affectionate Over Peace Talk.

Wichita, Kas., Aug. 27.—Stirred by an eloquent peace appeal, John Graber, a big German farmer living near Murdock, Kas., kissed William J. Bryan at the conclusion of the former secretary's address at Kingman.

Surprised by the suddenness of the act, the colonel had no opportunity to sidestep, and when the kiss had been planted squarely on the commoner's mouth, he backed away, blushing like a girl.

Cheers and hand clapping by 3,000 who saw the kiss allowed Bryan to recover his composure.

Graber, large and bewhiskered, then explained:

"Mr. Bryan, I have read your paper for years and have admired you. I made up my mind that if ever I got a chance to see you I would kiss you. When I saw you were coming here I knew that my wish would be fulfilled, and it has been."

THINK GERMANY YIELDS TO U. S.

Washington Is Encouraged by Note from Gerard.

GERMAN ENVOY GETS NEWS

Note From Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg, It Is Hoped, Will Clear Up Submarine Controversy From Time Lusitania Was Sunk—Disavowal by Kaiser Looked For.

Washington, Aug. 27.—The critical situation between Germany and the United States over the submarine issue is rapidly moving toward a settlement satisfactory to this government. Germany has given indisputable evidence that she has finally yielded to the principal demands of the United States government and will enter into an understanding with it in regard to future protection for Americans traveling on the high seas.

The favorable turn that has suddenly come in the situation applies not only to the case of the Arabic, but to the entire submarine controversy. Washington officials now confidently expect that the difficulties with Germany, which have harassed this government since back in May when the Lusitania was sunk, are about to be cleared away and a satisfactory a reement reached as to the future. This optimism is based on the public statement of Chancellor Bethmann-Holweg on a report which the state department received from Mr. Gerard detailing an interview which he had with the officials of the Berlin foreign office and on statements made by Count Bernstorff, the German ambassador, in a conference with Secretary Lansing.

Believe Bernstorff Has Instructions.

There is reason to believe that instructions are about to be sent from Berlin to Ambassador Von Bernstorff if they are not already on the way which will authorize him to take action with a view to reaching a final understanding with this government on the submarine issue.

To say that Washington authorities are elated over the unexpectedly favorable turn of events is putting it mildly. It is apparent that they regard recent developments as almost too good to be true. At the same time it is realized that a settlement of this acute issue by the president and the removal of the real danger that has confronted this government of being drawn into the European war will be a stroke of great importance, particularly to Mr. Wilson and the Democratic party.

German Chancellor's Statement.

The statement made by the German chancellor to which so much importance is attached by the United States was this sentence:

"Only after these circumstances (in regard to the sinking of the Arabic) have been cleared up will it be possible to say whether the commander of one of our submarines went beyond his instructions."

This is the first acknowledgment by the Berlin government that it has issued orders to its submarine commanders restricting their methods of operation. It is accepted here as evidence that Germany has quietly yielded to the demands of the United States and issued orders to her submarine commanders against the attacking passenger carrying vessels without observing the rules of search and seizure and protecting the lives of Americans on board.

Ambassador Gerard's dispatch to the state department contained confirmation of the issuing of these orders and held out the strongest hope not only that the Arabic incident would be disposed of by Germany to the satisfaction of the United States but that an understanding would be reached on the entire submarine controversy.

GUILTY PLEA IN FRAUD CASE

Man Indicted With Tom Taggart Asks to Be Kept In Jail.

Indianapolis, Aug. 27—James (Bud) Gibson, who was indicted with Thomas Taggart, Democratic national committeeman for Indiana; Mayor Joseph E. Bell of Indianapolis, and others charged with election irregularities here in 1914, pleaded guilty to the conspiracy charge in the indictment. His trial had been set to begin next Monday.

Gibson's bond was fixed at $5,000 and he was remanded to the custody of the sheriff. "I want to go to jail for protection," said Gibson, after the court had fixed his bond. "I do not want to be bothered by anyone in connection with these cases now."

Michigan State Fair
Detroit, Sept. 6-15, 1915

"Bigger and Better Than Ever"

Battle in Clouds
The Patterson Aviators will give a thrilling demonstration in armored aeroplanes of this new and terrifying warfare. This battle will be produced nowhere else in Michigan this year.

Automobile Races
Noted drivers of space eating vehicles will attempt to shatter dirt track records. Night automobile racing, an innovation which is attracting thousands to the racing courses in the east, will be inaugurated at the 1915 State Fair. Auto races for women drivers will be featured.

Harness Horse Races
Michigan's best trotters and pacers are entered in the 20 events on the race program. Purses totaling over $14,000 are offered by the State Fair.

Auto vs. Aeroplane
The most daring of the aviators at the State Fair will compete with the driver of the fastest auto. A woman driver also will race with the aviator.

Better Babies' Contest
In addition to the speed contests there will be numerous other noteworthy attractions including a large tractor demonstration, four-day test for dairy cows, builders' exposition, Boy Scouts' congress, fireworks, night horse show, a bigger and better midway, and superb displays of the products of Michigan's farms and factories.

Building Auto in Ten Minutes
Autos will be made on the Fair Grounds. This exhibit will show actual factory scenes, demonstrating how Michigan's industrial plants keep up with the great demand for automobiles.

Machinery Displays
Most modern types of farm machinery, including gasoline engines, cream separators, silo fillers, and other time saving inventions of mechanical experts will attract the attention of Michigan rural residents especially. The display in the machinery building will set a new record for size and the interest it will create.

Automobile Show
The State Fair automobile show will be larger than a year ago when the automobile building was almost filled with the latest models of cars of all sizes, power and prices. The 1916 models of all the leading automobile companies will be exhibited.

BREST LITOVSK TAKEN BY TEUTONIC STORM

Converging Armies Force Russ from Famous Fortress.

Berlin, Aug. 27.—The great Russian fortress of Brest Litovsk has fallen. An announcement by the war office said:

"The fortress of Brest Litovsk has been taken by German and Austro-Hungarian troops. They stormed the works on the western and northwestern front and entered the center of the fortress last night. The enemy thereupon surrendered the fortress."

The Russians are believed to be retreating eastward and northeastward, their right flank protected by the forests to the north and their left flank covered by the marshes that delayed the Austro-German advance from the south.

"While the Austrians under General Von Arz stormed and captured three of the forts of Brest-Litovsk on the western front, German reserves under General Brandenburg stormed the northwestern forts and penetrated the central works during the night," said the official statement. "The enemy then gave up the fortress."

German advance guards have reached Bialystok, the official statement said. The Russians apparently have evacuated the city.

Will Destroy Monroe Wells.

MONROE, MICH. — Upon recommendation of the state board of health, through Engineer Follin, in charge of the investigation of the water supply here, three artesian wells which had been in use in the city since 1874 were found to be so badly contaminated that the pumps will be removed and the wells destroyed.

Lightning Strikes Brothers.

ALPENA, MICH. — Ten hours after his brother, Harry Frederick, a farmer, thirty-two years old, had been struck and killed by lightning, Louis Frederick was rendered unconscious in the same manner. He is still living, however, and his recovery is expected. Harry Frederick, who was killed, had been married but ten days.

CANCER IMMUNITY IS FOUND

Important Discovery Announced by Rockefeller Institute.

NEW YORK — The Rockefeller Institute announces a discovery by two of its investigators whereby immunity from cancer, it is hoped, may be obtained. The investigation was conducted by Drs. James B. Murphy and John J. Morton.

They discovered that in the white lymph cells of the blood there are the necessary factors in making animals immune from cancer. The physicians say a decided increase of the white lymph cells gives absolute immunity. The investigators treated several mice with a serum of lymphoid tissue and say the number of while lymph cells in the animals almost doubled within a few days. The increase of the cells can either be natural or through the injection of lymph tissue.

MILLIONS TO OPPOSE WARS

Henry Ford Says He Will Devote Life to Teach Uselessness of Slaughter.

DETROIT — "I will do everything in my power to prevent murderous, wasteful war in America, and in the whole wrld; I will devote my life to fight this spirit which is now felt in the free and peaceful air of the United States, the spirit of militarism, mother to the cry of 'preparedness'—preparedness, the root of all war."

These words, uttered by Henry Ford, marked the beginning of the life work of the man—to strike with all the power his vast wealth will command at what he declares to be the direct cause of all wars, and everything that breeds war—"preparedness." His wealth and endeavors are to be given to aid the world in its efforts for an unending peace.

Finds His Son With Leg Off.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — When Geroge L. Decker, 22, failed to return home his father, John Decker, started to search for him. He found him early the next morning beside the Grand Rapids & Indiana railroad with his right leg crushed off. The boy still was alive. In company with a friend, he had caught a freight train at Mill Creek at midnight Monday.

His companion alighted safely but when young Decker jumped he fell under the wheels of the train.

PLOT TO WRECK POWDER PLANT

Gary Train Full of Dynamite Is Near Ditch.

GARY, IND. — An apparent attempt to wreck a train carrying enough guncotton to blow up the whole city of Gary was discovered yesterday at the height of excitement which has developed with the secret agaitation and spying revealed in the search for the motive and the murderers in the case of the Rev. Edmund Kayser.

Fifty feet north of the Aetna powder works, three miles east of Gary, the storm center of plots against shipment of war munitions to England, a palpable and malicious effort to derail a train due to leave the works late last night for the east was discovered.

The rivets of a plate holding together the ends of two rails had been pried or chiseled off and the end of one of the rails had been crowbarred about six inches out of line.

The discovery was made before the train started by Anton Sazatoski, an employe of the powder works.

Officials of the mill declared the guncotton was shipped in water holds and no danger would have resulted had the attempt to wreck the train succeeded.

They were of the conviction, however, that there had been a deliberate plot to throw the train off the track by men banded together in work simillar to that which Kayser had openly and enthusiastically pursued.

SIXTY HURT IN "L" CRASHES

Six in Hospitals—Collisions on South Side and "Polly" Lines.

CHICAGO, ILL. — Sixty or more persons were injured in two "L" smashups, and six of them are in hospitals, while many others had to be removed to their homes and are suffering more or less serious injuries. Both accidents were rear-end collisions, the first occurring on the Garfield park branch of the Metropolitan road and the second on the South Side line. Wet rails, making action of the brakes ineffective, is blamed in each case.

The first wreck was between an Aurora, Elgin and Chicago train and a Metropolitan train loaded with persons returning from the amusement park at Forest Park. The Aurora train crashed into it at East avenue, Oak Park. The coaches telescoped and all windows were shattered in the smash, noise of which was heard for blocks. Firemen from the Harrison street fire station rushed to the scene, a bedlam of screaming women and fighting men, and carried many of the injured to the station.

French Airmen Bombard Station.

PARIS. — French aeroplane raids in the Ardennes and in the Argonne are reported. It is said bombs were dropped, inflicting great damage, on the railway station and German barracks at Grandpore and also at Monchemin and Lancon.

MICHIGAN'S STATE FAIR OPENS SEPT. 6

Many Noted Men to Take Part In the Progam.

"Michigan's 1915 State Fair will be the greatest exposition of its kind ever held in the middle west."

So declared G. W. Dickinson, general manager of the State Fair, who asserts that arrangements for the opening on Sept. 6, Labor day, are completed and that for ten days Michigan residents will have an opportunity to note the wonderful agricultural and industrial progress made in this state during the past year.

"We have spared no expense to obtain most interesting and attractive features for the 1915 exposition," said Mr. Dickinson. "There will be speed contests for aeroplanes, automobiles, horses, men, boys and girls. Prizes totaling thousands and thousands of dollars will be awarded the winners.

"There will be numerous other features including the horse show, automobile show, great tractor exhibit and demonstration, battle in the clouds by aviators, girls' milking contest, test for dairy cows, Boy Scout congress, better babies contest, concerts by three bands, big midway, exhibits of fish by the state commission, displays of products and articles from Jackson prison, exhibit of wild fowl, as well as displays of the wonderful products of Michigan farms and factories.

"Men prominent in the state and nation will give addresses at the fair. The exposition will open on Labor day at 8 a. m., but the formal opening is not scheduled to take place until noon. Speakers on the first day will be President Aiken of the fair, Mayor Marx and Henry Ford of Detroit. An effort was made to have Governor Ferris attend the fair on the opening day, but he will not be present until Friday, Sept. 10, which has been designated as Michigan day.

"Senator James Murtha will speak on the first Tuesday, which will be Old Soldiers' day. Former Congressman Denby will also address the veterans of the civil war.

"N. P. Hull, vice president of the fair, will speak on Wednesday, State Grange day. A talk will also be given by John Ketchum of Hastings, master of the State Grange and member of the state agricultural fair commission.

"Grant Slocum of Detroit will be the principal speaker on the following day, when the Gleaners will attend the exposition.

"In addition to the governor, other speakers on Michigan day will be former Governor John T. Rich, ex-president of the Michigan State Fair; Congressman Joseph Fordney, Saginaw; Cong. P. H. Kelley, Lansing; ex-Gov. Fred M. Warner and Congressman Doremus, Detroit.

"Speakers on Saturday, when the children and Boy Scouts will be the honored guests, include men who have been identified with work in which the children and Boy Scouts are interested. The following day Rev. George M. Jennings of Tecumseh will be a speaker.

"Alex Goresbeck of Detroit, former candidate for governor, will talk on the second Monday. Congressman Charles Nichols of Detroit will also be on the program for an address. Tuesday, which is to be Detroit day, will find thousands and thousands of residents of the Michigan metropolis at the fair grounds. Addresses will bo given by Mayor Marx and Charles B. Warren, president of the board of commerce.

"The Battle in the Clouds, to be presented daily by the Patterson aviators, will be a thrilling attraction. Huge armored aeroplanes will give a demonstration of this new and terrifying warfare as it is being carried on in Europe. Two balloons will take part in this battle. A special aviation program will be given Sunday which is Aviation day.

"Speed contests will feature the 1915 exposition. Horse races will open on Labor day and continue for five days. Michigan's fast trotters and pacers will compete in the twenty events on the program. Auto races [illegible]

GERMANY YIELDS TO U. S. DEMAND

Kaiser Had Secretly Yielded Before Arabic Incident.

LAST OUTRAGE BRINGS AVOWAL

Germany Will Now Insist That U. S. Hold Great Britain to "Strict Accountability" in Securing Freedom of Seas—Von Bernstorff Brings News of Settlement.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A visit to the state department by Count Von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, ended all danger of a crisis between the United States and Germany over the Arabic incident. The German ambassador formally assured this government on behalf of the Berlin authorities that Germany will give "complete satisfaction" to the United States if it develops that the commander of the German submarine exceeded his instructions in attacking the White Star liner.

The German ambassador received instructions from his government to convey to the United States assurances of this character and he lost no time in arranging an interview with Secretary Lansing.

Germany Concedes Warning Rights.

This latest German communication contained no disclosure as to the exact character of the instructions issued by the German admiralty to submarine commanders. The ambassador told Secretary Lansing informally, however, that it was his understanding that these instructions forbade German submarine commanders to torpedo passenger vessels without warning and without safeguarding the lives of the passengers.

Secretary Lansing learned from the German ambassador also that he now is entirely confident that the submarine controversy between the United States and Germany will be cleared up by an early understanding between the two governments. In fact, the German ambassador now regards all of these differences between the United States and Germany as on the high road to settlement.

Germany's official promise to give "complete satisfaction" is regarded as pledging more even than a disavowal in the Arabic case. It is taken to mean that Germany will offer reparation in addition to repudiating the act of her submarine commander if it turns out that he went beyond his instructions.

Will Hold U. S. "Accountable" Now.

While everything seems to point closely now to a complete adjustment of the submarine issue with Germany acceding to the principal demands of the United States it is learned here that the kaiser's government is not going to make all these concessions without expecting something in return. The United States stands pledged in its last note to Germany to protect its rights on the high seas by whomsoever violated under any circumstances and at any cost. This government also stands committed to co-operate with Germany for the maintenance of the freedom of the seas.

Germany intends to hold the United States strictly to the letter of this pledge and when she yields to this government on the submarine issue and gives guarantees as to the future she will expect that the United States will make good its word and proceed against Great Britain, with a view to ending the alleged violations of international law against which the United States has complained in connection with the British blockade of Germany. In other words, Germany will expect the United States to take Great Britain severely to task in regard to the British effort to starve Germany insofar as it affects American commercial interests.

Germany Had Already Yielded.

Light is thrown on the reason why Germany concealed her orders to submarine commanders restricting their methods of operation. The Berlin officials feared that the publication of the order would lead immediately to increases on passenger traffic on British liners and more extensive shipments of munitions. There would have been no disclosure of the order had not the Arabic case created a situation which convinced Germany that she must act in order to avoid a break with the United States.

3,000 JEWS HOOT GOVERNOR

Idaho's Executive Assailed by Those Trying to Honor Him.

BOSTON. — Governor Moses Alexander of Idaho, who is attending the conference of governor's was hooted out of Faneuil Hall at the close of a meeting of 3,000 Jews that had gathered to honor him as the only Jew ever elected governor in the United States.

He refused to disclaim an interview in which he was quoted as saying Leo M. Frank should have received no sympathy, that he never would appoint a Jew to office, that Jews would be better off if they paid less attention to money-making and that if there were many Jews in Idaho he would move out.

New Era Forces Referendum.

LANSING, MICH. — The New Era association of Grand Rapids has won the first round in its fight against the Ogg insurance bill, passed by the 1915 legislature, for when the office of the secretary of state closed it had on file more than enough names to send the law to the people at the next general election for a referendum.

GERMAN FORCES ARE NEAR VILNA

Teuton's Advances Kept Up Except in Northern Courland.

RUSSIAN RESISTANCE SHARP

Armies of Von Mackensen and Leopold in South Gain Despite Forests and Flooded Lands—Berlin War Report—Russians Are Pushed Back as Far as Koddubno Line.

LONDON, ENG.—There are no signs yet of any slackening of the German pursuit of the retiring Russians and according to official report issued in Berlin, progress has been made in all sectors of the eastern battle line except that in northern Courland, where the armies of Grand Duke Nichols are offering a stubborn and effective resistance.

From the southeast of Kovno, where the Germans assert they have broken the Russian resistance and must, therefore be approaching Vilna, along the Niemen to Grodno and thence southeastward through the forest of Bieleviezh and along the borders of the Pripet river marshes, the Russians are falling back to new positions.

Mackensen Pounds Ahead.

Farther south the armies under Field Marshal Von Mackensen are meeting with only little resistance, according to the war office, and are advancing apparently even into the swampy region which is so extensive in the district lying south of the Pripet.

It had been expected here that the great Biolowelz forest and the Pripet marshes would serve as a natural barrier against the German advance, behind which the Russians might take shelter.

Such, however, does not seem from the wording of the official statement to be the case.

Berlin War Report.

The Berlin statement follows:

"Army group of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg—Southeast of Kovno the stubborn resistance of the enemy has been broken. Our troops are pursuing the retreating Russians. The wooded region east of Augustowo has been crossed. Rurther south, in our pursuit of the enemy, we reached Dombrova and Grodek, and the sector east of the City of Narew.

"The army group of Prince Leopold —Forces are advancing through the Bialowiez forest in upruslt of the enemy, and has nearly come up with his right wing near Szereszowo.

"Army group of Field Marshal Von Mackensen—After rearguard fighting the Russians were pressed back as far as the Koddubno line on the Prusana road. Troops co-operating with us from south through the marshy region have pursued the enemy and almost reached Kobrin.

"Southeastern theater of war—The Austro-German troops, which defeated the enemy, have driven him back across the Polorzany-KonJuchy-Kozowa line and behind the Koropetz sector."

TWO DUPONT POWDER MILLS ARE BLOWN UP

Explosion Is Supposed to Have Been Caused by Machinery.

WILMINGTON, DEL. — With terrific reports heard for miles two black powder mills of the Dupont Powder company at the Upper Hagley yards, near this city on Brandywine Creek, exploded. Lawrence Cunningham, aged 46, married, of Henry Clay, a suburb, and John Gillespie, aged 35, of Hazleton, Penn., unmarried, were instantly killed.

The cause of the explosion has not been determined. Several hundred pounds of powder of a powerful brand was stored in each mill. The first to explode was a fuse plant which caused the explosion of the second mill near by. The two victims were employed in the fuse mill. Only one body was found. Whether it is Cunningham or Gillespie it is impossible to tell. It is burned and mangled beyond recognition. The second man was blown to atoms, the only remains being recovered being bits of charred flesh hanging in the branches of trees on the opposite side of Brandywine Creek.

While the cause is not known it may have been due to a spark from the machinery or from grit finding its way into the place.

Haiti to Accept Protectorate.

RESEARCH CIRCLE

The Reseaach Circle held their annual midsummer picnic Tuesday afternoon at the farm home of Mrs. Andrew Wilson, there was a large attendance, the ladies going in autos and carriages.

A short business session was held and five new members voted in: Mesdames Leonard Greenwald, A. H. Leukens, Albert Anderson, Irwin Conklin and Floyd Bryan. At the close of the business meeting a fine pot luck supper was was served, after which the ladies soon departed for their homes all voting Mrs. Wilson a model hostess.

The next meeting of the circle will be held at the home of Mrs. J. O. Eaton the first Wednesday in October.

POLE RAISING

Tuesday afternoon Col. A. S. Cummins raised a fine flag staff on the east side of his home on South Union street. It is of steel construction, and was shipped in sections and put together on the ground. Each section being telescoped into the other and riveted together to give it additional strength, it is painted white with a bronze ball at the top. The staff measures 40ft and is imbedded in 8ft of cement, it required 10 or 12 men to erect it. The staff is equipped with regulation U. S. Army halyards, and will fly a regulation army flag.

Tecumseh is fortunate in having a one of its family a retired U. S. Army officer. A man loyal to his home town, to his country and its flag.

The erection of this pole is a good example for others to follow. In these troubulous times we cannot pay to much respect to the flag of the best, the most glorious country on earth.

Will Coller had a litter of puppies in his show window part Shepherd and Collie which attracted much attention. He called them the Collie pups and gave one with each $.8 purchase at his store.

Bargain Day was bright and fair and was a good day for the merchants as they were kept busy all day. In the evening the streets were thronged with people who were visiting with old neighbors and friends and taking in the music of the two bands Clinton and Tecumseh who alternated with their best selections and several times played together both under the leadership of Chas. Skinner.

A telegram was received Wednesday morning by Floyd Waring announcing the drowning of a cousin at Grand Rapids. J. Harvey Smith of the Grand Rapids Street Railway Co., with three others were drowned at Reeds Lake amusement resort Aug 31 as they leaped into the water when the power boat Edna H. careened in making a turn. He was a grandson of Chas. Smith formerly of Tecumseh.

NEW MAJESTIC THEATRE DETROIT

Visitors to the State Fair in Detroit next week will be interested in the announcement that the new Majestic Theatre there will offer the "House of a Thousand Candles" for the week, an attractive story of love, mystery and revenge. The adaption was made by Gilson Willetts from Meredity Nicholson's novel. Other numbers on the program include a topical review of current local and national news events a Pathe travelogue in natural colors, a film comedy, and orchestra and organ selections in great variety. The Majestic gives three performances daily at 2:30, 7 and 9 p. m. and the theatre, on Woodward at Willis, seats 2160 people. It is conceded to be the most beautiful theatre in the state and well worthy of inspection.

Chalmers Six-40

$1350 Seven Passenger

Drive This Car Yourself!

Arrange for a Labor Day Demonstration and Take the Ladies of Your Family Along

The Chalmers Six-40 seven-passenger touring car has the wonderful valve-in-head motor with overhead camshaft which is taking the public by storm just as the same type of motor swept everything before it at this year's speedway races.

The Labor Day holiday offers you the opportunity to drive this car yourself.

Arrange with us for demonstration on that day and take the ladies of your family along.

After all, they are the real judges of style, beauty and comfort in a motor car and will be interested in its artistic "coach" finish, aristocratic fenders and smart wheels.

You're the best judge of its mechanical features.

Step on the Accelerator

Notice the "trigger quick" response.

Feel the thrill as it [illegible] the strength of its 20% more power.

You will realize that you have a real power plant at your command.

Listen to the Motor

It has a healthy purr.

When you get behind the wheel of this car you experience a sensation of having surplus power.

You will gain a genuine affection for both the sound and feel of this motor.

There is nothing like it in any other American stock car.

Ask the Ladies About Comfort

We believe that this is the easiest riding motor car ever built but we are willing to abide by the decision of the ladies after they sit in it, or better still, ride in it.

We already have many demonstrations booked ahead. See us today or telephone for a demonstration appointment.

Then you will understand why the Chalmers Company shipped more cars in July and August than in any two previous months in its history.

New Service to Owners

Every Chalmers dealer now gives to every buyer of a Chalmers car a Service Coupon Book, each coupon redeemable for a definite amount of service at any Chalmers dealer.

The only comparisons ever made with Chalmers cars are made with higher priced cars—either foreign or American. And this is especially true of the Chalmers Six-40 at $1350—the lowest price at which Chalmers Quality has ever been sold.

The Chalmers Club

Every Chalmers owner is invited to join the Chalmers Club. Every member receives regularly without charge "The Chalmers Clubman", and a membership card commending the owner to the courtesies of Chalmers representatives everywhere.

The proceeds were twenty four dollars with six or seven more promised.

GOOD-BYE BLUE MONDAY

I have also seen a lot of women who would rather quit house-keeping than dispose of their bright new METZ WASHING MACHINE we recently installed on a trial basis.

Honestly, one woman told us it was saving doctor bills.

The machine runs quiet, so very simple to operate. You know the wringer can be run at the same time as the washer or either can be run separate.

You can wring the clothes from the machine to the rinsing water, then to the bluing water, then to the basket just by the mere feeding of the clothes to the wringer.

No water to carry out as there is a simple devise to drain the water off.

As for doing clean work, you will simply be surprised to see how clean it washes the clothes without the least chance of tearing.

We want every lady to try a machine and will bring one to you, you can use it for two washing and if satisfied to go back to the old way will call for the machine.

Prices are very reasonable, on time if you wish, from $10.00 up,

GOVERNOR FERRIS HAS A NEW ONE.

SEPTEMBER 5, THRIFT DAY

Lansing, Mich., August 31—Governor Ferris yesterday named next Sunday as "Thrift Sunday," in the following proclamation:

"To the Clergymen and Sunday School Teachers of Michigan:

The American Society for Thrift at a meeting held recently at San Francisco, passed a resolution requesting that the Sunday preceding Labor Day, September 5, be called Thrift Sunday, and that the Clergymen and Sunday School Teachers on that day discuss the subject of Thrift. Fifty years ago there was a practice among the best New England families of encouraging their children to cultivate habits of thrift. Today many American fathers and mothers give to their children money in a haphazard way. The most prosperous and thrifty American of today learned the value of a dollor by earning it when they were boys. Many parents do not realise the importance of giving their children the splendid opportunities they themselves enjoyed when they were boys and girls.

A bank account will help your boys and girls to get the thrift habit and with a deposit of $1. we will lend them a Home savings bank to aid them in saving at home

Make next week thrift week at your house by starting a Thrift Bank account with your children at

MACARONI DINNER

UNCLE SAM'S MACARONI FACTORY ENTERTAINED FOUR LEADING GROCERS OF TOLEDO WEDNESDAY

Auto Trip Enjoyed Later

Uncle Sams Macaroni Co. has many visitors, scarcely [illegible] that they do not have several applications for permission to go through their plant. The management always welcome these visitors and are always ready to show them through and explain to them the various processes by which flour is converted into Macaroni.

Wednesday by invitation G. W. Bankey, Wm. Cost, Chas. Billat and A. Weinandy all of Toledo, together with three of Tecumseh's business men enjoyed the hospitality of Uncle Sam. The three former Toledo gentlemen are leading retail grocers of Toledo and all are officers of the Retail Grocers Association of Toledo, Mr. Weinady is secretary of the association. They reached Tecumseh on the morning train and were guests for the day.

A bountiful three course dinner was served at 12 o'clock noon, at the plant covers being laid for twelve. The dinner was composed entirely of the products manufactured by Uncle Sam and was cooked and served by the employees of Uncle Sams plant. Those present at the dinner were the four gentlemen from Toledo, Messrs. F. D. Avery, Clyde Barber, F. S Turner with H, T. Dunn, C. L. Cuthbert, Edward Anderson, Earl Rector, Arthur Bradley of the Macaroni Co. At each place was one of Uncle Sams menu cards upon which was printed the name of the guest, a paper napkin and a receipt book as favors from the Company.

It was the unanimous opinion at the close of the dinner that there was no question as to Uncle Sam being a good provider, and that each guest carried away more than they were entitled to Following the dinner the guests were escorted through the plant and later were given an automobile ride visiting the Prairie Side celery farm, the Irish hills, the Lakes and Manchester.

The Toledo guests remained in Tecumseh until the evening train, taking in our Wednesday evening program,

CHAUTAUQUA BOOSTERS

Some 18 or 20 autos gaily decorated with streamers and pompons, started out Monday morning to boost the Tecumseh Chautauqua The Tecumseh Band lead the way, and furnished fine music at the various towns visited. The itinerary was through Holloway, Ridgeway, Britton Macon, Clinton, Manchester and Wamplers lake where a stop was made for the fine chicken dinner prepared at the Farm by Landlord Nisle It goes without saying that this dinner was fully appreciated by the hungry boosters.

Leaving Wamplers lake a visit was made to Sand Lake from there to Tipton, and then home to Tecumseh, which they reached about 4:30 p, m. The trip was avery pleasant one and the boosters were well received at each stoping place.

Now if the weather man will only be kind and send in a warm wave for Chantauqua week every one will be truly grateful.

At Sand Lake the band boys were quietly invited to enter the hotel and just as they were ready to give a selection the land lady threw open the dining room door and surprised a party of ladies who dining there. The boys had a box of cigars to console them after this extra effort.

Among the happenings of the day, we understand that E C. Brown and Ernest Daisher collided with the top of their car as they were going over a rough place Mr Brown has a bruised face and Mr Daisher lost a tooth

WEDDING SOLOMIZED AT ST. PETER'S CHURCH WEDNESDAY EVENING AT SIX O'CLOCK

Reception and Wedding Supper Followed at the Home of the Bride's Parents

On Wednesday evening, September 1, at six o'clock, Miss Jane M. Harris, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Theodore C. Harris, and Dr. Verner W. Crane, son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore H. Crane, were united in marriage in St. Peter's church. They were attended by Miss Beatrice Floyd Rawson of Cleveland, Ohio, cousin of the bride, as maid of honor, Dr. Ronald S. Crane of Evanston, Illinois, brother of the groom, as best man, and Mr. Eugene C. Crane of Minneapolis, Minnesota, and Dr. Frederick L. Nussbaum of Evanston, as ushers. Miss Camilla Hayden presided at the organ, and Mr. John Keeney sang as the bridal procession was [illegible] Barnby's familiar wedding hymn, "Perfect Love." The service was read by Rev. Frederick Hewitt, rector of St. Peter's.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with hydrangeas and palms, and the charming setting combined with the lovely day to made the event a most happy one. The bride's gown was of ivory satin draped in Chantilly lace and her tulle veil was caught to the coiffure by a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemum asters. Her maid of honor was gowned in flowered pink taffeta and embroidered net and wore a Castle cap of pink maline and beads. Her bouquet was of pink asters.

The wedding was distinctly a university affair. Both the bride and groom graduated from the University of Michigan in 1911. The groom received the degree of Ph. D. from the University of Pennsylvania last June, and returns to that institution this fall as Research Fellow in History. The best man, Dr. R. S. Crane, is also an alumnus of Michigan and a Ph. D. of Pennsylvania, and is now Assistant Professor of English in Northwestern University. Of the two ushers, Mr Eugene Crane is a member of the department of Agricultuaal Engineering of the University of Minnesota, and Dr. Nussbaum, of the department of History of Northwestern.

Following the ceremony a reception for a limited number of relatives and friends was held at the home of the bride's parents on Pottawotamie street. The wedding supper was served by the Misses Clara Waldron, Elizabeth Cupples, Edith Shull. Minnie Mulvaney, Frances Exelby, Josephine Hayden, Marion Rosacrans, and Elizabeth Widney.

The out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. L. Q. Rawson and daughter, Mrs. L. A. Russell and Miss Russell, of Cleveland; Dr. and Mrs. O. H. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Barnum, and Miss Barnum, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Schloenbach, and Mrs. F. H. Dorr, of Fremont, Ohio; Mrs. H. L. Crane and Mr. Eugene Crane of Minneapolis, Minnesota; Mrs. C. J. Robison and Misses Blanche and Lillian Robison, of Clinton; Miss Etta Gray of Grosse Isle; and Dr. F. L. Nussbaum of Evanston.

On account of the Chautauqua next week, there will be no Bargain Day for Sept. 8. Next special will be on Wednesday the 15.

SCHOOL OPENING

The Tecumseh schools open Tuesday September 7th. Some changes are to be made in the course of study and methods of administration for the purpose of keeping abreast with the times.

The seventh and eighth grades will be administered on the departmental plan as a step towards the "six and six" plan which so many schools are now adopting.

Commercial work will be introduced into the high school. This is not a separate course but it will offer electives in business subjects. It should be taken in connection with the four years work and offers one subject for each of three years with two subjects for the fourth year. Penmanship and spelling, arithmetic, book-keeping, typewriting and stenography are the subjects in order.

Young people who have finished high school or who have left before finishing may wish to study these commercial subjects. Such prospective students should see the surperintendent before school opens.

All students who are first entering high school and those who are not in regular grades should enroll September 4th. The office will be open at 8:30 and 1:00 on that date.

ENTERTAINED

Miss Geraldine Orr entertained a number of little girls west of town last Saturday. Among them were: Hazel, Ora, and Gladys Boyd, Marian Wood Magdelena Gygi, Hilda Johnson and Clara Boehlke. The Misses Dorothy and Frances Weiser of Chattanooga, Tenn., Esther McClelland and Elizabeth Snow were also invited.

NO REQUISITIONS YET IN EASTLAND CASES

Delay of Illinois Authorities Is Puzzling Lansing.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 27.—The absence of any requisition papers here for the four Michigan owners of the steamer Eastland is causing some comment at the capitol.

Almost two weeks have passed since the grand jury of Cook county, Illinois, returned indictments against the men, and two of the boat's officers, who were already within the jurisdiction of the Illinois courts. Within twenty-four hours after the indictments were returned, attorneys, representing Assistant Secretary Roy Davis of Benton Harbor, requested Governor Ferris to grant a hearing and still later Attorney General Fellows was asked the same thing by wire by attorneys for George T. Arnolds of Mackinac Island, president of the St. Joseph-Chicago Steamship company. All were assured that hearings would be granted.

The arrival of requisition papers has been expected almost any day, but none has turned up, and there has been no word from the Illinois authorities regarding them.

The impression here is that efforts of the Illinois officials to get the men back to that state have been abandoned; possibly until the federal grand jury completes its findings.

REIGN OF THE AUTOMOBILE.

It Will Cost This Country This Year Over a Billion Dollars.

On June 1 the number of automobiles in the United States passed the 2,000,000 mark for the first time, which leads the Scientific American to make the following calculation:

"To run 2,000,000 cars for one year requires at the very least 1,000,000,000 (one billion) gallons of "gas," worth $130,000,000; 20,000,000 gallons of lubricating oil, worth $8,000,000; 12,000,000 tires, worth not less than $16 apiece, or $192,000,000; accessories and extra comforts, goggles, gloves and caps at $50 per car, equal $100,000,000; garage charges on short tours (exclusive of gas and oil), $100 per car per year, $200,000,000; repairs made necessary by wear, tear and accident (exclusive of tires), $50 per car per year, equal $100,000,000.

"According to these figures the total running expenses for all the cars in use amount to $730,000,000. Add thereto the value of the 600,000 new cars purchased during the year at an average price of $750, which equals $450,000,000, and we get the immense total of $1,180,000,000 spent in a single year (1915) on the sport of motoring."

Aeroplanes In Warfare.

Without the aeroplane in its numerous forms the present war would have been waged on utterly different lines at almost every point. Either the trench warfare would have been indefinitely prolonged or there would have been an ever recurrent number of surprise attacks, with alternate success and defeats, and a ceaseless shifting of the balance of advantage, and when so many millions of troops were engaged, over fronts of unprecedented lengths, heaven alone knows how the commanders in chief would have controlled their forces or directed their tactics. In any future war no country will take the field without regarding its "fourth arm" as its most precious and indispensable factor.—Charles L. Freeston in Scribner's.

Port Huron Commissioners Threaten Court Action Against Accusers.

Port Huron, Mich., Aug. 27.—At the hearing of temporary injunction proceedings over the sidewalk at the Keewahdin and Gratroit beaches, Commissioners Hill, Monteith and Green in their answer, made a sweeping denial to the charges of conspiracy which had been alleged in the bill of complaint filed by John R. McIlwain. Commissioner Green alleged that George Owen, Detroit alderman, who owns property at Keewahdin beach denied that he had signed the protest against the sidewalk, but favored the project. The alderman's name was signed to the protest and he states that it was not written with his consent.

Commissioner Hill threatens to bring libel proceedings against Mr. McIlwain and the others who filed the bill of complaint.

SAYS BANKERS SEEK RUIN; ASKS $10,000

Peter B. Lennon Adds to Mass of Litigation.

CORRUNA, MICH. — Eight suits are pending as a result of litigation started several months ago against bankers at Lennon.

The litigation dates back to the time when E. Buft Jeaney, of Dowagiac, operated the bank.

The last suit started is for $10,000 by Attorney Peter B. Lennon. He alleges the present bankers are in a conspiracy to ruin his practice. Recently Herbert A. Collins, one of the bankers, asked Governor Ferris to revoke Mr. Lennon's commission as a notary. After an investigation a report was issued vindicating Lennon. More than a dozen lawyers have been retained, including Attorney James Pound, of Detroit, who filed the last suit for Mr. Lennon.

BIG MEN ON HIGHWAY BOARD

Henry Ford, H. P. Joy and R. E. Olds to Aid Good Roads.

LANSING, MICH. — Saturday, September 4th, is to see the completion of the plans for the building of the Wolverine highway from Detroit to Grand Rapids, or as was suggested at a meeting of good roads enthusiasts here, "The Wolverine Paved-way." One million dollars, in round figures, will be necessary to complete the work, this figure being over and above the state reward of $3,400 a mile.

The directorate of the Wolverine Highway Association contains the names of many advocates of good roads along the route of the proposed road, it also is augmented with three men of nation-wide prominence, two of them Detroiters—Henry Ford and Henry P. Joy, president of the Lincoln Highway association. Lansing representatives came to the front with Ransom E. Olds.

Bronze Memorial Is Unveiled to Michigan's First Governor.

MACKINAC ISLAND, MICH. — Paying tribute to the memory of General Lewis Cass, Michigan's first governor, the Michigan state historical commission and Mackinac Island park commission in the presence of Governor Ferris and his staff Saturday unveiled the tablet that is to mark "Cass Cliff," the bluff behind historic Fort Mackinac.

The presentation speech was delivered by Rt. Rev. Monsignor O'Brien, of Kalamazoo, and the tablet was accepted on behalf of the state by Governor Ferris. A stirring eulogy of Lewis Cass was delivered by Edwin Henderson, of Detroit, in a plea for "hyphenless Americanism" in the present world crisis.

Expecting Another Drop.

Some time ago Mrs. Green called on her friend, Mrs. White, and, after clutching, kissing and saying how dreadfully delighted they were to see each other, they turned to the interesting topics of the day.

"By the way," said Mrs. Green after a time, "I haven't heard anything about Eva's divorce lately. I wonder what has become of it?"

"I heard a few days ago that she had dropped all proceedings," answered Mrs. White.

"Dropped all proceedings!" was the wondering rejoinder of Mrs. Green. "You don't really mean it?"

"Yes," returned Mrs. White. "Her husband has taken to aeroplaning, and she has decided to let the thing adjust itself."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

FAMOUS WOMAN AUTO RACER TO APPEAR AT MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

MRS. JOAN CUNEO of Rutland, Vt., recently divorced from her husband, is going to return to the dirt track racing game and will drive at the Michigan State Fair on her second appearance. Mrs. Cuneo was hailed as the foremost woman dirt track driver of America in the early days and drove in the sanctioned meets of the American Automobile association. In 1906 the A. A. A. passed a rule which barred all women drivers from contests or exhibitions and Mrs. Cuneo retired. Her last speed trial was April 17, 1911, when she drove a car over the Long Island motor parkway, where the Vanderbilt races were held, at an average speed of 100 miles an hour for a half mile straightaway with a flying start. This did not count as a record as the A. A. A., at that time the only racing contest governing body, had barred women five years previous.

MEMBERS OF GROSSE POINTE HUNTING CLUB AT THE MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

OWNERS of hunters and jumpers from Detroit and other nearby cities always enter their mounts in competition at the Michigan State Fair. The entries for the 1915 exposition, which will be held at Detroit, Sept. 6 to 15, will be larger than ever before.

BETTER BABIES CONTEST IS BIG FEATURE ATTRACTION AT THE FAIR

PRIZE WINNERS IN BETTER BABIES CONTEST AT 1914 STATE FAIR.

SCORES of babies from all sections of the state are being entered in the better babies contest to be held at the Michigan State Fair at Detroit Sept. 6 to 15. The boys and girls from the rural districts will be judged separately from the babies living in the cities. Prizes will be awarded.

AUTOMOBILE COMPANY'S BAND TO PLAY AT MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

FORD MOTOR BAND.

THE Ford Motor band, one of the musical organizations which will furnish music at the Michigan State Fair at Detroit Sept. 6 to 15, is composed of fifty-six employees of the Ford factory. The band, which is supported and uniformed by the company, is considered the peer of any industrial musical body in the United States. It is in California, where the musicians went by special train to attend the San Francisco exposition. The band will visit several cities in the west and will return to Detroit just previous to the opening of the State Fair.

N. Y. LITERACY TEST KILLED

Constitutional Convention Reverses Its Action of Previous Day.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 27.—By a vote of 77 to 67 the constitutional convention reversed its action of yesterday and rejected the literacy test for voters. It is understood that the fight for the proposal now will be abandoned.

Horseman Drops Dead.

RISKS LIFE TO STOP HORSE

Motorcyclist Chases Runaway Animal Mile Down City Street.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Aug. 27.—In a sensational race for more than a mile down Plainfield avenue Howard Bird, twenty-two years old, risked his life on a motorcycle to stop a runaway horse.

The horse plunged across the Grand Trunk tracks just ahead of a train with Bird following. Before Bird was able to reach the horse's bridle, two wagons had been demolished and several persons narrowly missed being run down.

U. S. Guilty of "Bloodshed."

Saginaw, Mich., Aug. 27.—Resolutions declaring the United States "guilty of the bloodshed" in the European war because it permits the shipment of guns and ammunition to the belligerents, were adopted at the closing session of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

BORDER TROOPS FIGHT MEXICANS

Hot Battle With Bandits Near Brownsville, Texas.

PLANE SEARCHES OUT RAIDERS

Reports Indicate Mexican Band Is Surrounded—Thirty Mexicans Exchange Shots With Civilians Near San Benito—Situation Serious—Revenge for Orozco's Death Sought.

Brownsville, Tex., Sept. 3.—United States troops were engaged in a battle with a strong force of Mexicans eleven miles north of Brownsville, according to a report received here. One Mexican already has been killed. Sixteen of the Mexicans made a running fight with half a company of United States infantry. It is not known whether they escaped.

An army aviator aided in locating the Mexicans for the troops.

Think Mexicans Surrounded.

Detachments of cavalry and infantry have been sent out in every direction and it is probable that the Mexicans are surrounded. The band, which was at least a hundred strong, split up into three parties after the railway bridge 15 miles north of here was set on fire early in the morning, reports from various points indicate. After battles with posses and ranchmen they managed to join forces again.

Exchange Shots With Texas Civilians.

Thirty of the Mexicans exchanged shots for half an hour with armed civilians near San Benito. Reports from that place are to the effect that a concerted attack on the town had been planned, but that the partial failure of the scheme to destroy the railroad bridge prevented it.

A quantity of dynamite wired and ready for firing was found near the bridge. It is thought that the bandits were frightened away before their work was completed.

Situation Most Serious Yet.

The situation is more serious than at any time since the border raids started. Fired with a spirit of revenge for the killing of General Orozco by United States troops, the Mexicans across the line and in Texas as well are in a murderous mood and a general uprising is feared.

GRODNO OUTER FORTS TAKEN BY GERMANS

Russ Hurry Art Treasures from Petrograd to Moscow.

Berlin, Sept. 3.—Grodno's outer forts are in German hands. The fall of the fortress itself is believed near.

As the German drive eastward proceeds with undiminished intensity, Russia is sending all art treasures in the Alexander and Hermitage museums at Petrograd to Moscow. The public has not learned of this transfer. Only three trains a day are now operating from the capital to Moscow where eight were customarily in operation.

The Austrian movement to clear Galicia of hostile troops is being rapidly pressed to a successful conclusion, according to the night's official statement from Vienna.

General von Boehm-Ermoli has captured Brody and his army is advancing east across the frontier.

Further south the army of General Bothma, pursuing the Russians on the Tarnopol-Zborow-Zalosco roads, is driving them toward the Sereth river.

Driven across the heights of the lower Strypa river by the army of General Pflanzer, the Russians have retreated from the Dniester front to its junction with the Sereth. Back of their lines villages on the Bessarabic frontier are in flames.

FIND LAST OF LAKE VICTIMS

Bodies of Four Men Drowned in Reed's Lake Recovered.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 3.—After a 24-hour search, the body of Paris C. Jameson, city editor of the Grand Rapids Press, who was drowned together with Paul Weston and Arthur G. Hunter, also of the Press staff, and J. Harvey Smyth, in Reed's Lake, was recovered by his life-long friend, Henry H. Tinkham, also of the Press staff, who had barely escaped drowning in the same accident. The body of Hunter was recovered earlier in the day by Congressman Carl E. Mapes, a close personal friend of the four.

Funeral services were in charge of Grand Rapids newspaper writers and the Masonic fraternity, all funerals being held at once.

CURED OF CANCER HE FIGHTS TUBERCULOSIS

J. H. Heath, Soldier of War on Plague, Is Stricken.

Richmond, Mich., Sept. 3.—Victor in a fight of several months against cancer, in which he won at the cost of his right leg, J. A. Heath, former general manager of the insolvent Richmond Elevator company, started another battle with death when it was learned that tubercular symptoms had developed.

Accompanied by his wife, who has stood by him through more than a double load of burdens, physical and financial, he has gone to the state tuberculosis sanatorium at Howell.

Dramatic value was added to the parting from his boyhood home by the fact that Mr. Heath had for several years been a trustee of the sanatorium, and, had his health remained unbroken, his term as trustee would have expired one day before he entered it, perhaps never to return. He is in the care of Medical Superintendent E. B. Pierce.

PHONE CALL ROUTS ROBBERS

Ruffians Tie Woman In Home But Are Frightened Away.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Sept. 3.—Two tramps, one gray-haired, aged 50, the other a lad in the teens, appeared at the back door of the residence of Carson Brownell on East Main street at 11:20 o'clock in the morning and being refused food and clothing, forced their way into the house, defended only by Mrs. Brownell, a young woman of 25, tied her to a chair with a clothesline, and sacked the place. The young woman had presence of mind enough to grab the telephone and call central. This frightened the ruffians and they escaped.

A week ago Mrs. Brownell had fed the elder man and given him clothing.

WILSON WITHOUT MILITARY PLANS

President Only Reaches Point of Seeking Expert Advice.

URGES "ADEQUATE" DEFENSES

Naval and Military Departments Asked To Prepare Data After Advising With Experts and Submit Their Conference—Meeting Hasn't Been Held Yet.

Washington, Sept. 3.—With the view of correcting the growing impression that he has committed the administration to a more definite program of national defense development than is actually contemplated President Wilson made public the letters which he wrote to Secretary of the Navy Daniels and Secretary of War Garrison on July 21, asking them to set about the preparation of their reports on the needs of the two services.

Letters Only Commitment.

Emphasis was laid by administration officials on the fact that these letters embody the president's only commitment on the subject of national defense and that they bind him only to a "reasonable and adequate policy." In the letter to Secretary Daniels he asked that the best minds of the navy be consulted, so that with due regard to the present day conditions a program may be formulated which will place the United States navy upon an equality with the most efficient and most practical serviceable.

"Wheher we can reasonably propose the whole of it, (the navy's program) to congress immediately or not we can determine when we have studied it."

The president in the other letter refers to his knowledge of the fact that Secretary Garrison has very definite ideas as to the needs of the army and asks that a program with estimates be prepared as quicety as possible. The only tangible statement in the letter to the secretary of war is the admission of the need for "a proper training of our citizens to arms."

Neither Conference Yet Had.

Both letters emphasize the president's desire to take up the reports of the two secretaries at the earliest practicable moment. It is regarded as significant, however, that neither of the contemplated conferences has taken place, although more than a month has passed since the two letters were despatched from the White House.

NAVAL RESERVE OF 50,000

New U. S. Plan Made Public by Acting Secretary Roosevelt.

Washington, Sept. 3.—Acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt made public plans of the department to build up at once a naval reserve force of 50,000 officers and men.

Former naval officers and former seamen will make up the major part of the force. The rest will be recruited from members of the coast guard, revenue cutter and various other government services.

It is planned to hold a training camp next year similar to the Plattsburg camp.

FRANK JURY FAILS TO INDICT

Cobb County Body Can Get Evidence Against Nobody.

Marietta, Ga., Sept. 3.—The Cobb county grand jury reported that it had been unable to find enough evidence, after a two-days' examination of witnesses, to indict anyone for the lynching of Leo M. Frank. The report stated:

"We have found several clews, but we have been unable to find anyone who could identify any party. We have done our best, under our oath, and we regret to state that we have been unable to find enough evidence to indict anyone for this crime."

Feathers in Place of Wool.

Rome, Sept. 3.—A Verona priest has solved the problem of the scarcity of wool which will be abundantly needed by the Alpine troops during the forthcoming winter campaign. He has discovered a substitute consisting of pressed feathers, the advantage being that they make lighter, warmer and cheaper wool.

Cyclones Ravage Canadian Fields.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 3.—Cyclones did great damage in central northwestern Manitoba. The range of the storm was from Mineota to Hamiota Plumes and Mellville. Fields were swept bare of stocks of hay and grain. Houses and outbuildings were blown over and horses and cattle were killed.

Mob Disbands.

Bowlyng Green, Mo., Sept. 3.—The mob of farmers that threatened the Pike county jail and lynch a negro farm hand, charged with the murder of Dudley Davidson, a farmer, has dispersed.

Named to West Point.

Battle Creek, Mich., Sept. 3.—Edwin McAllister, a member of the 1915 graduating class of the local high school, has received word from Congressman J. M. C. Smith, of the Third congressional district, of his appointment to the West Point military academy.

Buggy Demolished; Driver May Die.

Hastings, Mich., Sept. 3.—While D. C. Watters, a local liveryman was driving across the Michigan Central tracks at Church street, his buggy was struck and demolished by a freight train. Watters was seriously injured internally.

MRS. MOHR HELD FOR MURDER OF HUSBAND

Negroes Confess Doctor's Wife Paid Them to Do Job.

Providence, Sept. 3.—The culmination of the [illegible] holdup of Dr. C. Franklin Mohr's automobile on the Barrington highway, Tuesday night, the fatal shooting of the doctor and the attempted murder of his companion, Miss Emily G. Burger, both of this city, claimed at the time to have been for robbery only, came when the physician's wife, Elizabeth T. Mohr, was arrested on the charge of inciting others to commit double murder, and Geo. W. Healis, the doctor's chauffeur, Cecil V. Brown, a former employe of the physician, and Henry Spellman, half brother of Brown, the three latter colored, were held for murder. The arrests were based upon confessions made by the negroes that they were hired by Mrs. Mohr to kill her husband and badly wounded Miss Burger. Mrs. Mohr was later released on bail.

The negroes, without previous conference, and held separately, made the same accusations against the doctor's wife, neither knowing the contents of the others' statements.

Dr. Mohr's wife separated from him about two years ago because of his alleged attentions to other women, filing a petition for divorce, the doctor filing a counter suit. In his employ was Miss Burger, a handsome young woman, of whom Mrs. Mohr is supposed to have been intensely jealous as shown by her actions and some letters she wrote.

EVELYN WON'T FIGHT CASE

Thaw's Wife Will Permit Him to Get Divorce Decree.

Chateaugay Lake, N. Y., Sept. 3.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw announced that she will permit Harry K. Thaw to divorce her. "I will enter no defense whatever," she said. "This is just what I have wanted for years, and I will be glad when it's over with. I don't want Harry Thaw or his money, but I do want to be left alone to work out my own salvation. The Thaws have been the bane of my life, and I'll never have any luck until I'm separated from them."

CHINA MAY BECOME EMPIRE

Vice President Resigns—Refuses to Favor Change.

Shanghai, Sept. 3.—Li Yuen Heng has resigned the vice presidency of China. His act is interpreted as foreshadowing re-establishment of a monarchy.

Li is said to have informed President Yuan Shi Kai that he would not oppose re-establishment of a monarchy, but would not sign a petition favoring the project. He has been virtually a prisoner in the Forbidden City for months.

Drowns Trying to Save Sister.

New York, Sept. 3.—Before thousands of spectators, 12-year-old Stanley Hewitt lost his life at Coney Island in a struggle to save his 9-year-old sister, Mabel. Life guards brought the pair ashore. Mabel was revived, but after an hour's work the boy was pronounced dead.

Turks Repel Heavy Attacks.

Constantinople, Sept. 3.—Heavy fighting is still in progress on the Gallipoli peninsula and, according to the Turkish war office, the Franco-British forces have again failed to prosecute a successful offensive movement.

Serbia Avoids Greek Complication.

Vienna, Sept. 3.—In order to avoid a conflict with Greece the Serbian government has ordered the evacuation of all Albanian localities within the Grecian sphere of influence.

Hangs Self Over Poor Crops.

Newaygo, Mich., Sept. 3.—Chas. A. Clossen, 61 years old, hanged himself because the frost killed his crops. Added to this he lately lost a team of horses, and was not in the best of health.

Killed Trying to Get Off Train.

Charges Bay Man Threatened Arson.

Bay City, Mich., Sept. 3.—Martin Fitzgerald, 56 years old, laborer, was arrested charged by Thomas Jennings with arson. It is charged that Fitzgerald went to the house where Mary Urban resides and demanded admission and threatened to burn down the house.

POPE ASKS U. S. AID TO END WAR

Plea Is Given President Wilson by Cardinal Gibbons.

CATHOLIC PRELATE HOPEFUL

He Thinks Settlement of Submarine Issue Will Go Long Way Toward Bringing Belligerents to Understanding — Further Developments May Become Known Soon, He Says.

Washington, Sept. 3.—Cardinal Gibbons presented to President Wilson a message from Pope Benedict regarding peace in Europe. Later he saw Secretary Lansing on the same subject.

After his conference at the White House the cardinal announced that he had discussed the possibilities of peace with the president. He said that he had conveyed a message from the pope on the question, but could not reveal the exact contents at this time.

Sees U. S. as Peace Aid.

Cardinal Gibbons declared the settlement of the submarine issue between the United States and Germany had greatly aided the cause of peace and had placed the United States in a very advantageous position to be of service in bringing to an end the conflict abroad. He said he had informed the president that he believed this to be true. [illegible] the cardinal would not go into details regarding his message from the pope, it was indicated that it was in the nature of a suggestion that neutral powers join with the vatican in making further efforts to restore peace. The cardinal said that the plan in mind was along the general lines of recent public discussion of the question in newspapers.

Talk Is Satisfactory.

Cardinal Gibbons was with the President nearly half an hour. He was accompanied by Monsignore William T. Russell, rector of St. Patrick's church here.

"Our talk was highly satisfactory, and I am very much pleased with my reception from the president," said the cardinal. "We went over the entire situation, but I cannot reveal the details of our conversation at this time. Probably more will be made public in the near future."

In answer to inquiries, the cardinal said that he had brought to the president a message from the pope. He added that he wanted to talk with Secretary Lansing on peace and go over the same details he had taken up with President Wilson.

Hopeful in Demeanor.

It was indicated that the basis for his belief was a suggestion that it might be possible to get an agreement between Germany and Great Britain for guaranteeing the freedom of the seas, and in that way to start a discussion of peace terms. The cardinal indicated broadly that he believed negotiations soon would be under way to end the war. He indicated that further developments might become known soon.

Text of Proposal Secret.

Cardinal Gibbons, the secretary of state, and the president declined to reveal the details of the pope's suggestion. It was stated at the White House, in fact, that the president would not discuss the subject at all.

From two official sources, however, it is reported that:

First—Germany will not consider any peace arrangement that does not permit Poland to become an independent kingdom.

Second—Germany will insist the civil freedom of the Jews must be guaranteed.

Third—Germany will demand international agreement providing for the freedom of the seas.

WAR TAKES 425,000 HORSES

Nearly Half Million Animals Sent From U. S. to Europe.

Washington, Sept. 3.—To date 425,000 horses and mules have been shipped out of the United States for the European belligerents and their purchase has been a big boom in the market for medium-class horses, department of agriculture officials say.

Government experts have been watching the records closely and they find that very few high-bred horses have been exported, with the result that prices for ordinary equines have increased.

Ohio Arms Plant Workers Strike.

Youngstown, O., Sept. 3.—Workmen employed in the munitions making department of the William Tod company, manufacturing machinists here, went on a strike for higher wages. Over 100 men engaged in making shells and shrapnel for the allies are affected.

Submarine Sunk at Zeebrugge.

London, Sept. 3.—A coast fort was destroyed, 125 Germans were killed and a submarine sunk in the recent British bombardment of Zeebrugge, says the Amsterdam Telegraaf, according to a Reuter dispatch.

THE CHAUTAUQUA

The Lincoln Chautauqua gave its first session at their big tent Sunday afternoon. At both entertainments that day over 400 people attended in spite of the pouring rain. And a large proportion of them were from the country too. The Conservatory Players gave most [illegible] programs at both sessions and it was a hard matters to pick favorites. Baldy Strang in his Old Colonial costume and also full Highland dress sang old songs and Scotch melodies. His playing of the bag pipe was a revelation, for it is seldom that Tecumseh hears music from this instrument and almost never such excellent music.

In the evening Booth Lowry held his audience well with his lecture, "Simon Says Wig-Wag." He says we are all ruled by tyrants and wig-wag as they direct. The tyrants are style, custom and public opinion. Like the darkey preacher who said: "My text is The World, the Flesh and the Devil, I will skip the first two and go to the third" he only touched on the first two and attacked "The Public Opinion." His lecture was full of wit and humor but through it all was the theme of how we fear public opinion.

We know that all who attended felt well repaid in spite of wet feet and soaked clothing.

Yesterday at both sessions Mason's Jubilee Singers pleased their audiences with plantation melodies and readings.

Col. G. A. Gearhart lectured in the afternoon on "The Progress of the Age" and in the evening "The Coming Man." He is an excellent speaker and met with frequent applause.

Buy season tickets for that will help the guarantors and if they do come out "in the hole" it will be difficult to find backers to guarantee us a Chautauqua next year.

It is not too late to buy season tickets and by so doing assure yourself of several days excellent entertainment. The tent is water tight, a sidewalk has been built into it from the main walk assuring a dry passageway. So everything is dry and comfortable.

Weather conditions look [illegible] the rest of the week, so come to the rescue and help out the committee by buying a season ticket

HENDERSHOTT REUNION

Thursday, September 2, 1915 the Hendershott clan numbering about 70 met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Hendershott for their first reunion. The day was a pleasant one, and people came from far and near for this occasion.

Michael Hendershott Jr. had not been at home in 28 years. After a bountiful dinner the hours were passed in social visiting recalling scenes of long ago.

SPECIAL DAYS WILL FEATURE THE STATE FAIR

Something Different Every One of the Ten Days.

ADDRESSES WILL BE GIVEN.

Prominent Men on Speaking Program. Friday Will Be Michigan Day—Governor Ferris and Congressman Kelley Expected to Be Present—Old Soldiers Have Special Day.

Every day will be a feature day at the Michigan State Fair.

G. W. Dickinson, general manager of the big exposition, which will be held at Detroit Sept. 6 to 15, announces that beginning with the grand opening there will be some special attraction for every one of the ten days of the Fair.

The exposition will open on Labor day, and addresses upon the great role labor is playing today in the progress of the United States will be given by prominent men.

Special Day For Old Soldiers.

Tuesday will be Patriotic and Old Soldiers' day. The Patterson aviators will present a patriotic program with their aeroplanes, and speeches will be given. Special fireworks will bring the day to a close.

Wednesday will be State Grange day, and Thursday will be Gleaners' day. Men prominent in the two farmers' organizations will deliver addresses, and special exercises will be arranged and presented by the orders.

Friday will be Michigan day. Governor Ferris will make an effort to be present, and Congressman P. H. Kelley is also expected to attend the Fair on that day. Other men prominent in the state and nation will be speakers.

Saturday will be Children's and Boy Scouts' day. Appropriate exercises will be given by the children. Various contests have been arranged for the Boy Scouts, and prizes will be awarded. Athletic events and tournaments for boys and girls will also feature Saturday.

Sunday is to be Aviation day. The Patterson aviators will dive, dip and drop headlong toward earth with their aeroplanes and give a thrilling demonstration of warfare as it is being carried on over the battlefields in Europe. Mrs. Joan Cuneo, famous auto driver, will compete in a one mile race against an aeroplane. She will also make an effort to lower the dirt track records for one, five and ten miles.

Auto Races Sept. 13 and 14.

Monday will be W. C. T. U. day. Prominent members of the union will give addresses. The auto races will open on the second Monday. Louis Disbrow, Farmer Bill Endicott and several other noted pilots of space eating machines will race on Monday as well as Tuesday, which is designated as Detroit day. Mayor Marx will issue a proclamation requesting the citizens of the metropolis to attend the Fair on Sept. 14.

Wednesday will be Canadian day and the grand finale. On the closing day many residents from across the border are expected to attend the big exposition and note the progress made by Michigan in the industrial and agricultural world.

PLANS TO MAKE 1915 STATE FAIR BEST IN HISTORY

General Manager Dickinson Announces Features.

TO CELEBRATE LABOR DAY

Organizations From All Over Michigan Invited to Be Present—High Class Attractions Are Secured For the Big Exposition.

"The 1915 State Fair to be held at Detroit, Sept. 6 to 15, will be the greatest exposition of its kind ever held in Michigan," declared General Manager G. W. Dickinson today while discussing the arrangements which have been made to secure the best and highest type of attractions for the Fair.

"We have spared no expense to make the 1915 Fair the best in the history of the state. There will be features for the person who likes thrills as well as educational exhibits, automobile races, better babies' contest, scores of high class attractions on the Midway, horse show and horse races, milking contest for girls and various other attractions too numerous to mention.

Farmers Show Interest.

"Of course the exhibits in the live stock and agricultural departments will attract the attention of the city as well as rural residents. Entries are being made much earlier than usual by the exhibitors, and I believe that the entries will total more than ever before. The farmers and stock breeders are taking an active interest in the fair, and there will be keen competition in every department for the thousands of dollars which we will award as prizes.

"We are making special plans to celebrate Labor day this year. Labor day opens the Fair, and we want the labor unions from throughout the state to come to Detroit on Sept. 6 and assist us in celebrating the occasion. In addition to all the regular features of the Fair, we will have a special Labor day program and are now attempting to secure a speaker of world reputation to give the Labor day address."

Her Vague Views.

"I asked for alimony of $50 a week. I see women are getting that right along."

"But, madam," expostulated the lawyer, "your husband is earning only $12."

"What's that got to do with it? I thought the government provided the alimony."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Standing Order.

"Before we were married he had a standing order with a florist to send me a bunch of roses every morning."

"And since marriage?"

"He has a standing order with an employment agency to send me a cook."—Judge.

Age asks with timidity to be spared intolerable pain. Youth, taking fortune by the beard, demands joy like a right. —Stevenson.

BARRETT HOTEL

The town people were surprised enough in April 1908 when they heard that W. E. and H. L. Barrett, a rail road man and a barber, were negotiating for the Lilley House. The deal went through and the brothers came into possession of the big 3 story hotel both building and business. Many [illegible] would be short lived as neither men knew a thing about that line of business. The new firm took possession April 20, 1908 and the first step they took was to vacate the large corner room used as an office and lease it to the Tecumseh State Savings Bank. The store next west which also was a part of the hotel was then opened as the office, but finally the large dining room was divided and the end next to Evans street made into the office leaving the room facing Chicago street for a lunch room. A year ago the dining room was beautifully decorated and new rugs laid and with the excellent service it a most attractive place.

Those who had foretold a quick failure had to concede their error in misjudging the business ability of the Barretts this year when they purchased the Keyser stores which join the hotel at the north. After redecorating the front part of the smaller store has been converted into a sample room, the back part being fitted up with billiard and pool tables. A large arch joins this room with the south store which is now used as a gentlemen's lunch room.

The store around on Chicago street they have arranged as a ladies lunch room and public rest room. The walls have been painted green, the ceiling a Japanese white and green velvet rugs cover the floors. Easy chairs, writing desk and settees are ready for the weary traveler and dainty toilet rooms are at your service.

Last Saturday this lunch room was opened to the [illegible]'s orchestra of Adrian and John Pennington furnished delightful music throughout the afternoon and evening and about the whole town strolled in to congratulate [illegible] their wives and thank them for doing such a fine thing for the town for this rest room fills a big want.

Tables are scattered around the room where lunches will be served and everyone is welcome.

AS TOM TOLD IT

An Old Tecumseh Boy Interviews His Old Friend the Reporter.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Lowry motored through from Ann Arbor last Tuesday and spent the day with his mother Mrs. A. Lowry, Wednesday they went to Adrian for the Westerman-Kidman wedding, later Mr. Lowry took the Newly weds over the Irish hills and around the lakes bringing up at Devils Lake where they will spend the month of September, after which they will be at home in Ann Arbor. Mr. Westerman being a member of the faculty of the U. of M. School of Music.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowry returned to Tecumseh Thursday and Friday morning they started on a trip to San Francisco, Cal., for the exposition. They will make several stops on the way especially at Glenwood Springs, Colo., where they will spend a week for the meeting of the $200,000 club of the New York Insurance Co. They make the trip on the Santa Fee and will return via Grand Canyon.

What Tom did not tell us was that he was No. 11 among 5,000 insurance agents and was made an honorary member of the $100,000 club which meets immediately after the $200,000 club. He will also be a guest of the company at the Worlds Insurance Congress of life insurance writers held in San Francisco. Knowing Tom since he was a mere boy, we have watched his career with pleasure and wish he may have a fine trip. Tecumseh is famous for her successful young men.

On Prisoners of War.

With reference to the modern treatment of prisoners of war, it is interesting to recall the views which R. L. Stevenson in his novel, "St. Ives," puts into the mouth of a French prisoner of war in Edinburgh castle, which was turned into a military prison in the time of Napoleon. He says: "There is a horrible practice in England to trick out in ridiculous uniform and, as it were, to brand in mass, not only convicts, but military prisoners and even the children in charity schools. I think some malignant genius had found his masterpiece of irony in the dress which we were condemned to wear—jacket, waistcoat and trousers of a sulphur or mustard yellow and a shirt of blue and white stripe cotton."—London Standard.

Import Half a Million Birds.

About 500,000 live birds are imported to the United States every year, including about 1,[illegible] species, of which canaries, parrots and game birds are the most numerous. No birds can be imported without a permit from the department of agriculture, which issues about 500 a year.—New York World.

Up to Date.

"How's the story you are writing getting along, Robbie?"

"Fine! Just now there's an awful storm, and every one aboard is afraid the boat 'll go to the top."

"You mean to the bottom."

"No, I don't; this boat's a submarine."—Boston Transcript.

His Claim an Empty One.

"Isn't it funny how Bounderby delights in claiming he's a self made man?"

"Yes, and there's nothing in it. His wife selects his clothes, his mother-in-law regulates his hours and his wife's sister supervises his manners."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Hog Item.

The Chinese claim that they bred and domesticated hogs 4,000 years before the Christian era, but in all of that time the manners of the hogs have not improved.—Atchison Globe.

Of Course.

Judge (of divorce court)—Aren't you attached to your husband? Plaintiff—Certainly. I came here to be detached.—Boston Transcript.

TWO MORE ARRESTED

Gerald Kent for whose arrest a warrant had been issued several days ago for burglarising several stores here, was picked up in Dundee Saturday by Deputy Sheriff Fluher as Kent in company with four others alighted from a freight train. Dept. Smith was notified and went to Dundee for the boy. He was arraigned before Justice Hosmer and bound over to appear in his court September 8th. Kent confessed to having broken into Kenneth Hay's bakery twice, Satterthwaite Bros.' hardware, the Coller House twice, Will Coller's store and also into Overmeyer's store at Rea.

He had a strange assortment of goods on his person and told where a lot more could be found buried near the macaroni factory.

Saturday afternoon Dept. Smith arrested Leon Snyder on the charge of breaking into stores and stealing goods. He took the boy before Justice Hosmer and he too was bound over to appear before the justice September 8th. He asked to go to his home for his coat and shoes and Mr. Smith kindly took him up there. He let him go into the house unaccompanied and the fellow rushed right through the house and out the back door and that was the last our deputy saw of him. The freight cars and surrounding buildings were thoroughly searched and Smith had to return to the business portion minus his prisoner.

Monday noon Dept. Smith heard that Snyder was home and picked him up. He watched him this time carefully and took him to Adrian where he now has time to think things over.

BRIDGE PARTY

Mrs. Eugene Harris entertained at Bridge last Thursday afternoon in honor of Miss Gray of Grosse Isle. Those enjoying her hospitality were Mesdames C. F. Patterson, L. [illegible] Hayden, F. B. Wood, Margaret Garlinghouse, Will Hicks, Raynor Anderson, F. S. Anderson, A. S. Cummins, Harry Moore, A. D. Lawrence, F. G. Lewis, J. F. Hicks, Rev. and Mrs. Frederick Hewitt and F. B. Wood.

The out of town guests were Miss Gray of Grosse Isle, Mrs. Rathbun, Toledo and Dr. Winnifred DeWolf of Detroit. The prize was awarded to Mrs. A. S. Cummins.

A three course dinner was served, Mrs. Mary Ives and Miss Anna Carson assisting in the serving.

VALENTINE THEATRE TOLEDO, OHIO

What promises fair to be the greatest season in the history of the Valentine Theatre, Toledo, will begin Friday and Saturday, September 10-11 when the new mystery farce, "Seven Keys to Baldpate" plays the house. Saturday matinee will be given.

The offering is the work of the versatile George M. Cohan and is produced by Cohan & Harris. It is a dramatization of the novel of the same title by Earl Derr Biggers. It ran for a solid year in New York and a like period in Chicago, and is now taking the road for its first general tour.

Critics have styled the offering "a melodrama brought close to the point of burlesque, but with a refinement of humor and a delicacy of satire that is irresistible." It tells the story of an American novelist who wagers that he can write a 10,000 word story in 24 hours. His only stipulation is that he be allowed to work in "the loneliest spot on earth."

The novelist find his choice of locations in the abandoned summer hotel of an exploded mountain resort. He begins work and straightway is beset and encompassed with a series of the most amazing experiences and the most amazing people that have ever been on the stage. The element of mystery is preserved until a few seconds before the fall of the final curtain.

"Seven Keys to Baldpate" is one of the most widely heralded of the metropolitan successes of last season. It should prove rare entertainment for the opening of the Valentine's standard dramatic season.

EVOLUTION OF SHORTHAND.

Modern Stenography Had Its Start In the Time of Cicero.

To the average person the idea of shorthand writing is generally considered as being modern, because of the rapidity with which it has been introduced into business life in this country. This is not the case, however, for history traces the use of a similar art with definiteness back to the time of Cicero, about 70 B. C. The invention is sometimes credited to Cicero and sometimes to his secretary, Tullius Tiro.

Nothing seems to be known of any other system of shorthand during the Greek or Roman ascendency nor for fifteen centuries afterward. The first of the noted systems at the beginning of the present era of shorthand was that of Timothy Bright, whose treatise was dedicated to Queen Elizabeth. In 1600 Peter Bales brought out a system similar in some respects to Bright's, but which was difficult to memorize.

The next system to indicate progress appeared twelve years later, by John Willis, which was called "The Art of Stenography or Short Writing by Spelling Characterie." Then came Edward Willis, Jeremiah Rich, William Mason, Thomas Gurney, as well as many others. All of these systems had many defects, and the entire idea was rejuvenated when in the early part of the nineteenth century Isaac Pitman, who afterward was knighted, presented his system, which is still in use and which has been the foundation for most of the systems now practiced.—Exchange.

Sting of the Jellyfish.

The stinging threads of the common jellyfish are not strong enough to pierce the ordinary human skin, but Mr. S. F. Light, in describing Philippine medusae, notes that the sting of the tentacles is very dangerous. Swelling and inflammation begin almost immediately, blisters form, the heart action is impaired, respiratory spasms and nervous twitchings of the muscles ensue, and there is intense general pain. The natives of Palawan reported that the sting may be fatal. The native remedy is sugar solution taken internally and applications of vinegar externally.—London Globe.

PAIGE
The Standard of Value and Quality

Hollywood Model
Five Passenger "Six-36"
$1095

This New Light Six For $1095—And a True Paige at That

Your dream has come true.

You have marveled at the beauty, the quality and the extraordinary value of Paige cars and you have declared—

"If I could buy for approximately a thousand dollars a five-passenger Six that embodied all the essential qualities that have made the name Paige famous, I would join the great army of joyous Paige owners with alacrity."

Paige officials understood your desire and your special needs and in producing the new Paige Light "Six-36" at $1095 they have realized your ideal.

Here it is, a five-passenger Six—and a true Paige inside and out, from radiator cap to tail light.

To be a true Paige—"Every Inch a Paige"—means that this new Light Six, in spite of its low price, has that ease of riding, that simplicity of control and that ample power and engine capacity and flexibility that have always made the Paige a distinctive car.

There has been no skimping in this Light Six. Note the real Pantasote top; note the beauty and quality of the body finish.

There are no substitutions. Just as the leather in the upholstery is real leather, so is every other feature genuine.

Characteristic Paige economy of operation is there, for the new Light Six weighs only 2600 pounds.

Come in and examine your ideal and discover the facts for yourself.

Remember, it is by no means difficult to manufacture a car for a price.

It is, however, quite a different thing to produce a car of one hundred point excellence and still maintain a selling price to the consumer which is not prohibitive.

There you have the true essence of the Paige Idea.

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF MICHIGAN

"Greeting"

Michigan State Fair is of interest to every ambitious man and women in Michigan. This Fair affords an opportunity for becoming acquainted with our own State.

"This year, of all years, a vigorous effort will be put forth to make every feature of this great exhibition educative and inspiring. The old-time Fourth of July fair is a thing of the past. Entertainment at fair, without exhibition of man's worth while productions, is no longer in demand.

The State Fair will represent Michigan at her best, and that means that patrons will get "value received."

Furthermore, all visitors from countries outside of Wayne will, in attending the Fair, visit Detroit, one of the most prosperous, beautiful and wonderful cities in the United States. This of itself is worthy of enthusiastic consideration.

"I, Woodbridge N. Ferris, Governor of Michigan by special request, designate September tenth as Michigan Day at the Michigan State Day, and most heartily recommend that our citizens who can only make a one day visit to the Fair, attend on this particular day."

WOODBRIDGE N. FERRIS, GOVERNOR

NATURE AND THE MICROBE.

How the Nose and the Stomach Fight Disease Germs.

The thoughtful reader will say, "Surely, in the battle of man against microbe there must be some natural means of defense by which man have conquered in the past, long before the microscope was invented." He is right, and science is never better employed than in studying these natural defenses. For example, we find no microbes at all in air just after it passes through the healthy nose. The nose is the original "domestic filter" for all microbes in dust in the air. Its secretions are antiseptic also, and man has no more valuable outwork of defense than a normal nose. A choked nose, through which a person cannot breathe, means that microbes enter the lungs freely by way of the filterless mouth.

In the stomach we find free hydrochloric acid, produced some half hour or less after a meal. Its production from the common salt, or sodium chloride, of the blood by the living cells that line the stomach is one of the wholly inimitable feats of the body. Until recently most of us thought that the hydrochloric acid was formed in the stomach solely in order to digest food, but now we have evidence to show that this hydrochloric acid is also a valuable antiseptic, working, for once, inside the body without hurting it and probably often saving us from the microbes of consumption and typhoid fever.

Thus the two great avenues of entry to the body are in a large degree guarded. It may be added that no known microbe can, unaided, penetrate the surface of the unbroken and healthy skin.—Dr. C. W. Saleeby in Youth's Companion.

PANAMA OF CHIEF ADVANTAGE TO AMERICA

The American flag in the coast-to-coast trade will continue to float securely and proudly at Panama so long as the historic coastwise law remains unchanged. A year ago, in August, 1914, an effort to uproot it was overwhelmingly defeated in Washington. Those is this country and abroad who urged the repeal insisted that when the Canal was opened not enough American ships would be forthcoming even for the coastwise commerce, and that foreign ships would have to be employed. That this was an error is now demonstrated by experience. American ships in coast-to-coast trade have proved to be numerous and adequate. Freight rates from coast to coast have been substanstantially reduced; a great new commerce is developing.

Throughout this abnormal year of war, American shipowners of the Atlantic-Pacific fleet could have enriched themselves by abandoning their proper services and chartering all their ships at unexampled rates to carry foodstuffs and munitions to Europe. But they have not done this; they have occasionally employed thus only a few spare vessels; every one of the chief services has been steadily maintained. These shipowners have honorably recognized that their first duty was to their own flag and to their own countrymen.

The war has disrupted many and disturbed all of the accustomed routes of ocean commerce, but it has undoubtedly shaken least of all the new Panama carrying between the two coasts of the United States. The Panama Canal in its first year has benefited most of all the commerce and the shipping of the people whose wealth and resolution have created it.—From "The First Year at Panama," by Winthrop L. Marvin, in the American Review of Reviews for September.

Wide Spread Cloverleaf Spreader

Never in our experience in the Implement business have we seen a Farm Tool give the general satisfaction as this spreader. The International Harvester Co. have built this spreader perfectly as far as light draft, simple construction, low box, wide spread 12 in. wide, recently took first premium at World's Fair.

We have so far sold 24 new spreaders this season and have ordered another car. This alone shows the reception this spreader is meeting with the farmers.

There are simular machines but none just like it; please bear this in mind and examine closely as you will readily see the different advantages in favor of the CLOVERLEAF.

GALA DAY

On Wednesday, September 15th Gala Day. Make our store your headquarters, will have room for a lot of rigs to tie on our yards; of course this is free, away from the crowd. Be sure and come for all day as this will be the BIGGEST day Tecumseh has seen for many a year.

GOVERNOR FERRIS HAS A NEW ONE.

SEPTEMBER 5, THRIFT DAY

Lansing, Mich., August 31—Governor Ferris yesterday named next Sunday as "Thrift Sunday," in the following proclamation:

"To the Clergymen and Sunday School Teachers of Michigan:

The American Society for Thrift at a meeting held recently at San Francisco, passed a resolution requesting that the Sunday preceding Labor Day, September 5, be called Thrift Sunday, and that the Clergymen and Sunday School Teachers on that day discuss the subject of Thrift. Fifty years ago there was a practice among the best New England families of encouraging their children to cultivate habits of thrift. Today many American fathers and mothers give to their children money in a haphazard way. The most prosperous and thrifty American of today learned the value of a dollor by earning it when they were boys. Many parents do not realise the importance of giving their children the splendid opportunities they themselves enjoyed when they were boys and girls.

A bank account will help your boys and girls to get the thrift habit and with a deposit of $1. we will lend them a Home savings bank to aid them in saving at home

Make next week thrift week at your house by starting a Thrift Bank account with your children at

Your "Funny Bone."

When you bump your nose or chin you bump the flesh and bone and not a nerve. Consequently you feel a sensation of pain just where the blow was struck. If you strike the point of your elbow it will be just the same. It's only when you strike that little hollow between the big central bone of the elbow and the little inside bone that the tickling, tingling sensation is felt. In the little hollow you strike one of the large trunk nerves that spring between the vertebra at the base of the neck and run through the arm to the wrist. In the hollow of the elbow the nerve lies over a bone. When you strike that spot you feel a tingling sensation which isn't exactly funny, but because it tickles the bone is called the "funny bone."—Milwaukee Journal.

First Sea Signals.

Richard I. when he set sail for the Holy Land found his flag and his patron saint provided for him by the church—St. George and his red cross on a white ground. But Richard floated another banner at the masthead—a red flag with three gold lions. The king's ships of those early days carried these two as well as a streamer. Signaling by means of flags gets its very first mention in 1350—"When it shall please the admiral to assemble the captains and masters of the fleet he shall carry high in the middle of the mast of his ship a banner of council."—London Chronicle.

Gold.

The specific gravity of gold is 19.50—that is, it weighs nineteen and a half times as much as its own bulk of water. The ductility and malleability of this metal are equaled by no other. By ductility is meant the property of allowing itself to be drawn out into a wire and by malleability its property of flattening without splitting under the hammer.

A UNIQUE RECORD

Very Few Like It In Our Broad Republic.

Home Testamony for Doan's Kidney Pills published in every locality, is of itself convincing evidence of merit. Confirmed testimony forms still stronger evidence. Years ago a citizen of Tecumseh gratefully acknowledged the benefit derived from Doan's Kidney Pills. The statement is now confirmed—the proof more convincing. Cases of this kind are plentiful in the work of Doan's Kidney Pill's—the record is unique.

Geo Chaplin, carpenter, N. Ottawa St., Tecumseh, says: "My kidneys were disordered and made me miserable. Knowing of several people in this vicinity who had used Doan's Kidney Pills with sucess, I got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's drug store and began using them. The results were very satisfactory. I am in hopes that other kidney sufferer will profit by reading of my experience. I willingly confirm the statement I gave before praising Doan's Kidney Pills."

TWENTY EVENTS ON RACE PROGRAM

Michigan State Fair Purses Total Over $14,000.

HORSEMEN ARE INTERESTED

General Manager Dickinson Says Michigan Short Ship as Well as Grand Circuit Stables Will Be Represented at Detroit.

The fastest trotters and pacers in Michigan as well as other states in the central west will be attracted to the State Fair this fall by purses totaling more than $14,000. The speed program will open the Fair on Labor day, Sept. 6, and continue for five days.

General Manager G. W. Dickinson of the State Fair asserts that he has been assured by scores of horsemen that they will have their strings at Detroit during the Fair, and close competition in the twenty races on the program is expected.

Not only will the Michigan Short Ship Circuit be represented at the State Fair races, but it is expected that many of the Grand Circuit trotters and pacers will compete for the purses which have been hung up.

"The State Fair is for the people of Michigan," declared Mr. Dickinson, "and we want the Michigan horses represented at our races. While some Grand Circuit horses undoubtedly will be brought to Detroit this fall, a majority of the entries will be made by Michigan owners and drivers."

Half Mile Track Used.

The races will be staged on the half mile track, thus assuring the spectators of a better opportunity to see the speedy equines. The entries for the State Fair races will close Aug. 24.

The race program the first day, Sept. 6, includes the 2:30 trot, 2:20 pace, 2:24 pace and 2:08 pace. Purses of $600 each will be awarded in all events but the 2:24 pace, which will be a $1,000 stake.

The $1,000 purse event the second day is the 2:18 pace. The winners in the 2:12 trot, 2:16 trot and 2:14 pace will receive $600 purses.

The $600 events on the third day are the 2:10 pace, 2:16 pace and 2:15 trot for three-year-old speedsters. One thousand dollars will be distributed among the winners in the 2:18 trot.

The 2:12 pace and 2:24 trot are $1,000 events on Sept. 9. Six hundred dollar purses are announced for the 2:20 pace and 2:22 trot.

The 2:14 trot is the $1,000 purse race on the final day of the horse racing, while the $600 events are the 2:22 pace, 2:10 trot and free for all pace.

WILD FOWL AND FISH ARE TO BE SHOWN AT FAIR

Various Kinds of Game Birds Will Be Exhibited.

COMMISSION TAKES ACTION.

State Board Decides to Allow Fish to Be Displayed In Aquariums at Big Exposition, Which Will Be Held at Detroit, Sept. 6 to 15.

Two exhibits which will be of special interest to sportsmen will be features at the Michigan State Fair, which will be held at Detroit Sept. 6 to 15.

G. W. Dickinson, general manager of the big exposition, announces that the Michigan Fish Commission will have a big display at the Fair, while an exhibit of live wildfowl has been obtained from New Jersey.

To Display Fish In Aquariums.

The fish will be displayed in large aquariums through which water will be flowing at all times. There will be nearly fifty varieties or species of fish, including the beautiful speckled trout, several kinds of bass, pike, sunfish, perch and other fish found in Michigan waters.

A feature of the exhibit will be a display showing the various stages in the life of a trout from the egg to the full grown fish. The Fish Commission has many beautiful specimens of rainbow trout.

The fish exhibit will be shown under the grand stand, and carpenters and plumbers are now arranging the aquariums in which the fish will be placed.

Members of the Michigan Fish Commission who decided to make an exhibit at the State Fair are W. J. Hunsaker, Saginaw, chairman; Fred Postal, Detroit, and John C. Mann, Houghton.

Cement Pond For Water Fowl.

Swans, storks, mudhens, ducks, geese, pheasants and various other varieties of wildfowl and game birds found in North America as well as Europe and Asia will be displayed in an inclosure near the Dairy building. A similar exhibit attracted considerable attention a year ago at the Fair, but will be much larger this year. A cement pond 10 by 20 feet is being constructed for the water fowl which will be brought to Detroit by William Cook & Sons of Scotch Plains, N. J.

STATE FAIR AUTO SHOW TO BE GREAT SUCCESS.

Practically All Companies to Be Represented at Exposition.

G. W. Dickinson, general manager of the Michigan State Fair, asserts that practically every company in the United States which builds motorcars will be represented at the auto show to be held in connection with the big exposition at Detroit Sept. 6 to 15.

"The latest models will be on exhibition, and prospective purchasers will have an opportunity to get a line on all the new creations of the manufacturers several months before the auto shows in New York and Chicago," said Mr. Dickinson.

"Building of autos on the grounds will be another feature which will attract attention. The Ford Motor Company Band will render concerts in the automobile building. I believe that the auto show will be one of the big attractions of the Fair."

Features For Midway.

The State Fair Midway will be bigger and better than ever this year, according to General Manager Dickinson, who has already completed arrangements for several of the attractions. The shows will be high class and clean and will be worthy of patronage.

MANY ENTRIES IN THE DAIRY DEPARTMENT OF MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

Assistant Superintendent Asserts Farmers Are Greatly Interested in the 1915 Exposition.

George H. Brownell, editor of Brownell's Dairy Farmer and assistant superintendent of the dairy department of the Michigan State Fair, declares that entries in his department surpass all previous records.

"Dairymen from throughout the state, as well as manufacturers of dairy machinery, are displaying unusual interest in the 1915 State Fair," asserted Mr. Brownell while discussing the plans which are being made to make the State Fair the greatest exposition of its kind ever held in the middle west. "There will be features this year which will attract the attention of all farmers, and dairymen especially. Every man who has a few dairy cows should attend the Fair, which will be held at Detroit Sept. 6 to 15, if he wants to become acquainted with the latest improved methods for conducting the dairy business."

GEORGE H. BROWNELL, ASSISTANT SUPERINTENDENT OF DAIRY DEPARTMENT.

SIX NATIONAL CATTLE CLUBS OFFER PRIZES.

Special Awards Will Be Made at Michigan State Fair.

The importance of the Michigan State Fair cattle exhibit is revealed by the fact that six national cattle breeders' associations have offered special premiums and awards for prize winning cattle at the big exposition which will be held at Detroit Sept. 6 to 15.

The American Shorthorn Breeders' association offers nearly $400 in specials in twenty-six different classes. These prizes are included with the premiums which will be awarded by the State Fair, making a total of more than $1,000 that will be distributed among the prize winners in the Shorthorn class. In addition special prizes including silver cups, are awarded by the American Shorthorn Breeders' association to the owners of the best bull and heifer calves less than a year old and owned by exhibitors who have not previously exhibited Shorthorns at the State Fair.

The American Hereford Cattle Breeders' association offers special cash premiums totaling $200 for the best specimens of its breed in twelve different classes.

The American Jersey Cattle club again will award special premiums, but announcement of them will not be made until later.

Special premiums for the grand champion cows of their respective breeds will be awarded by the Ayrshire Breeders' association and the Brown Swiss Cattle Breeders' association.

A special prize of $100 will be awarded to the Michigan cattle association for the first fifty head of pure bred cattle. If 100 or more are shown by an association this award will be increased to $300.

An Apparition

A Story of the Great European War

By F. [illegible]

During one of the incursions of the Russian armies into German territory a general, passing the estate of a noble, said to one of his aids:

"Captain Ivanovich, I wish you to remain here till you get further orders from me. Take half a dozen couriers from my escort, and whenever you see or hear of any movement of the enemy send me word immediately."

Captain Ivan Ivanovich left the aide, directed the commander of the escort to detail six men to attend him and, followed by them, rode into the grounds of the house, which was set upon an eminence and commanded a view of the surrounding country. Dismounting at the main entrance, he went up on to the porch and rapped loudly on the door with the hilt of his sword. An old man appeared, who seemed to be a major domo, and the captain said to him:

"I desire quarters here for awhile for myself and my men."

The old man invited him in, telling him that the family, on the appearance of foreign troops, had left the premises in his care and gone elsewhere.

The captain chose a room for himself on the second floor and quartered his men in the basement, for Ivan Ivanovich, being a noble himself and a refined man, felt disposed to treat the place as he would wish his father's estate far back in Russia to be treated if the fortunes of war should bring about its occupation by the enemy. Having thus taken possession of his quarters, he asked the major domo, Peter, if there was anything to eat in the house. Peter [illegible] but no one except himself [illegible]. But, since he had been a chef, he could get up a meal of such provisions as were in the house. The captain directed him to prepare breakfast for him and give the men such supplies as they needed.

Having refreshed himself, Captain Ivanovich went out on the porch, which extended entirely around the house, and made the circuit, now and again raising a pair of binoculars to examine rising smoke here, a flag there, a strong position on the crest of the hill—anything, in short, that might be of military importance. There was no flag in sight except the Russian imperial standard, and the captain, lowering his glasses, went back into the house. Being free to use the library, he took down a book and, being a student as well as a soldier, was soon lost in its contents.

The next morning it occurred to him that a cupola that topped the house would afford him a better view of the surroundings, and he started to go up there for the purpose. Finding the door leading from the second floor to the third locked, he called to Peter for the key.

"I haven't the key, excellency," said Peter. "When the family left the premises they placed articles valuable only to themselves, such as papers and heirlooms, on the floor above, locked the door and took the key with them."

Ivanovich could have forced the door; but, as has been said, he was a refined man, unfitted for the barbarous side of war, so he concluded to be content with the view he could get from the porch. Quite likely he was also influenced by the earnest look on Peter's face, which indicated anxiety that he should not intrude on the floor where the family heirlooms and archives had been stored.

One night while Ivanovich was lying awake he heard a sound without his room, in a large open space, through which ran a massive stairway. Soldiers in an enemy's country are naturally on the lookout for danger, and, taking his pistol from under his pillow, he got out of bed and walked noiselessly on his bare feet to the door, which was ajar, and peeped out. A surprising sight met his view.

Bright moonlight was streaming in through a large window at the head of the staircase and dimly illuminated what at first the captain conceived to be an angel. It was a female figure robed in white. It was standing as if to listen. The face was sufficiently lighted to indicate that it was that of a young girl. On second thought Ivanovich believed that the figure was one of flesh and blood wearing a nightgown and walking in sleep.

The figure presently started on, descended the staircase and disappeared in the darkness. Ivanovich, too honorable to follow, remained where he was, thinking that probably the girl would return. His anticipation was realized. She reappeared holding something in her hand, though the watcher could not see what it was. Ascending to the door opening on the third story, she passed in and closed it behind her. Ivanovich listened and heard a faint sound, like the grating of a bolt moving in a lock.

There was no doubt in the captain's mind that this girl was ensconced on the floor above and that Peter knew of her presence there. Who she was, whether any one else was with her, he knew not. He resolved to keep his own counsel, at least for awhile. It was evident that a woman was hiding on the floor above, and he did not conceive it to be his duty to disturb her. Indeed, he had already been sickened by the horrors of war and ready to shield any of its victims even among his country's foes.

But Captain Ivanovich thereafter kept his eyes and ears open. He walked around the house, looking up at the windows. The blinds were all closed, and there was not a sign of life to be seen. "After all," he said to himself, "I wonder if I could have dreamed it."

However, Ivanovich repudiated this idea. He had seen a figure robed in white descend the staircase, return and disappear through the door leading to the floor above. Of this he was certain, and the absence of any appearance of life there did not convince him that he was in error.

Soon after the appearance of the mysterious figure the captain's attention was diverted from its consideration by the appearance of a large force of the enemy to the southeast. He dispatched a courier to find the general, if possible, and later, hearing heavy firing and seeing columns of smoke in the same direction, he dispatched another courier with another message.

These matters having been attended to, the young captain's mind again reverted to the mystery of the third story. He said nothing to his men about the matter, fearing that if he did he would excite a desire on their part to investigate, whereas if there were any investigating to be done he preferred to do it himself. One day one of the troopers came to him and told him that he had better leave his quarters, for the man was sure the house was haunted. He had seen in the middle of the night a figure clad in white standing at an upper window. The superstitious Russian, having considered the third story vacant, naturally regarded the figure at the window as a wraith. Ivanovich told him that the figure he had seen must have been an illusion, but failed to convince him.

There was a hillside back of the house, covered by trees. Ivanovich went out there with his binoculars and remained a long while, watching what was going on. The distance was too great for him to gain much knowledge of any value, but he kept his watch till satisfied that it was useless, then turned and was emerging from the wood, when, casting an eye at a window on the third story of the house, he saw standing there a young girl looking at what he had been observing.

This time the sun was shining full in her face, and the captain saw not only that she was comely, but there was on her features that anxiety which is so touching in the young. Realizing that if she saw she was discovered it would add to her distress, he remained in concealment till she withdrew, closing the window.

That face, once seen by moonlight and again by sunlight, produced a vivid impression on Ivan Ivanovich. It floated before him during the day, and at night he saw the wraithlike figure descending the staircase. It was evident that a girl was hiding, and it was possible that there was some other cause for suffering than fear of an enemy. The location was German Poland, and Peter had told him that the residents of the house were Poles. But in wartime one is as likely to be plundered by friends as enemies.

One night Ivanovich heard quick footsteps overhead. Getting out of bed and putting on some of his clothing, he went out and listened at the door leading to the third story. He heard signs of something happening above. Then [illegible] and a woman—this time dressed in ordinary apparel—came out and met him face to face. She turned to go back, but Ivanovich said:

"You have nothing to fear from me. Tell me if there is anything I can do for you."

Having been thus given confidence, the girl revealed the mystery. When the Russians appeared in the region her mother, herself and her brother, aged seventeen, a wounded conscript in the German army, expecting to be murdered, retreated to the third story, leaving Peter to deceive, if possible, whoever might come. They had taken provisions with them and would have got on had it not been for the wounded boy, who was deprived of medical care.

The night she had appeared on the staircase she was going below for a bottle of medicine which a surgeon had left for the use of the invalid. On this her second appearance her brother was much worse, and she was trying to steal out with a view to getting medical advice as to what to do for him. She closed her explanation with pleading that Ivanovich should not make her brother a prisoner, for if deprived of her and her mother's tender care he would surely die.

The captain, having assured her that, though an enemy, he had a heart, went below and ordered one of his men to find a surgeon and bring him there at once. Then he went upstairs and found the mother and the wounded boy, whose fears he allayed. They were comfortable so far as their quarters were concerned, and he ordered Peter to bring them properly prepared food. A surgeon arrived in due time and treated the wounded boy, who began at once to improve.

A week passed after the unveiling of the mystery before Captain Ivanovich and his men were withdrawn from their quarters. During this week the young officer by his consideration for his captors secured the good will of the mother and the son and a more tender response from the girl. When he left her there was an interview between them, the result of which was known only to themselves, though there can be but little doubt that they referred to what might be when the war should be over and peace should return to take the place of one of those periodic returns to barbarism to which the world has thus far been subject.

Just Like a Comet.

A well known astronomer and mathematician was on his way home one evening after having spent an hour or two in an observatory looking through a telescope at a comet.

Directly opposite him in the car sat a man with a loud voice, whose misinformation concerning comets would have supplied the material for a library and who appeared to be talking for the benefit of the passengers. The astronomer listened patiently for a time, then he said in a low tone to the man sitting next to him:

"Our friend on the other side of the aisle reminds me somewhat of a comet himself."

"How so?"

"He is emptying his head to make a long tale."—Youth's Companion.

A Curious Toy.

In an East Indian museum there is to be seen a singular instrument, invented for the delectation of Tippoo Sahib in his palace at Mysore. It is in the form of an automaton tiger, life size, represented in the act of devouring a British soldier, who lies prostrate under its paws. Inside this automaton is a rude organ, turned by a handle, and emitting sounds in imitation of the growls of a tiger and the moans of the dying victim. At the taking of Seringapatam this curious object was found in Tippoo's palace along with other evidences of the horribly cruel nature of the conquered prince.

Close at Hand.

A woman from the south visiting New York for the first time was much agitated when, after being conveyed through the Hudson tube, she found herself in another subway. Rushing up to a knowing looking individual, she asked in an agitated tone:

"Sir, do please tell me where is New York!"

"Lady," said he, with the utmost gravity, "it's right at the top of those stairs."—Harper's Magazine.

Where He Stood.

"Are you in favor of the income tax?" asked the innocent bystander.

"In principle," replied the prominent citizen, "but with some modification. For example, I think the tax should be collected only on incomes that are larger than my own."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

ROOSEVELT STARTS ON HUNT

Former President Off For Canada; Big Receptions Planned.

DYSTER BAY, N. Y. — Colonel Roosevelt has turned his back on national and political issues and started for a month's hunting trip in Canada, where he will shoot moose and other game. The colonel went to New York in the morning and spent today there, putting in part of the time at the offices of the Metropolitan magazine. At 5:03 p. m. he took the train that is carrying him out of the United States for a whole month, going to Quebec, where he will make connections with a train Sunday afternoon that will bear him further away into northern Quebec. He will meet Dr. Alexander Lambert at a club where the doctor has been staying in the northern part of that province

It is understood that, owing to his outspoken advocacy of the allies' cause, the announcement that the expresident would be present at the Toronto fair has been widely advertised; also that the would be the guest of the Duke of Connaught.

STANDARD OIL GIVES EMPLOYES SHORT DAY

New 8-hour Schedule Affects 25,000 Workers.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Announcement of the adoption of an eight-hour day by the Standard Oil company of New Jersey was made here on behalf of the board of directors of that concern. Twenty-five thousand workers are said to be effected by the order, which will become effective Sept. 15.

The employes of the company have been working an average of ten hours a day.

"In accordance with the policies of this company to keep its wages and working conditions equal to, or in advance of, the wages and working conditions of other men doing a similar class of work, it has been decided to adopt the eight-hour day. This change will be made without loss to the men. As it will be necessary to make certain changes in the present methods of conducting the plants, the eight-hour day will become effective Sept. 15, and notices have been posted to that effect in the various works operated by this company."

FIVE CHILDREN DIE IN FIRE

Orphans Lose Lives in Frisco Home; Searching the Ruins.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL. — Fire destroyed the St. Francis Girls' Directory, a Catholic orphanage here, with the loss of five lives.

When fire was discovered the children were marshaled and marched out of the building by Sister Mary Agnes and Mother Superior Margaret. They were quartered in nearby homes, and it was believed that all had escaped.

First search of the ruins disclosed the body of Elizabeth O'Brien, four years old, and four others.

$1,000,000 TO CAUSE OF PEACE, FORD GIFT

Motor Manufacturer Will Set Aside Fund to Combat War.

DETROIT, MICH. — Henry Ford has set aside $1,000,000 to start an educational campaign for peace and against "preparedness," which he declares to be the cause of all wars, a special article in the Detroit Free Press will say tomorrow.

"This will be carried on in the United States and the other nations now at peace and when Europe regains its sanity the work will be carried to these nations," said Mr. Ford in announcing the fund.

The Ford peace plan involves the giving by Ford of a large cash prize for a history of war in the world "that shall not make demigods of soldiers and shall show war in all its horrors instead of glorifying the slaughter." The history, Ford stipulates, must be "a story that shall discourage war by telling of the great things of peace."

FEAR DAUGHTER IS DROWNED

Parents Read in Paper First Hints of Couple's Tragedy.

CADILLAC, MICH. — That Mr. and Mrs. F. W. McDonald, the latter a former Cadillac girl, were drowned while swimming near Burlington, Ia., seven weeks ago, is the fear of Mrs. McDonald's parents in this city. Friday the Cadillac papers published the contents of a [illegible] to Postmaster F. O. Gaffney [illegible] Joliet, Ill., giving the information that Mr. and Mrs. McDonald, of Joliet, had disappeared from their boarding house at Burlington. They had gone swimming one evening, the card stated, and nothing had been heard from them since.

The story of their disappearance in the local paper was the first news which Mrs. McDonald's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Sheler, had received They last heard from her June 25. She was formerly Miss Josephine Sheler, leaving here less than a year ago.

FAMOUS VETERAN DIES AT 83

Joehn Broad Was Known as "Man Killed at Fair Oaks, Va."

LANSING, MICH. — Mr. John Broad, 83 years old, pioneer resident of this city and known among his friends and civil war comrades as the man "who was kiled at Fair Oaks, Va., May 31, 1862," died at the home where he had lived for the past 50 years.

It was during service with Company G, Third Michigan Infantry, that Mr. Broad became known as the man "who was killed at Fair Oaks, Va." He was struck by a piece of shell during the engagement and remained unconscious for more than 24 hours, during which time he was officially pronounced dead.

TWO FALL FROM FREIGHTS

Detroit Men Have Legs Crushed in Two Accidents.

PACKSON, MICH. — Two men, both from Detroit, were seriously injured within a few minutes of each other and in the same manner, namely, by falling from moving freight trains.

Roy Archer, a lineman, walking over the tops of cars, fell between two cars and both legs were so badly crushed it was necessary to amputate a few inches below the hips. John Hughes fell from a train and suffered a fracture of the right leg below the knee. Both men were taken to the city hospital.

DURAND BRAKEMAN KILLED

Bridge Between Cars Crushes Man in Ionia Accident.

IONIA, MICH. — Carl Duryee, of Durand, 36, a freight brakeman, was killed at the Grand Trunk freight house. Duryee was standing between his train and a train on the siding watching the unloading. Heavy iron bridges are used between the cars. The engine backed and the big iron bridge was dashed from the cars on to him. He lived 10 minutes after the accident.

The body was sent to Durand where he has a wife.

COUNTY FAIR PROVES UNEXPECTED SUCCESS

Death, Runaways, Pickpockets, Appendicitis Thrill 25,000.

MARSHALL, MICH. — More than 25,000 people were at the Calhoun county fair on Wednesday, the big day.

Mrs. Clarence Drumm, of Sheridan township, narrowly escaped being killed when an automobile frightened a horse, causing it to run away on the grounds amid the crowd. She was hurled against a post with an infant in her arms and knocked unconscious. Physicians worked over her for some time before she regained consciousness.

Pickpockets had a great harvest. H. Hickman of Battle Creek, was touched for $27, and Fred Evans, of Battle Creek for $3. Several others lost various amounts.

John Evans, of Battle Creek, negro, well known in political circles dropped dead just before the fair opened. Heart trouble the coroner decided was the cause.

OUR BIG GALA DAY

In June the Tecumseh business men started in to put on a campaign for 13 weeks with the obect in view to advertize Tecumseh, to get people better acquainted with town and merchants besides giving a Wednesday program for the people consisting of various sports, vaudeville attractions, a ball game and band concerts.

They have put on each week special bargains and have tried to make this feature a strong one and they feel their efforts have been rewarded as many people have taken advantage of the sales.

Tecumseh has put on something novel and new and it has attracted much comment all over this part of the state and northern Ohio.

At a recent meeting of business men it was decided to give up one of the bargain days and make the last (the 12th) a big Gala day in Tecumseh planning for an Old Fashioned Sports day. Besides merchants are offering special inducements. This comes next Wednesday and there will be races, four bands, vaudeville performances, ball game, balloon ascension and in the evening a grand mask parade. Fun begins at 10 o'clock in the morning and lasts all day and part of the night. Everybody come and enjoy every minute

PRETTY AUTUMN WEDDING

Miss Grace Lowry and Glenn Kemp married Wednesday Afternoon

Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lowry the wedding of their daughter Grace M. and Glenn Kemp, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Ray Kemp was solemnized.

The front porch with its decoration of vines and flowers made a beautiful setting for the ceremony and a large arch of flowers was suspended over the bridal party.

The lawn was filled with the guests and at four o'clock the participants took their places. Rev. W. A. Rex performed the ceremony using the ring service, the bridesmaid being Miss Minnie Lowry a sister of the bride and the groomsman, Roger Anthony of Walkerville, Ont.

After congratulations the guests were ushered into the house where a 3-course wedding dinner awaited them. The tables were lovely with the many flowers. The party was served by Misses Luella and Nina Lowry, Kenneth and Harold Lowry and Forrest Kinney of Adrian.

The happy couple were the recipients of many presents including several goodly checks attesting the kindly regard in which they are held. They left for Detroit that evening, intending to take a boat trip to Buffalo and visit other points before returning.

Among the guests present were James Kennedy and wife of Holloway; Mr. and Mrs Ray Kemp, Orville Lamkin and family of Tipton; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Halladay of Clinton,

Upon the return of the young people they will reside in Franklin. Both have hosts of friends here Miss Lowry upon her graduating from the high school began as operator in the telephone exchange and by her prompt service and courtesy won the admiration of the subscribers Glenn attended school here and later clerked on the business street and was naturally around the village so he too is well known. The Herald joins the other friends in wishing them a long happy journey together and may the storms be few.

Mrs. C. A. Jackson and little son Grant were in Jackson Wednesday.

Miss Mary Watson returned to Jackson Wednesday night after a week's visit with her parents.

THE MISSES GRISWOLD HONORED

Honoring the Misses Gladys and Hattie Griswold the Epworth League gave an informal reception at the M. E. church Tuesday evening. The young ladies have been devoted attendants at the meetings of the League and the members very much regret to have them move away (They go to Milan soon)

After a great supper at 6:30 a program was given which was necessarily short so that some of those attending could go to the Chautauqua; Miss Lillian Kennedy sang, Rev Jennings gave a fine address in his jolly way and Miss Mary Tribolet the E. L president presented Miss Gladys with an E. L. pin and Miss Hattie with a toilet set. Thus ended a very pleasant affair and the girls leave Tecumseh with fond memories.

SIMPLICITY WINS OVER EXPENSE

Sometimes, as most Michigan horseowners know, a simple liniment may cure an external ill, whereas an expensive treatment may fail. For instance, James Miller of Pottstown, Pa., cured a horse of pollevil with three bottles of Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh. He says: "The veterinarians had been trying to cure the horse for seven years"

Wednesday, Sept. 15th,

We will wind up in a grand Gala Day the Wednesday enterteinments we have been having during the summer.

All winter, however,

WEDNESDAY

will continue to be

A Special Bargain Day

IN TECUMSEH

and most of the merchants will continue to offer Special Prices each Wednesday.

We wish to thank you all for your attendance during our summer entertainments and hope you will all be with us next Wednesday, September 15. Stay all day and help make this Great Gala Day "The Best Ever."
